Ronny couldn't believe his ears. With a wildly thrashing heart he told her he'd be glad to go—tame words. He'd get his car and be around front in a jiffy. It was a good way. They were silent for the most part, she driving him, now and then, how to reach the house. At the last they had to leave the car and climb a steep hill, and there in a clearing, Ronny opened his eyes in wonder and admiration. A dress house, if ever there was one. A broad white, rambling house, with a green slanting slate roof and wide, deep, green shuttered windows. The walks, the lawns, the shrubbery—everything was perfect.

"Speaking of sin—" Ronny breathed.

"You like it?" the girl whispered. "It's just finished today and it breaks my heart to see it sold," she added.

Ronny looked at her. There were tears in the gray-green eyes.

"You see, I did it, and—"

"You did what?" Ronny broke in suddenly.

"Why, built the house, drew the plans, superintended everything. It's got my heart in it. I'll—I'll never build another one." There was a little sob in her voice.

Ronny was confused, speechless. To him it was incredible.

"Now,—somebody's going to buy it and live in it. You don't know how it makes me feel," she continued.

Ronny stood looking at her, silent. Suddenly he felt a great need of this girl that could build a house like this. There was pain and joy built in every wall of that house. Ronny knew, because it went into his work too. Quite unexpectedly to them both, he put out his arm and drew her up against his rough tweed coat.

"I'll buy the house, I'll be our home," he gulped in a choky voice.

"Oh," Nina breathed softly.

Something in her nearness made him aware of an unbelievable fact

His arm tightened about her.

"You're been so indifferent — I never guessed." He was awkward with words.

"I know, from the first. I've had to be careful. I had my career, and—", she raised her flushed face to his. "Love—interferes—terribly. Then I wanted to get this done," she added, ruefully.

He swept her up against him, close. "What about your career now? Women weren't made for careers," he argued sagely, kissing her.

It seemed right, as if she had known it was coming. She laughed confusedly.

"They are—until love comes along. If you hadn't wanted me, I should have gone on planning, terminals, or hotels or something—I could never have built another house. Too much goes in it." With a little sob she pressed close to his tweed coat of her own accord. His arm held her there.

Mannequins at Style Show Wear Latest Modes in Fashion World

Brilliantly staged, the fifth annual Kiwanis Karnival Style Show, the society-sealed event of the fall season, opened last evening in the Armouries with the presentation of fascinating modes from Kroch Bros. An outstanding collection of garments afternoon, sports and evening dresses hats and coats from this store which was supplemented by fur shapes and fur wraps from Delaney's, held the attention of the audience and more than one woman in the crowd was frankly envious of the beautiful creations displayed.

Pale yellow, with the Kiwanis blue and white, was used in the decoration of the stage, and formed the dainty curtain. The fashions were modelled by six mannequins from Toronto, Misses Louise Burns, Dorothy Mitchell, Billie Brown, Eleanor Watson, Merla Watson, Lillian Petrie.

FASHION FEATURES

The feature of the dress shown was the elevation of the princess silhouettes, more noticeable in the evening frocks. Skirts are still a little longer than those of the previous season, and the evening dresses are very long. black brown and green are the predominating colours with a flash of white and red tones for variety and the same colours are best for the coats. Elaborate fur trimmings, in scarfs, cuffs that come away up past the elbow and fur panels on the skirt are the predominating style ideas for wraps, as shown by Kroch's. The furs shown on coats are, lynx, moleir, squirrel muskrat, and wolf in black, platinum and natural shades. Fabrics for evening hesitate between the dull and shiny surfaced materials with the latter gaining in importance as the day grows long. The evening dresses emphasized the introduction of satins and panne velvet, while afternoon frocks favoured the gayer prints, and fine crepes. For sports the smart little models of tweedy materials caught everyone's eye.

AFTERNOON FROCKS

So satisfying were all the styles that it is a difficult problem to pick out the most striking. In the afternoon dresses there was an unusual model in forest green georgette with eggshell satin blouse, and an Oriental belt in colourful embroidered effect that gave a glittering note to the dull shade of the gown.

A black georgette model had frills over the hips, and a narrow bolero of transparent velvet that ended in a saucy frill. A V shaped collar of fine lace and tight cuffs of lace were other interesting details. Another unusual creation in black was a sport model which had green crepe blouse, but the fascinating thing about the frock was its jacket of fur! Black galyak was used for the jacket which had narrow lapels faced with black crepe to match the skirt.

Manilla brown georgette made an interesting dress that had trimmings of velvet, cleverly designed to imitate fur. A black chiffon dress, in flattery style had a fingertip length jacket of transparent velvet that appeared a narrow scarf of white rabbit. Rubystone red, a rich shade, was shown to advantage in a suit, that had a sleeveless blouse of pale ecru lace.

Surprising things were done with the collars of dresses shown. One brown chiffon model had a collar that began in the front as a demure berthe, edged with transparent velvet outlined with gold thread and ended in a cape that parted in the back to show a pretty scalloped effect. Frills were used with a lavish hand by Dame Fashion in the dresses displayed. A black crepe Roma afternoon model had a frill about the hip-line, a frilled jacket, and blouse of shell-pink georgette. A sport dress of tweed patterning crepe was in blue and white checked effect and had a pocket outlined with beads.

THE COATS

The new length in coats, which completely hid the dresses in most instances, and the popularity of black and brown shades were demonstrated in the lovely wraps in Kroch collection. The coat was of black ripple sheen, with huge collar and deep cuffs of soft platinum wolf. Another was of brown broadcloth with deep lapels of Jeannette fur. Monotone tweed made a smart little sport coat in brown, with bolero effect on the back and upstanding collar of muskrat. Silvertone, a fabric that promises to be very popular, was used in a green coat with silver fox collar and cuffs.

THE EVENING MODE

The evening dresses were really charming. Georgette in palest green fashioned a youthful dress that had inserts of pale green lace and interesting neckline.

Shimmering black panne velvet in Princess effects made a striking gown whose only ornament was that of brilliants. Perhaps the handsomest of the evening wear shown was an ensemble of eggshell satin, in long sweeping lines, with bloused wrap of red, lined with eggshell satin, and finished with a collar of white fur.

HATS BY KROCH

The hats worn with the dresses were from Kroch Bros. and were captivating little models in felt, soleil, and velvet.

FURS FROM DELANEY

Luxurious fur scarfs worn with the frocks included white, silver, brown, red fox, as well as stone marten in one, two and three-skin effects. The fur coats, too, were from Delaney's and were the latest creations in fur garments. Coats shown were French seal with Kolinsky, the latter forming flares set in to the bottom of the skirt; a sport coat of raccoon; a model of caracul paw, trimmed with robin squirrel: No. 1 French black caracul; American broadtail trimmed with beaver; and dark water mink were others of the furs shown, while for the finale one of the mannequins wore a sumptuous wrap of white rabbit with Belgian hare collar.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By Helen Follett

Some of the sillies whose brains don't function any too actively, are forever beseeching beauty writers to tell them of some magic lotion that will put glimmers in the eyes. That practice is dangerous business, and is not to be recommended. Bright eyes are cultivated through robust health and animal ion. She of the quick wit and the jolly line of gab never suffers from orbs that show a dull finish. They generate their own lighting flashes, however.

The shower is the ideal bath. Practically all men prefer it to the tub, but women have been slow to take to it, be cause of the chance of demolishing the marcel or the water wave. A bathing cap serves as a protection to the coiffure. The change from warm water to cold is a final clean pick-up treatment when nerves are tired and the day has been a trying one.

What causes an excessively oily skin? Sometimes a faulty diet one from which fats should be partially deleted. Again the source may be in an excitable nervous system which can be improved by mental training and hygienic living. At any rate, the little oil geysers in the skin are making themselves obnoxious by over activity. Local treatment consists of bathing the face with warm water and oatmeal sprinkled on the wash cloth, the cleansing to be followed by applications of witch hazel.

With fell hats off the Summer dress schedule many of the passengers on the beauty wagon have noticed that their oily locks have reformed. Hair needs air. Blanketing it with heavy lids stimulated the oily glands.

Time now to start fighting freckles that have put yellow polka dots upon the arms. Every other night—those in between the nameless—rub the skin surface with a cut lemon. Guard against exposure. Freckles, unless permanent, can be bleached away, but the sun makes new ones.

Correct Manners

CORRECT SIGNATURES

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How should a parent sign a report card or a note of excuse?

2. Should the tissue paper be removed from all invitations before sending them?

3. Should one always thank the hostess on leaving a tea, and if there is a guest in whose honor the tea is given, should one say, on leaving, that one is pleased to have met her?

4. Is this the correct way of writing on a lunch: this card or should it be on pages like the first?

Just Eighteen.

1. If the father is signing the report card or the note of excuse, he simply signs his name as he is accustomed to use it:

For the report card:

Henry Fullerton.

Yours very truly

Henry Fullerton.

For the excuse:

Yours very truly

Henry Fullerton.

2. If the mother signs the card she writes Mary Fullerton. If she thinks that it is necessary for her to indicate her formal married name (as it would be if she is not well known at the school, or if her formal name is not on the card somewhere as the parent) then she writes:

(Mrs. Henry Fullerton)

Mary Deal Fullerton

When she signs the note of excuse, she should sign it:

Yours very truly,

Mary Deal Fullerton.

(Mrs. Henry Fullerton)

If she knows the one to whom she is writing the note, either principal or teacher, she would probably wish to discard the formal "Yours very truly" and use instead the friendlier-toned "Sincerely yours."

Warning—It is incorrect, and is a sure indication of poor breeding for a woman to sign such a note thus:

"Yours very truly.

"Mrs. Henry Fullerton."

3—Yes, if the engraving is dry. And it takes about a week for the engraving to dry, after the invitations have been finished.

3—Yes, we should always thank our hostess for her hospitality. When we get ready to go—even before we have put on our wrap—we go to the hostess shake hands with her and say something like this: "Goodbye, Mrs. Davidson. Thank you so much for a most happy afternoon. It was delightful to see you again, and to meet your charming friends." And we say goodbye to the guest of honor, and tell her that "It was a great pleasure to meet you, Miss Adams and I hope that we shall meet again soon." Or you may say, "I am so glad to have met you, Miss Adams. Goodbye." Either of these, or "I am happy to have met you," is a bit easier to say, I think, than the form, "I am very pleased to have met you." It is difficult to make this latter statement sound "cosmopolitan."

4—Yes.

"Mrs. Beechman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

STREET DANCE OPENED ROADS

Street Carnival Held Under Auspices Madoc Community Club

MADOC, Sept. 11.—By Mail—Madoc's citizens celebrated the opening of the newly paved roads on Wednesday evening by a Street Carnival and dance under the auspices of the Madoc Community Club. Gay bunting, many flags, and brilliant lines of electric lights made a very gay scene, which was augmented by the rows of decorated booths, in which were displayed games of chance with their wonderful prizes of beautifully dressed dolls, bright-colored blankets, canes, bath towels, etc., and in two of which were served in continuous course of hot-dogs, meat pies, sandwiches, pie, cake, ice cream, cider, and soft drinks of all descriptions.

Little Billy Mawhorne acted as a very imposing bandmaster as the band swung into a march and paraded the streets and then dancing by old and young was indulged in in the roped off spaces of the streets, which were specially prepared with tale to suit the occasion.

Representatives of the County Council were present, and were entertained by the Reeve, Mr. Walter Wyrwick. The closing strains of the National Anthem were played about two a.m.

Prince Edward Island Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 15 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me, to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety percent of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

MORE SPACE FOR FALL URGED BY COLLINS

Department Stores Must Advertise More to Keep Up Sales Volume, Macy Executive Declares — Sees Good Prospects.

Department stores should use more, not less, advertising this fall to keep up their sales volume, according to Kenneth Collins, executive vice-president of R. H. Macy and Co., Inc., New York, whose views appear in the August bulletin of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. Mr. Collins is chairman of the sales promotion division of this association

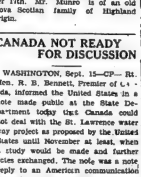
If increased expenditures for advertising result in a slightly higher percentage to sales volume, he said, it is entirely justified by present conditions. His article state:

"Because of poor business conditions during the past few months, hundreds of stores are radically changing their sales promotion activities. There are more sales today, there is less institutional advertising, there is, in many cases, a complete abandonment of price lines, and there is an unfortunate tendency to palm off a lot of inferior merchandise under the guise of lower wholesale prices.

"It seems to me that no one of these attitudes is really justified—except perhaps the necessity for more sales when justified by market conditions.

"In very many lines, as we all know, there has been no marked reduction in wholesale price levels. And in those most affected, such as textiles, there is every indication that the prices must be about at the bottom now and that since most wholesale stocks are being rapidly liquidated, there will be some strengthening prices early in the fall.

"With this in mind, it seems futile to abandon the methods of the past few years when most stores have been building reputations for the future rather than spending all their energies in building sales volume for tomorrow.



"In 1920 when conditions were far worse than at the present time, when commodity prices were lower and there were far greater stocks of merchandise on hand—business recovered rather rapidly. There is no reason to suppose that we are not passing through a far more favorable period than that.

"Panicky methods in various stores, therefore, appear to me to be quite unjustified by the facts. Nevertheless, I do strongly urge stores to do what they can to keep up volume. Rather than curtail advertising, I feel that advertising should be more extensive this fall.

"All our plans have been laid on the expectation of bigger business in the year 1930 than in the year 1929. Fixture costs, costs of merchandise, delivery, and various other items of operating expense cannot be greatly curtailed. It is imperative, therefore, to keep sales up. And if a slightly higher percentage of advertising to sales has to be spent, it is, in my opinion, entirely justified."

Mr. Collins is at present spending a vacation in Europe. He will return in September.

Tariff Changes Meet Endorsation From Local Business Men

Shamrock Disabled in Third Race When Main Sail Comes Down

Express Satisfaction Over Tariff Change Announced by Premier

Belleville Business Men See Stabilization and Encouragement

WHAT THEY SAY

Revival of Dairy Industry Industry and Work for Idle are Seen

General satisfaction even jubilation with the measure of protection introduced into the House of Commons on Tuesday afternoon was expressed by Belleville business men today.

Mr. Howard Clarke, manager of the Citizens' Dairy expressed the view that this was what was required to build up the dairy industry. "I was hoping that some such measure would be brought in," he said. "The budget, which the Hon. Charles Dunning introduced was not sufficient to keep outside butter out of the country. There is now no question but that the farmers will take a little heart in the production of milk and cream. The day of the farmer will come back into his own."

Mr. Clarke did not see an immediate rise in price for butter for Canada has a stock of fifteen millions of butter on hand greater than at this time last year. "There may be a slight rise," he added.

Built up Herds

Speaking of the local situation, the dairy manager said that from the consumers' standpoint he could state that the price of milk would not go up in Belleville during the coming winter. "But I would say to farmers 'Go ahead and buy cows, build up your herds, and in the long run get better prices.' Farmers have been very discouraged during the past year I would strongly advise them to bring up their herds.

Competition Enough

"There will be competition in Canada. Western Canada will go back to dairying. They will supply the demand for butter that New Zealand has been satisfying.

Calling it one of the best strokes of business for the country, Mr. Clarke said "If we can pay the farmer more for butter-fat, he will be encouraged to get busy and feed this enormous, for a winter supply of milk. Personally I think it one of the happiest tariff changes in many years."

Mr. Clarke was speaking over the long distance telephone with a dairy broker in Toronto today and from him learned that there was no trading of any account in Toronto today, everybody waiting. This broker told him that he expected that there would be rise of two or three cents a pound on butter when the business came to digest the probable effect of the tariff changes.

Buy From Old Country

This man says that as there is a difference of about eight weeks between an order and its delivery from New Zealand, he expects that the changes will be too great with the fluctuations which are possible for trade with New Zealand. He looks for Old Country prices to govern for products can be laid down here in two weeks from the Old Land. The butter Canada would get from the Old Country would probably be New Zealand butter shipped to London in consignments on Danish butted. This importation would be to satisfy any unsatisfied demand from Canada, for Canada imported last year millions of pounds of butter.

"Don't think that Canadian farmers can ultimately produce enough butter to satisfy the market" Mr. Clarke was asked. His reply was "Yes, but it will take from three to five years to build up the herds to what they ought to be."

Textiles

"The tariff will greatly improve business", commented Mr. W. B. Deacon of the Deacon Shirt Company." It will be the means of utilizing more of our own raw materials." He went on to remark that the shirt industry

SUMMER COTTAGE IS BURNED DOWN

Hunting and Fishing Equipment also Lost by Mark Sprague

A frame summer cottage owned by Mark Sprague, 173 William Street, situated on Grape Island in the Bay of Quinte, was burned to the ground in a fire of unknown origin last night or early this morning. Nothing remains of the building. It was nicely furnished and was occupied by Mr. Sprague and his family each summer. A quantity of hunting apparatus including 'decoys, rifles, were destroyed. Mr. Sprague was at the cottage on Monday preparing for the opening of the hunting season. It was reported remodelled by the owner only a few years ago. The loss will be partly covered by insurance.

George Fordyce is Slightly Injured

George Fordyce, manager of the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada and Hugh Atchison, another employee of the store received severe cuts and bruises in an auto accident on the Trent Road six miles east of the city last night. Mr. Fordyce was injured about the head while Atchison was shaken up. The accident occurred when a car driven by Harold Mason struck another owned and driven by Miss Ina Flindall. The local staff of Lobaw's were returning from Trenton where they had been taking stock. When Miss Flindall stopped Mr. Mason who was directly behind, turned out to pass and on the slippery roads his car slued into the rear of the other. Both cars were severely damaged. Mr. Fordyce was hurt when the glass shattered. Harold Mason, driver and Misses Blakely and Sweezy two other members of the staff were practically unhurt. The cars were towed to the city for repairs All were somewhat recovered this afternoon from the shock.

Nearly $2,000,000 will be spent on new irrigation projects in Natal and the Transvaal, Africa.

Operating Permit, Car Licence are Cancelled, Driver Goes to Jail

Appearing for the second time this year on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated, Michael Callaghan, after pleading guilty was sentenced by Magistrate Mikel to one month in the common jail. His driving permit and motor licence were ordered cancelled by the court for a period of one year, while his liquor permit was also lifted for the same period of time. His first offence under the Liquor Control Act was in April of this year and at that time he spent ten days in the county jail.

Receiving information that an accident had taken place near the Ontario School for the Deaf, last night about eight thirty, Traffic Officer W. O. Frink and Sergt. Booth hurried to the scene and found two cars in a collision with Callaghan sitting in his car allegedly intoxicated. It is understood Callaghan parked his car on the highway without pulling to the shoulder of the road, leaving it in this dangerous position without lights. Douglas Ellis, driving a car owned by Mrs. Leach, was proceeding eastward passing a car going west near the parked car, did not see the car on account of the heavy lights and piled into the rear of the Callaghan car, causing considerable damage to the front of the Packard sedan. Callaghan was arrested and brought to the police station.

"King Tut" Wheat Flourishes in Western Canada

When the Earl of Carnarvon and Howard Carter opened the tomb of Tutankhamen at Luxor, Egypt, in 1922, they found a number of jars of food and among them was wheat. This food and wheat was to serve the King in the next world, and was estimated to be 3,000 years old. In 1926 a young farmer in Western Canada received a few of the kernels of wheat from a friend and after growing a little of it he passed some seed on to Mr. Berry and let it grow to maturity. "King Tut" wheat is vastly different from that it has twelve distinct, heavily bearded heads to each stalk instead of one, and each contains about 10 kernels. Above is a picture of Mr. and Mrs. Berry in their garden at Robson, B.C., where they are growing the wheat, while on the right is a picture showing the comparison between the King Tut wheat and the wheat we grow in Canada.

8th Prince of Wales School Fair Success

Judges Had Busy Time Today With Exhibits and Races

MARK FULL DAY

140 Pupils Entered Exhibits For This Year's Fair

The 8th annual successive Prince of Wales School fair was held today and promises to be the most successful exhibition that the pupils have ever put on. "This is the largest fair we have had in the last three years." E. M. Bird, the principal said.

Judging was going on this morning and the basement of the school was crowded with the children's efforts in all lines. Livestock, fancy work, cooking, vegetables, flowers, painting and drawing collection of stamps and coins all were entered to make up a splendid fair.

The judges included Charles Dolan, who judged the poultry and cats, T. W. Bamford, judging the vegetables and Mrs. E. Osborne and Mrs. G. Hutton judged the domestic science exhibits such as cooking and fancy work.

This afternoon a splendid program of races has been arranged in which all the children will participate. To-night in the school building a concert will be given by the kiddies.

There are about one hundred and forty pupils who have entered an exhibit of one kind or another in the fair Particularly pleasing is the exhibit of livestock. Some fine calves are being shown outside.

In May there were only 5,646 ablebodied men in receipt of poor relief in the whole of London.

Shamrock Fifth Meets Mishap Early in Race

Mainsail Comes up Halyard Is Carried Away

HAD GOOD START

Enterprise Comes About and Then Returns to Course

Newport, Sept. 17—The official decision as to whether the Enterprise will be declared the winner of today's race for the America's Cup is in the hands of the racing committee alone, Capt E. P. Theron, harbor master of the port of Newport and the only nautical expert left ashore, said today.

The third race of the series for the America's cup today ended disastrously for Shamrock Fifth, the British challenger, three quarters of an hour after the start.

Footing it along on even terms with the Enterprise, the defender, Shamrock, lost her main sail, which billowed down, half on her deck and half in the water. She immediately headed away and came about. It appeared that a halyard which holds the big wing to the mast head had carried away.

Glasgow is banning all street collections after the end of this year.

NO DISCRIMINATION AGAINST ANY COUNTRY.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 17.—CP — Discrimination against any country is lacking in the Bennett tariff announcements as made yesterday, say political observers in the capital. The rates when increased run right across the board in all three schedules of rates, the general tariff, applicable to most countries in the world, the intermediate tariff, applicable to countries with which Canada has trade treaties and the British preferential tariff applicable to Great Britain and certain British Dominions.

Officials say it was formulated first with the idea of helping Canadian industry.

WAY IS OPEN FOR STATES TO CONFER.

GENEVA, Sept 17—(CP)—The Assembly of the League of Nations today left an open path for United States to confer and collaborate with the Geneva body on a plan for a federation of European states such as originally suggested by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister.

KING TO DEBATE

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 17—CP—Debate on the tariff changes proposed by the Bennett Government will begin today in the House of Commons. Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader will be the first speaker from the Opposition.

On the first item on today's agenda is the third reading of the government bill to amend the provisions of the Customs Act affecting dumping regulations. This bill was advanced one stage yesterday after the government, by a margin of 54 votes turned down an amendment sponsored by Mr. King. The bill, which is the result of the committee of ways and means to study the tariff changes. There will be no other legislation laid before the House this session, Mr. Bennett said last night.

Nearly 12 percent of the industrial workers in Switzerland as now engaged in watch and jewelry making.

STATES INTERESTED IN NEW TARIFF

New York, Sept. 17 (CP)—Canadian tariff action has aroused extraordinary interest here. The newspapers devoted columns to detailed reports of changes in the customs duties. The only comment available came from Washington where Premier Bennett's tariff was regarded as retaliation against increased duties on Canadian exports adopted at the last session of Congress.

France will appropriate $432,000 to a French Paris-Orleans railway for hydro-electric work.

Stove Pipes Innocent Cause of Quarrel Two Housewives Look Into Police Court

An altercation over some stove pipes brought two housewives into police court today. Each was charged by the other of assault but B. C. Donnan expressed the view to the bench, that the damage done was nil and that all parties could be satisfied by binding them over to keep the peace. This was satisfactory to the complainants and the bonds were duly signed. One of the parties involved stated the other woman was using an axe in self defense and in order to ensure the safety of children about the house the husband of one party charged, advised in taking the weapon away. The husband now also bound over to keep the peace and the domestic quarrel was ended. The magistrate admonished the parties interested to live in peace and harmony as they were leaving the court.

Work for Jobless is Aim of New Tariff Bennett Tells House

Features of Budget Introduced in House on Tuesday Afternoon

170 CHANGES

Consumer Will be Protected Against Manufacturers by Law

OTTAWA, Sept. 17. — Canada has taken rapid, decisive strides toward lining the lengthening queue of nations which under the leadership of the United States, now seek admission to the stamping ground of permanent prosperity behind towering tariff walls.

Premier Bennett's budget of Tuesday afternoon appears to effect the most drastic tariff increases that the Dominion has received from any government since the days of Sir John A. Macdonald. Nor is this all. The Prime Minister promises—and even his worst enemies are beginning to pay him grudging honor as a man of his word—a further general increase next year when Parliament gathers for its main session.

Manufacturers of textiles, iron and steel products and electrical apparatus, horticultural implements, dairymen and meat producers and the growers of the world's greatest fruits will hence forth work under a greater protection than they have had for years. As Mr. Bennett laid his new schedules on the table of the House of Commons, import duties were jolted up against all foreign competitors and those other parts of the Empire as well.

Duties are increased on about 170 tariff items and on 70 odd of these items there is a rise in the duties on the produce of Great Britain and other British preference countries. The preference however, does not disappear. In nearly all cases, proportionate or great er rise in the tariff against foreign countries accompanies the increase against British goods.

Specific and Ad Valorem Duties

British as well as foreign textiles are subjected, under the new tariff, to the appliction of specific as well as ad valorem duties. On at least 16 items is this principle applied. How this works may be instanced by the item dealing with woollen clothing. The former rates on this item were: British preference, 27 1-2 per cent.; intermediate, 35 per cent., and general, 75 per cent. Under the new tariff, the rates are: British preference, 30 per cent. and 33 cents per pound; intermediate, 40 per cent., and 33 1-3 cents per pound; general, 40 per cent. and 33 cents per pound.

In dealing with these as with other rates, it must be remembered of course that where the duty on a British import is more than 15 per cent. whole-

PRESENTATION OF SILVER

An interesting event took place yesterday afternoon at the Canadian National Shops, when Mr. Burrows Jordan, was presented with a beautiful silver tea service and tray by Office and Shop employees of the C. N. R. Belleville to enter the Scotch Doubles The presentation was made by Mr. L. Walsh, who gave a short address speaking of the popularity of Mr. Jordan and expressing on behalf of his fellow employees best wishes for his happiness. Mr. Jordan made a fitting reply thanking his friends for their thoughtfulness.

BRIDGE QUESTION

Tonight a special meeting of the City Council will be held to consider the tenders called for in connection with the construction of the new upper bridge, which the council at a recent meeting decided to build, in view of the report on the condition of the bridge received from W. Core of Core Nasmith and Storrie, consulting engineers of Toronto, who were asked to make an independent report. The tenders close this afternoon at five o'clock and information has been received, that up till the present, only one tender has been sent in to the City Clerk. It is expected however, that a number more will be placed in the hands of the City Clerk before closing time for the tenders. It is almost certain, that the City Council will accept one of the tenders tonight at their meeting, and that the construction of the bridge will be proceeded with immediately. If no delays are caused, it is more than likely that the bridge will be opened for traffic this fall.

ANNUAL MOHAWK FAIR

A number from Belleville attended the annual Mohawk Exhibition at the Council House on the Reserve this afternoon. A special program of horse races and ball games had been arranged for the affair which always has a special significance for the members of the tribe. A number of visitors came from distant points for the Exhibition. The exhibits were especially attractive this year.

She has been a resident of the Island for the past seventeen years and her first holiday in that time has been spent in Belleville this year. She is interested in one of the leading business colleges of Bermuda.

BID MEMBERS FAREWELL

A pleasant time was spent last night at the home of Mrs. Latta, Yeomans Street, when the Alert Ladies' Bible Class of Holloway Street United Church gathered to bid farewell to Mrs. Matthews, one of the members of the class who is about to leave for England where she will make her future home. Mrs. Matthews was presented with a beautiful leather club bag by Mrs. Reddick, president on behalf of the class. Mrs. Matthews replied to the presentation expressing her sincere regrets at having to leave Belleville and Holloway Street Church. The evening was devoted to various forms of entertainment after which lunch was served. Mrs. Matthews will sail for her former home on October 4th.

ST. LOUIS HEAD NATIONAL LOOP

Brooklyn's Ten Game Winning Streak Broken by Cardinals

Brooklyn, Sept. 17—The St. Louis Cardinals beat the Brooklyn Robins, 10 to 9, in a titanic 10-innings struggle yesterday, breaking Brooklyn's 11-game winning streak and taking the National League lead by the margin of one percentage point. A crowd of 28,000—the biggest of the season at Ebbets Field, witnessed the game, and most of them left the park limp and exhausted after sitting through more action than has been packed into a big league baseball game in years.

Through nine innings, Dazzy Vance Brooklyn ace, and "Wild Bill" Hallahan, St. Louis southpaw, the latter with a smashed finger on his gloved hand, were deadlocked in a thrilling pitching duel.

Victory came to the Cardinals in the tenth inning, after they had been handcuffed by Vance on every previous opportunity they had to score. Little Andy High batted for Gelbert to start the tenth and drove a double to right field. With two strikes on him Hallahan sacrificed, High moving to third. Taylor Douthit drove High home with what proved to be the winning run of the game, a slashing single over Bissonette's head.

The Cardinals had won the game, as it turned out, but they had to save it in the tenth. Glen Wright, first up for Brooklyn, drove a long double to left centre which, almost looped into the climax seats for a home run. Bissonette worked Hallahan for a walk. Then Hendrick sacrificed with a bunt down the third base line, moving Wright to third and Bissonette to second.

The stage was now all set for Brooklyn to win the game, with men on third and second, and only one out. Jake Flowers, a dangerous hitter was sent in to bat for Finn. Hallahan elected to pass Flowers filling the bases. Then Lopez came up. The crowd went wild ,throwing newspapers programs and other debris in to the field. Lopez lashed a line toward Adams, who had moved over to short in place of Gelbert. The ball took one bound and Adams fielded it near second base. He lurched to the east, as wright was racing home with the tying run and Bissonnette was tearing for third and the winning run. Many ball players would have given up but Adams didn't. He finally got hold of the ball, tossed it to Frisch to cover Flowers. Then Frisch whipped the ball to Bottomley with a rifle-like throw to nip Lopez by a step and complete a double play which ended the game.

ATHLETICS WON DOUBLE-HEADER

Chicago, Sept. 17—The Philadelphia Athletics continued their march toward the American League championship by taking both ends of a double header from the White Sox yesterday 8 to 4 and 10 to 2.

Braxton, pitching for the Sox in the nightcap, held the Athletics to a lone single for the first five innings. He got the first man in the sixth and then folded up. Four straight singles and a triple by Poax counting four runs and brought Ed Walsh to the mound. Miller welcomed him with a double, scoring Poax with the fifth and final run of the frame.

Bill Shores pitched a steady game for the Athletics, allowing ten hits but bearing down in the pinches.

HOW TO CONTROL OPEN AND SHUT FACES

By H. B. Martin

We hear a great deal about pronation and the open and shut face. It is Greek to most golfers but to those who understand it there is a lesson involved. The open face comes around to the ball with the intent of meeting it squarely. If the wrists are late in turning the ball flies off to the left. If the turn is too soon the ball goes to the right so the timing must be deadly accurate.

When we shut the face of the club it permits us to play to the right with plenty of freedom knowing that the face of the club will bring the ball back into line and provide at the same time a hook.

This shut is easy to control as the club can be held in this position without any thought of turning at the moment of the impact.

Quinte Schools May Form Group

Representatives from the Collegiate Institutes and High Schools of Bay of Quinte district gathered in the Belleville Collegiate this afternoon to discuss the feasibility of forming a Central Ontario Secondary Schools' Association similar to the Wooss in Western Ontario and Rossa in Eastern Ontario. The Association will not only govern all forms of athletic but debates and oratorical contests will be sponsored creating a better competitive spirit in all branches between the schools. Picton, Belleville, Napanee, Trenton, Madoc, Tweed and Stirling schools had delegates here today and all endorsed the proposal.

The Central Ontario District would be divided into three areas with Belleville, Peterboro and Oshawa the meeting place for the delegates. Toronto and Hamilton have districts of their own while Niagara is also a separate group. The winners of the different associations will play a two school contest meet in a championship series which naturally is a stimulater toward better competition. On the outcome of the meeting here depends whether the Bay of Quinte will become affiliated with the movement.

Elaine — And Her Ideas From Paris

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING BY LUCILLE

Dear Readers:

Those who were captivated with the becoming little suits that were featured in the Spring Fashions will welcome their presence in the list of what is stylish for Fall. These spring suits ran to lighter shades and those for Autumn are darker, in keeping with the season.

Knitted fabrics and jersey still lead in the materials for suits that can be worn as dresses. Their light weight makes them handy for wear under a cloth or fur coat, and their price is so reasonable that one cannot well resist them. A contrasting sweater, sleeveless, or some have sleeves for winter wear, usually has a modernistic design in different shades by way of trimming.

When you get tired of the sweater you can take to blouses, and this winter's fashions are very smart. There are blouses that tuck in, blouses that can be worn over the skirt, and dainty little affairs that are known as blousettes, and are little more than glorified vesters. A suit with these accessories would be very serviceable for business wear this season.

New York houses are showing the tweed suit for fall wear. This has a long coat and is in tailored fashion. Fur collars are worn with most of the tweed suits shown but those who are fortunate enough to have a fur scarf will choose a suit without the fur collar.

The tweeds are colourful this year and present many patterns and designs from which to choose. In tweeds as in most fabrics for fall, the Rivers lead, but some pretty effects are achieved in tweeds of green, or blue colorings.

In place of the fur, or plain collar, some suits have a jaunty scarf, that is thrown back over the shoulder. If your suit is severe and you want to introduce a gayer note in your costume choose a bright scarf, and wear it in stock fashion.

Have the color repeated in the edge of a handkerchief showing in a pocket, or from the flap of your purse.

Silk and or rather silk sleeveless dresses with matching jackets are to be worn this winter, too. I saw a pretty one the other day in very dark brown canton crepe, of heavy weave. The dress was plain in design ending in a slightly flared skirt. The jacket was of the same material as the frock, and the only trimming was a narrow scarf tie of beige silk that formed a loose knot at the neck. With brown suede pumps, beige chiffon hose, and a brown or beige hat would this frock make a smart fall costume?

Fashionably yours,

Lucille.

Bracelets

—THE CHARM OF THE ARM—

The secret is out at last, for this coming season the popularity of the bracelet has returned a hundred-fold and the wider they are the better.

It's the truth the bracelet is bigger, and better than ever.

Bridge Street W. M. S. Resumes

The first meeting of the Bridge St. W. M. S. after the summer vacation, was held on Friday, Sept. 12th, with a very encouraging attendance. Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop presided and the opening devotions. Reports were received from the recording and corresponding secretaries, the treasurer and the Strangers' secretary. Mrs. Stonehouse was elected delegate to the Sectional meeting to be held in the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, on October the first. And Mrs. Brown was asked to receive contributions to the box to be sent this month to one of the missions in the West.

The program was in charge of Mrs. W. B. Deacon and her group. Mrs. Deacon read the Scripture lesson from the ninth chapter of Matthew, a story of Christ's healing ministry and His call for workers for His great harvest field. The membership of the United Church is asked this year to study Japan from the standpoint of missions and special prayer was offered for the work in that land.

Miss L. Brown, who was a delegate from the Bridge St. auxiliary to the Summer School held in the Ladies' College, Whitby, in July, gave a comprehensive report on the work of the convention.

The Rev. G. E. Forbes of Weston was dean of the school and Mrs. Forbes, house-mother, and they made ideal host and hostess. This together with the courses of Dr. and Mrs. Carscallen and beautiful grounds of the College made a delightful setting for the meetings of the week.

The morning and evening were given up to the study of Christian work in the homeland and in foreign fields while the afternoons were devoted to recreation.

Missionaries who had spent years in the work and leaders in the various departments of the church's activities were present. The opening hymn of the first morning "Breathe on me Breath of God", which grew the keynote of the conference. "Did not our hearts burn within us as He talked to us by the way" and "Courage take" discouraged men on the road to Emmaus. The history of the church of missions is the story "Of the Burning Heart". "Missions are not taught"; "they are caught". Mrs. Bishop closed the program with prayer and a social hr'f hour was enjoyed. the group in charge serving light refreshments.

Today's Verse

THE FAERY WOODCUTTER

The faery woodcutter's eyes are green
Grey-green and flecked with gold,
Slant and slitted and jewel-cold.

The faery woodcutter's tools are keen;
His axe is sure; his hands are lean
And flecked with clinging to lichened limb.
His checkered coat shrouds all of him.

The faery woodcutter cranes away
On an ancient bole most cunningly,
With his nimble hammer, his zealful hood.
With his Druid chant in this empty wood,
And his magic ministrelsy.

—Audrey Wurdemann, in The Commonweal.

WEDDINGS

FORTIN—GORMAN

St. Columban's Church, Cornwall, was the scene of an interesting wedding today when Vera Veronica, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Gorman of Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Peter James Portin of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos Portin, of Sudbury, Ont. The ceremony was performed at 8 a.m. by Rev. Mgr. Corbett.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Robert Slavin, of Belleville, wore a lovely frock of orchid georgette, fashioned on graceful princess lines, with hat and orchid slippers to match. She carried a shower bouquet of Premier roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. A. J. Drolet of Cornwall, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, and wore a handsome gown of Tuilman panne velvet with hat and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and fern.

Mr. A. J. Drolet of Cornwall was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Prof. Fleck.

After the ceremony wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Eighth Street west. Later, Mr and Mrs. Portin left on a wedding trip to St. Anne de Besupre, Ottawa and Sudbury, the bride travelling in a smart costume of hunter's green crepe, hat and shoes to match and coat of green broadcloth with trimming of lynx.

On their return they will reside in Belleville.

JORDAN—DOIG

A charming a.m. wedding took place at high noon today at St. Andrew's church when Miss Margaret Doig, daughter Mr. and Mrs. W. J. M. Doig of Edinburgh, Scotland, became the bride of Mr. Joseph Burrows Jordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jordan of this city. The ceremony was performed at one o'clock by Rev. Dr. Seymour, pastor of St. Andrew's Church.

The winsome young bride wore bridal white, her gown being white georgette and navy point lace. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mr. James Doig, of this city, gave his sister in marriage.

Miss Ethel Barlow was bridesmaid, and wore pink flowered georgette with hat to match. She carried pink roses.

Mr. James Morey acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony a reception and luncheon was held at the Hotel Quinte. Mrs. Charles W. Hall, aunt of the bride, wearing mauve georgette and Mrs. W. J. Jordan, the groom's mother, who was gowned in rescda green georgette with hat to match, received with the bridal couple. Mrs. A. E. Calnan, cousin of the bride wore black crepe. After the reception the party left on automobile for Mr. Calnan's home, Trent Road.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan left on a wedding trip to Los Angeles. The bride travelling in an ensemble of navy blue crepe Roma with hat to match.

On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Bulova Watches

The last word in watch construction. A movement completely sealed in, shielded from dust, dirt and moisture and as Col. Lindbergh said about his own Bulova: "It keeps accurate time and is a beauty" which is as great a tribute as can be paid to any watch. A large assortment always in stock.

Who Will Win?

Guessing Contest Ends Tomorrow

Here is the committee that will read and verify the number of the sealed watch:

MAYOR REID of Belleville

MR. J. IMLAH, Pres. Belleville Kiwanis

MR. A. G. DAVIE, of the Ontario Intelligencer

Tomorrow night at 10 o'clock the guessing contest on the Bulova watch displayed in our window, and at our Carnival booth closes. On Friday night at about 8 o'clock the number will be read and verified by the impartial guess committee listed below. The watch will then be awarded to the fortunate person guessing the number nearest the one on the watch.

In the event of two or more contestants submitting the correct number the judges will draw to determine the prize winner.

The contest is still on! If you haven't entered yet step into the store, or get your card at our Carnival booth. You have until 10 o'clock tomorrow night to make your guess, and it may be the lucky one. For your information we might add that the exact number is unknown to any one in our organization. The Bulova Watch Company who sealed, boxed and shipped the watch informed us that the lucky number is sandwiched in between 699,000 and 700,000.

Make your guess today. This beautiful Bulova is a prize worth winning. Like all Bulova watches, it is of exquisite beauty and unerring accuracy.

was fairly well established and had fair protection, but he believes that the new changes will make Canadian manufacturers of textiles to use more Canadian wool.

Mr. Deacon sees stabilization of industry, in the provision of work to workers in cottons and woollens. "It will keep out a lot of cheap stuff from Europe and give employment. Every is a good thing—it is the best time in fifty two years that the cottons duties have been brought up. Every Conservative and Liberal Government since the days of MacDonald has been cutting down the tariff lower and lower. This is the first upliftt."

Mr R. J. E. Graham of the Belleville Hardware Limited said that so far he could see nothing that would directly affect this business." It is rather too early to speak," he remarked.

"Mr. W. C. Springer of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company likewise saw no changes that would directly affect the hardware trade.

Machinery

"Not very much," commented Mr. G. Freeman of the Stephens-Adamson Co. today, regarding effect on this company's output. It does not give any direct benefits and it will indirectly help us. It does not cover any of the regular products of this company, conveying and elevator machinery. But it will doubtless affect us favorably from improved business conditions. We did not ask for any changes. There may be changes later.

Mr. T. H. Chalmers of Chalmers and Hulton, Rossi and Woods, Canadian implement manufacturers did not think that there would be any effect upon their business which is purely that of distribution. "Of course it will likely influence Frost and Wood."

The optical business of Belleville will scarcely be touched by the new tariff changes, said Mr. R. Worth, manager of the American Optical Company's plant here.

He explained that the company uses raw glass brought in from the United States and that as this is not made in Canada it costs in without duty. Belgian ground glass is not used here, is subject to a change.

The placing of a genedal duty of forty per cent on flowers and foliage, natural or cut, whether in design or bouquets or not, will affect the Winnipeg and New Brunswick trade.

United States flowers are brought in in large quantities in these parts of Canada but not into Ontario, said Mr. W. R. Givens of Givins and Son, florists of this city. The Belleville firms buys from Canadian wholesalers and co are not directly affected.

There is joy in the canning world of Canada. One Belleville grocer, Mr. Robert Boyle, Front Street, told of the demand which has been insistent in Belleville as in other places of Ontario for United States canned soup goods. We ask for cans of that one there," he remarked pointing to a certain U.S. canned tomato soup product, "as one of Canadian and yet the Canadian sells cheaper and is just as good a product. We have United Statestourists come in here and look over for U.S. products and ask for Canadian. They are very thankful for their own country's products. I am glad that the tariff on U.S. canned soups has been raised for it will stimulate the industry in Canada, it will mean factories will go up and it will help agriculture."

HILLIER RURAL TOWNSHIP FAIR

Helen Lloyd, S. S. No. 6 Was Winner of Speaking Contest

Wellington, Sept. 18 By Mail— The Hillier township school fair was held at Hillcrest on Friday, Sept. 12th under the direction of the Ontario Department of Agriculture with Mr. F. J. Webster, Agricultural representative, Picton and Mr. C. E. Strothers, public school inspector, Picton, in charge. The directors for the fair were S. S. No. 1 Ernest Elmy, S. S. No. 2 V. Wilkinson, No. 4 Donald Parks, S. S. No. 5 Delbert Campbell, S. S. No. 8 Donald Alexander, No. 10 Hermen Trumpour, S. S. No. 4 and 10 Arnold McPaul, S. S. No. 17 and 19 Bernice Clark.

The exhibits were good especially art, farm and home mechanics and live stock.

Marie Chase is to be congratulated for winning the T. Eaton Co. Ltd. Toronto silver trophy for winning the highest number of points at the fair.

Congratulations are also due Isobel Morton for winning second prize.

A book entitled Flint and Feather by Pauline Johnston—and Eileen Spencer for winning 3rd prize.

A book entitled This Canada of Ours, by J. S. Morrison and Maude Morrison Stone. The teachers of these pupils Miss Vance of S. S. No 3, Melville and Mrs. Clifford McPaul S. S. No. 16, Niles Corners, deserve praise for the assistance and encouragement they have given the pupils.

There was keen competition in the Strathcona exercises in white-Hillier school No. 6 won with Mr. Matthews teacher.

Bowerman's school with Miss Watson teacher won second place and in which Gerald Way who directed the exercises deserves special mention as they directed them with vim and precision.

The sports were as follows

Boys race 8 years and under —C. Garrison, Arnold Chase, Clarence Carley.

Girls race 6 years and under—Bernice Brason, Jean Moreland, Ethel Johnston.

Boys race 7 years and 8 years — Henry Wilson, Douglas Harnes, Ernest Reed.

Girls race 7 years and 8 years — Phyllis Hicks, and Margaret Taylor a tie, Ruth Hamilton .

Boys race 9-10 years—Clifford Morris and Burton Osterhout tie, Albert Carter.

Girls race 9-10 years—Verna Garrison, Patsy White, I. Spencer.

Boys race 11-12 years—Kenneth Wood, Clare Campbell, Gerald Spencer.

Girls race 11-12 years—Doris Palmer, Marie Chase, Helen Young.

Girls race 13 years and over —G. Young, Eileen Maines, Marion Wannamaker.

Sack Race — Burton Osternout, A. Carley, Elmer Osterhout.

Needle and thread race—Doris Palmer, Marie Chase, Eileen Maines.

The Prince Edward County council contributed $10.00 to the calf exhibit thus enabling better prizes to be given to this class of which there were six entries. Three prizes were given for ability to handle the animals and were awarded 1st to Douglas Palmer, 2nd. Donald Burr and 3rd to Floyd Huffman.

Mr. Webster stated there was much room for improvement in exhibiting and gave some helpful instructions and advised when holding a calf watch the animal closely having front feet placed higher than the hind feet, always face calf and when not in right position lead it around never back them up and advised when selecting the animal choose a good looking one with good depth of body, strong constitution, strong through heart, good and long in quarter and fit them well.

Snapshots were taken of the prize animals and D. Blakely who photographed sitting on Floyd Huffman's calf's back.

Wm. Lewis exhibiting a good calf and showed marked ability in exhibiting it as did also D. Alexander exhibiting his lamb.

Mr. Webster congratulated the pupils on their splendid exhibits despite the unfavorable weather conditions and the prevalent diseases in potatoes. He stated there was a marked improvement in the selection of vegetables. He advised in selecting beets get only the nice size good shaped ones and cut entire top off.

In selecting corn choose ears characteristic of variety. In golden bantam it should be about 6 ins in length 8 rows deep and rows straight and have it matured. There was a large exhibit of families which judging from a table stand point should possess firmness, quality and color. In selecting onions from yellow globe danver they should be globe shaped not flat.

Parsnips is a vegetable in which size counts.

In the girls public speaking contest subject, How I would beautify the exterior of a farm home.

1 prize was won by Helen Lloyd S. S. No. 6.

2 prize was won by Eileen Maines, S.S. No. 4.

3 prize was won by Iona Spencer, S S. No. 10.

In the Boys' public speaking contest —What I would do to insure a good crop of any farm product. Product chosen field corn was won by Ray Humphrey S. S. No. 4.

In the special public speaking contest given by Mr. Strothers of Hillier Women's Institute—Impromptu speeches—the winners were

1 Donald Alexander S.S. No. 8.
2 Iona Spencer S.S. No. 8.
3 Eileen Maines S.S. No. 4.

Mr Was announced that the impromptu speeches will be an annual feature of the Hillier rural school fair.

Mr. Strothers congratulated the pupils That took part in the impromptu speeches on their earnest effort and success and also commented on the school gardens. He also stated that physical training was practised in the school to enable the pupil to stand up well and that the heel raising exercise prevented flat feet — breathing exercise was beneficial to the lung and standing at attention was a position of readiness. These exercises improve carriage and give rest and variety. Games are added to make them interesting and also makes competition.

From Eighteen to Eighty-Four is Veteran Salesman's Record

Joseph Foltz, Belleville's Best Known Clerk Completes 84th Year

RECALLS 1st TRAIN

Drygood Business Has Absorbed Most of His Interest

JOHN C. KIRKWOOD

At eighty-four most people are living in comparative retirement enjoying the twilight of life. But not Joseph Foltz, he is still performing his daily tasks and is looking forward to many more years of his chosen work. He celebrated his eighty-fourth milestone yesterday, by disposing of yards and yards of georgette, satin and crepe de chine at his counter in Sinclair's where he has been a member of the staff for the past quarter of a century.

On his eighteenth birthday he commenced in the dry goods business in Belleville with George Vair, who was located in the present premises occupied by Earl and Cooke. He afterwards joined the staff of the James Hennessy store and where he remained for some time until he affiliated himself with P. J. Wims. Twenty-five years ago, he switched his allegiance to the late D. V. Sinclair and he will likely complete his career with that firm.

Mr. Foltz walks to and from his work daily besides taking his lunch at his home. Rainy or stormy weather does not prevent him from being in his accustomed place in the morning. Mr. Foltz strides along like a boy and despite the fact that he spends at least eight hours of every working day on his feet he seldom tires.

Born in Baden, Germany, Mr. Foltz came to Belleville, with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Foltz, the former having conducted a grocery store here for many years. Mr. Foltz went to public and high school here and then entered the dry goods business. There were five members of the family, three brothers and two sisters and all are living. Their ages total three hundred and ninety-five years. Gregory of Guelph is 86, Joseph, Belleville, 84; Mrs. S. Huffman, Belleville, 82; Mrs. J. O'Brien, Kingston, 72; and Henry, Belleville, 71.

Mr. Foltz has witnessed many changes in Belleville's commercial life and he states that not one business firm operating now, had been established when he commenced work for George Vair.

Mr. Foltz is of the opinion that Wallbridge and Clarke is the oldest established firm in Belleville now. Asked as to the most outstanding event in the city in the last seventy-five years, Mr. Foltz declared that the first railway train on the old Grand Trunk created more stir than any other celebration within his knowledge.

Mr. Foltz in a reminiscent mood said that Belleville was then the center of a very lucrative trade when the city was served from the principal cities by large vessels. Lumber rig was one of the chief industries and in the halcyon days, the mouth of the river Moira was perpetually jammed with log booms. The Front Mills did the big business of those days. Highways were unknown and stages rocked, pivotted and rattled over the roads which in many cases were only converted into veritable quagmires.

Mr. Foltz says he has always taken excellent care of himself. He enjoys his pipe and is an ardent student of the radio while he is well informed on current events, being a great reader particularly of the daily press. His wife, seventy-one and his daughter, Mrs. Harold Barrett, are other members of the family.

Fly Catarrh—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil that it can be used internally with as much success as it can outwardly. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

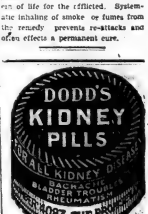
Reception last night was rather colby at the start but it went far towards a perfect ending before it finished. Can't imagine which would be better the way it was or vice versa, I suppose it really wouldn't make in a small lot of difference. However, tonight we'll hope the reception will be perfect from start to finish.

Wednesday night and that doesn't mean an awful lot to us but with Reed digging we should unearth something. Let me remind you or possibly I failed to mention it before that tomorrow night the voices of three of America's greatest singers supported by an internationally famous orchestra will be heard in the gigantic program dedicated to the American Legion. It goes on the air tomorrow night over the combined networks of the National Broadcasting Company. Madame Schumann-Heink, Martha Attwood and Reinald Werrenrath will be the featured soloists in the ninety minute program. The Victor orchestra is also taking part both in support of the soloists and in special selections.

At 9, EST.

Kellogg's Asthma Remedy bring prompt relief, but it introduces a new era of life for the afflicted. Systematic inhaling of smoke or fumes from the remedy prevents re-attacks and often effects a permanent cure.



Halsey Stuart program from WEAF at 8 EST tonight with the Old Counsellor and the Chicago Little Symphony orchestra. Palmolive hour at 9.30 EST and this brings us Olive Palmer, soprano, and the Revellers and any number of artists.

Coca Cola program at 9.30 EST from WEAF and Graniland Rice is interviewing "Hack" Wilson, of the Chicago Cubs. Chester Gaylord will be the soloist and Leonard Joy's all string orchestra will also be in the picture.

Vincent Lopez for fifteen minutes of good music at 10 EST and then Uncle Abe and David at 10.15 EST. These programs are over WEAF of course. Phil Spitalny and his boys take the the spotlight after this and hold it for a good half hour.

Business is picking up on Wednesday evening WJZ offers some attractive programs tonight, too. At 6.45 the Dix-a-Dee entertainers and at 7 the Yeast Foamers. Sylvania Foresters immediately after.

Camel Pleasure hour at 9.30 and there's a good one at 9.30 "Poems in Song" and tonight it will be "Tales of a Wayside Inn." Remember? La Palina Smoker from WABC at 8.30 EST.

KITCHENER GROWS

Kitchener, Sept. 17—Despite adverse business conditions, Kitchener increased its population by 840 during the past year. Assessment Commissioner Albrecht announced here. The gain increases the city's population from 30,274 to 31,114.

Work for Jobless Is Aim of Tariff

er ad valorem. specific or both, a d.s. count of 10 per cent. of the duty is allowed. No change was made in this feature of the preference.

Cottons, woollens and silks all were increased. Ad valorem increases ranged as high as 15 per cent. in the general tariff and from 2 1-2 to 5 per cent. in the British preferential tariff. Specific duties were added to many but not all cases. These ranged from 3 cents a pound on many fabrics, mostly part woollens or cottons, to 20 cents a pound on blankets, 25 cents a pound on certain kinds of clothing and $1 a dozen on socks and stockings of all kinds.

Jewelry Also Increased

Jewelry also is increased. The new rates are 30 per cent. British preference 27 1-2 per cent. intermediate and 45 per cent. general tariff, as compared with the old ones of 22 1-2 per cent. British preference, 30 per cent. intermediate, and 35 per cent. general.

Perhaps the chief feature of the new tariff on agricultural products is abandonment of the King-Dunning countervailing duty's except with regard to two items—eggs, whole or frozen. Notwithstanding the fact that the countervailing feature remains in force on these the general tariff has made 41 cents a dozen and the British preference 5 cents.

The general rate on this and all other dairy products which countervailing duties formerly were imposed now is boosted to the level of the Hawley-Smoot tariff in the United States. The butter duties are doubled, and the purpose, it might be added, is a double one. Besides aiming a retaliatory blow at the United States by making general rate on butter the equal of the Hawley Smoot tariff, 14 cents a pound, the British preference rate is jumped from 4 to 8 cents. thereby erecting a barrier against the New Zealand imports which played such a part in the election campaign.

Obituary

PERRY P. DOUGAN

MADOC, Sept. 17—The district was shocked and grieved to receive the sad news from Saskatoon that Perry Dougan, a widely known pioneer of the district, had died in the hospital there. Mr. Dougan had received fatal injuries last Saturday afternoon. It appears that he was guiding the tongue of a wagon that was being pulled backward out of the barn, and that the wheels hit an obstruction causing the tongue to swing and strike the victim with such violence as to cause internal injuries. After receiving medical aid it was advised that he be taken to Saskatoon for an operation, which was done on Sunday morning. Mr. Dougan was reported to be progressing well following the operation and it was further word came through until the sad message of his death.

The funeral of the late Perry P. Dougan who died in the Saskatoon hospital on Monday, August 18th, from internal injuries received in an accident on his farm the previous Saturday was held from the Birsay United church on Thursday afternoon last at 2 o'clock, Rev. F. C. Rawlinson officiated at the service.

The late Mr. Dougan was born at Madoc, Ontario, in 1877; came out to Manitoba in 1900 and to Saskatchewan in 1904, teaching school in the both provinces for a number of years. He was married in 1911 to Miss Adeline H. Brown of Stonewall, Man. Six children survive him: Gladys 17, William 15; Henry 12; Lillian 10; Ernest 8 and Hubert 6. He is also survived by three brothers, Johnson W. of Davidson, Sask; Harry L. of Saltcoats, and Murray G., of California, and four sisters, Mrs. G. Jose of Davidson, Mrs. M. A. Caverly and Miss Emma of Madoc, Ontario and Mrs. A. E. Mogg of Schomberg, Ont. Twenty-one years ago he took up land nine miles west of Birsay which he farmed until his death. During this period he served two terms as councillor and almost continuously on the Newcastle school board and the board of the United church of which he was an earnest and active member.

The pall-bearers were: A. B. Wright, G. Hamblin, J. Anderson, R. McBirney, J. Job and J. K. Bayliss, all neighbors and friends of many years' standing of the deceased.

Interment was made in the Lake Cotena cemetery near Tullis.

MISS MARGARET SINNOTT

There passed away today, an aged and respected resident in the person of Miss Margaret Sinnott, for eighty-five years a citizen of this city. The deceased, who was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sinnott, was a member of St. Michael's Church and her many friends will mourn the loss of a devout Roman Catholic. Miss Sinnott has lived in Belleville all her life, was born here, and has been ill for only a short time.

She leaves to mourn her loss one sister, Mrs. H. Geary, of this city, and two brothers, William of Belleville, and Andrew of Minnespolis, Minnsota.

The funeral will take place from St. Michel's church on Friday and interment will be in St. James' Cemetery.

BRIDE ELECT IS PRESENTED WITH BEAUTIFUL LAMP

CENTRE, Sept. 15.—By Mail—Mr. D. K. Redner has purchased a log tractor and outfit.

A pleasing social event took place on Thursday evening at the home of W. N. Redner when the entire community met and presented Miss Mildred Redner with an address and a very beautiful electric floor lamp. Mr. J. McPhail was the chairman and Miss Kathleen Giles read the address. Mildred will be missed and all wish her a happy married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fox accompanied by Mrs. Lorne Brickman and Mrs. B. Montgomery motored to Waupoos on Thursday and attended the W. I. social at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Moy and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Fox spent Sunday at Picton, the guests of Mr. Lloyd Hicks and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Townsend and family spent Sunday with Mrs. Annie Allison of Dorree's.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Redner visited at Bruce Tice's of Wellington on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Barber and Willet of Mountain View, visited at Ralph Redners Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Spencer and Donald spent Saturday evening in Trenton.

Mrs. Wesley Coulter spent Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Elwood Spencer.

Mrs. Adelaide Loui is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Stanton Fox.

Health cannot be looked for in the child that is subject to worms, because worms destroy health by creating internal disturbances that retard development and cause serious weakness. Miller's Worm Powders expel worms and are so beneficial in their action that the systems of the little sufferers are restored to healthfulness all the discomforts and dangers of worm infection are removed and satisfactory growth is assured.

Waupoos

WAUPOOS, Sept. 16.—By Mail—Miss Annie Doyle, Rochester, and Mr. Dan Doyle, Chicago, have been visiting friends in this neighborhood.

Mr. Bert Sherard, Kingston, spent the week with Mr. B. Wright and other friends here.

Mr. Herbert Cressy has purchased a team of horses from Mr. S. Carson, Cressy.

GREATER CROWD SECOND NIGHT AT KARNIVAL

Splendid Vaudeville Performance at Armouries

JACK GUEST TONIGHT

Another night of fun and frolic has passed at the Kiwanis Karnival and the members are grateful for the patronage that so far has been accorded their efforts. The crowd was larger last night than on the opening night, but still not up to the records of last year. This was to be expected on account of the weather and the unsettled conditions in the country but was so worthy an object in view the Club is hoping that the citizens and residents of the district will come to their aid and allow them to carry out the program that has been mapped for the coming season. It can be truthfully said that the committee has arranged a better programme than ever and the Armouries never did wear such gala nature.

DANCE AND SONG

Last night a splendid vaudeville show was given along with the Fashion Parade, the costumes being displayed by Wotten's Limited. The furs by Delaney, millinery by Woodley's and jewelery by McPee's. Tommy Mason and His Commodores supplied the music for the parade and also entertained a large number in the dance hall in the gallery. This orchestra has been equipped with new drapes and was quite gala. Cecil in Thunkett gave a delightful show with "Margie" the girl wonder as the feature attraction. The Plunkett girls, six in number gave a song and dance number to open the show followed by "Margie". Louise Byrnes gave a Russian dance and Tom Ellis entertained with patter and song. His partner Miss West also gave a solo turn and then coupled with Ellis to bring the house down in laughter. The whole programme was closed with a song and dance number by the Girls.

MAIL DRIVERS

An added feature of the show was the nail-driving contest, won by Mrs. Revell of this city. The contestants were required to drive five nails in a log, the first one finishing to receive a five dollar gold piece. Mrs. Revell completed her task in 22 seconds closely followed by Mrs. Lloyd also of this city. Each night there will be a feature of this kind and the club would appreciate any of the local residents entering the competitions. Tonight a rolling pin throwing contest will be held and it is expected Jiggs will get a terrible beating.

The door prize was won by R. Bone of this city. The committee decided that only those in the hall at the time of drawing will be entitled to the prize and last night there were three draws made before the winner was obtained. The drawing for this prize takes place nightly after ten o'clock. When all the features were completed the large number turned to trying their skill on the several games that have been provided for their amusement and more than one was seen walking about the floor of the Armouries with a beautiful blanket, a fine floor lamp or a set of dishes. Bingo of course held the centre of the stage many enjoying that form of diversion.

JACK GUEST IS GUEST

Tonight the Karnival is to be favored with the presence of Jack Guest, winner of the Diamond Sculls at Henley in England this year. He is perhaps one of the outstanding scullers of the world and after his introduction will explain to the audience the arduous training that is necessary to win such a great event and the thrill that comes in victory. Mr. Guest is one of Canada's popular athletes and no doubt a large number will be out to welcome him to the city.

Tabernacle

TABERNACLE, Sept. 16.—By Mail—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Flood called at Ross Huble's on Sunday afternoon.

ELECTRIC STORM WROUGHT HAVOC

Hallaway, Sept. 16 (By Mail) A severe electric storm passed over this section early Sunday morning cutting the Bell telephone wire about a foot from the store and damaging the phone in Mr. W. Caiman's house, also breaking off two telephone poles near Mr. Nathan Reid's.

The Women's Institute met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Leonard Frost, with about fifteen members present. The meeting was conducted by the first vice president, Mrs. L. Frost, in the absence of the president, with the usual procedure. The roll call "Current Events" was well responded to. A splendid paper was given by Mrs. McInnis on "Living a Life is More Than Making a Living". A demonstration and instruction on table setting was given by Misses Aleitha Horton and Marjorie Belcour that proved very interesting, also a contest was put on by Miss Guffin. At the close the hostess served refreshments.

Mrs. K. McMullen is in the Belleville Hospital with a new baby girl.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Spencer of Rochester and Mr. F. Spencer and Mrs B. Spencer were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hamilton, Foxboro, on Sunday last.

Miss Marie Townsend is attending Normal in Peterboro after completing her fifth year in Belleville High School.

Miss E. Huff is visiting her sisters in Montreal.

Several from this vicinity attended Camp Meeting at Ivanhoe on Sunday afternoon also the K. K. K. meeting in Foxboro at night.

Mrs. R. Townsend attended Presbytery meeting in Deseronto on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. D. Haggerty and baby of West Huntingdon, spent Wednesday last with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hough.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Kelly spent a day last week at Mr. W. H. Reynolds near Frankford.

Mr. R. Wannamaker is able to be home again from the Kingston hospital.

The Feminine Viewpoint

STYLE SHOW

MADAME FASHION SEEN IN REVIEW AT KARNIVAL

SECOND EVENING FEATURES COSTUMES BY WOTTEN

Furs By Delaney

Chic Millinery Shown By Woodley's

Interested crowds gathered early to the reserved seat enclosure at the Kiwanis Karnival last evening to see the second evening's presentation of the Style Revue. Wotten's Ltd., supplied the costumes displayed, while the furs were from Delaney's, the millinery from Woodley's and the costume jewelry was from McFee's.

In addition to the Toronto mannequins who again modelled the garments, two local girls, Mrs. John Kerr and Miss Della Jamieson acted as models for some of the frocks. The important thing about the styles shown is that this year the gowns are to be more charming than ever, and although "elegant" is considered a Victorian adjective, yet there is no better description of the dresses, especially for evening wear, for the return is distinctly feminine modes has brought to the foreground, the grace and elegance of a more elaborate vogue.

Spectators found much to admire in the garments that passed in revue. Women were quick to approve the new style trends, and when a particularly beautiful costume made its appearance the audience gave instant applause. The flared skirt, a little longer than last year's is back again,but pleats in odd arrangements are not neglected and the silhouette adheres to Princess lines. The leading colours, are black, brown, and green with paler tones for evening.

Sports, afternoon, evening dresses and tiived coats were shown in models that were a delight to the discriminating, and each style note that Paris has crowned with her favour was displayed to advantage in some costume.

DAYTIME STYLES

The beauty of velvet, which is after all the most flattering fabric a woman can choose, was charmingly exemplified in many of the afternoon frocks shown by Wootten's. One of French velvet, also exploited the jacket mode, It had a blouse of eggshell satin, with collar edged with lace. Crepes and chiffons in black were very popular. A frock of chiffon, in black, made of filmy gown, in simple lines that for a touch of colour, had a collar of beads in iridescent effect. Black satin fashioned a delightful little frock, that had a frilled lapel lined with white and a blouse of pleated georgette in eggshell shade, over crepe de chine. The evening bags and costume jewelry worn were from McFee's.

For sports there were many captivating frocks. The new jumper frock made its appearance in printed satin, with peasant blouse. While termed a sports frock this dress would do duty at any informal afternoon affair, which is one appealing feature of the mode. Green was also used for a crepe Roma tunic dress, another style note introduced, or rather revived in a glorified way, this fall.

The real sports wear was represented in jersey, jersey tweed, and wool tweed fabrics, that favoured the brown tones. A striking suit was that of black jersey with white blouse, trimmed with appliqué designs of the black.

The coats showed the importance of the fitted lines, and the longer skirt. Belts were much in evidence and the success of the coat depended not only on its cut and the beauty of its fabric but on the luxurious collars and cuffs of fine furs that adorned practically every model. There was black broadcloth with pointed fox, travel tweeds with wolf, muskrat or squirrel trimmings. One green coat had soft fawn and cuffs of baby wolf, while Arabian lynx trimmed another green model.

VOGUE FOR EVENING

The evening dresses shown last evening were really the outstanding feature of Wotten's Style Show. So dainty and lovely were they, that every one was rewarded with a moment of breathless silence as the audience first glimpsed it and this is the finest tribute that spectators could give. Beautiful indeed was a gown of white crepe de chine, frocked with embroidery in silver. With this went a short wrap of lipstick red velvet lined with eggshell satin, and finished with a wide collar bordered with white fur. Fine beige lace with georgette, in jacket style which made of the frock a double daintiness, was a pleasing fabric combination. Black silk net made a stunning gown that followed princess lines, and then billowed in a graceful manner as the skirt touched the ground. Shell pink georgette and lace, and pale green chiffon and lace were used in other alluring models.

HATS BY WOODLEY'S

All hats last evening were from Woodley's and the styles showed that there is an equal division in the importance of felt and velvet. Artful brims caught in unusual ways in the front, with drooping lines in the back made the hats very smart.

FURS BY DELANEY

All the furs shown last night were from Delaney and the wraps showed that unquestionably the fur mode has undergone a change and the silhouettes straight, has now taken on the Princess style and become fitted. The wraps included one of Persian lamb with Kolinsky, taupe mole, Kolinsky, muskrat with collar in pointed effect, American broadtail, in nigger brown with Kolinsky squirrel collar in the new pointed reverse mode; and evening wraps were of white rabbit, with flared back, and nutria lapin also with flared back, fitted lines about the hips and the new bell sleeves.

Which is the Worst Sorrow

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Everyone thinks his or her sorrows are the worst:

We listen with but half an ear to the troubles of our neighbors.

"They think they have a burden to carry! But how they'd complain if they had mine. Then they would have something real to worry about.

This about sums up the average attitude.

Well, what is the greatest sorrow anyway?

The jilted lover thinks his plight is the worst. To him the end of the world has come.

The parent—especially the mother who loses a child, has an almost overwhelming grief to bear.

The death of any beloved one is sorrow of the deepest kind

The worry of the bankrupt is often distressing. It involves financial obligations, a new start in life. Bankruptcy may even involve his honor.

Illness is a cause for genuine worry —especially when it is chronic.

Here are just a few random examples of great sorrow!

I'm sure others have already come to your mind which you feel are worse than any I have listed.

And that is exactly what I want to bring out.

I want to prove that there is no such thing as a greatest sorrow!

What constitutes great, greater or greatest sorrow is merely a point of view.

There is no universal standard by which sorrow can be measured. Sorrow is a question of the individual who must bear it!

Therefore don't think your worries and troubles and trials are the worst possible.

"It could be worse!" used to be a popular saying, and it certainly is true. Whatever your sorrow may be, it might easily be multiplied in manifold ways.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

The Evening Brightens with thoughts of new and lovely frocks. Destined to grace exclusive functions is an evening frock of black velvet cut with a novel back. Heavy pieces of net are set in at the sides of the hem and are left transparent, and a net border outlines the V decolletage. The dress is worn with an onyx and brilliant necklace.

The Beaver Builds Itself into the mode with the re-introduction of beaver fur for next Autumn. Most attractive is a coat of beige light- weight tweed with a fine design in brown and beige. It is trimmed with silver cuffs of fine beaver and a long throwover scarf with deep ends of the same fur.

The Winning Suit for the Autumn will be lavishly fur-trimmed. Very much of the mode is a suit of black cloth with a wide hip band on both jacket and skirt, the latter being set diagonally, and a crawni collar of black broadtail. The suit is worn with a pink satin blouse.

New Partnerships Have Been formed in a material way. For instance, one smart woman wears a frock of white organdie, much beruffled, with a tailored coat of black transparent chiffon velvet, trimmed with white lapin.

A Brown Study can be very fascinating as well as absorbing, as it evidenced by the admiration accorded a new Autumn suit of brown cloth with a collar and wide border of hux fur dyed to match. It is worn with a biege georgette blouse and a brown velvet beret.

Don't Be Hot-Headed these warm days, when there are so many fabric hats available to cool your heated brow. Very lovely and cool is a hat of black georgette, shirred and stitched in white. It has soft, rolled brim that can be self-manipulated.

Mothers can easily know when their children are troubled with worms, and they lose no time in applying a reliable remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

JUST RAIN

Rain has become so rare that it ought to be welcomed as a novelty this season. Unusually bright and sunny weather has benefitted many and has injured crops. Rain still remains one of the necessities of life on this planet, and it is a safe prediction that it will always be a necessity of life. When rain ceases or before it ceases to fall on the earth, life will have become extinct.

Rain which came yesterday and Monday was eagerly taken by the thirsty soil. Rain is needed for the wells and streams.

RUDY AND BEAUTY

Canadian admirers of Rudy Vallee received a shock from that celebrity when he was reported as saying on a visit to Toronto that Canadian girls were not as beautiful as United States girls. Now he has apologized, meaning that he should have said Canadian damsels were as beautiful as U.S. girls. It shocked Canadian appreciators of the crooning Apollo to think that Rudy could be so rude or at least thoughtless, so impolite, that he was not a god after all but a very young man who makes mistakes. It would not be long fine if Canadian fans had deaf ears for Rudy's music. Rudy may be a judge of his own type of rhythm in music but as to rythm in beauty, well. He has corrected the error. Rudy has a virtue, however, he admitted the slip, he did not blame the reporter.

ISSUES YEARBOOK

The United Church of Canada has issued a yearbook 1930 from the office of the secretary of the General Council, Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore. The extent of the church's activities may be gleaned from the fact that there are 778 finely printed pages in the publication. It is interesting from the standpoint of the membership of the church for details are given of every presbytery within the Dominion.

The Foreign and Home Missions naturally occupy a large place in the yearbook.

GROWTH OF COLLEGE

The steady growth of Albert College is indicated in the registration for the coming year. The ideal set up years ago by Dr. E. N. Baker is being realized as the school shows every sign of the life he anticipated for it. Dr Bishop under his principalship has seen the college grow in importance after the wrench which took place from the old conditions when Albert was a co-educational institution in the old buildings. The college spirit under the new conditions preserves what is necessary of the old and whatever new is necessary is being worked into the fabric of the college spirit.

Ninety-two students will enter upon work this year.

SEEMED TOO GOOD

It seemed almost too much for Canada to hope to have two planes ready to fly across the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The Pacific flight was called off for many reasons, weather, and a series of mishaps which made continuance of the effort inadvisable. Whether Capt. Errol Boyd will succeed in getting successfully across the Atlantic is yet to be seen. Should he do so, this will be the one eastern flight of the year.

Successful crossing of Atlantic and Pacific was almost too much to have expected in one year from fliers from one country.

THE BRIDGE AWARD

This evening the city council will meet to take up the question of awarding the contract for the new upper bridge of reinforced concrete which it has been decided to build at once.

Their decision will be waited with much interest by the ratepayers.

Twisting storms may sweep the Caribbean Sea bringing desolation to thousands of homes and death to many, while here in the province of Ontario the only untoward things are an occasional electric storm in summer and a tieup by snow in winter. Truly this land is blessed, anyone who has enjoyed the weather of the past few weeks (and who hasn't) would say.

BORN OF OUR NEED

By Aline Michaelis

The runner reels and his lungs feel torn
In their frantic gasps for air,
No more can the cruel pace be borne;
But the goal! He is nearly there!
The goal! How the thought of it spurs him on
In a last wild burst of speed!
He has finished the race—he has won! He has won!
For strength came at the peak of his need.

In the gruelling race or the steady grind
Of the life we live each hour
We are worn, we are spent, we would fall behind
Were it not for a secret power,
For a strength that comes after strength is done,
For a force which is not our own;
By this alone are the great gifts won,
Through this are the deep joys known.

And it comes when the life is pulse of prayer
From which all things else recede,
In the anguished mood of a dark despair
Comes the strength that is born of our need.

RACE BETWEEN the Yankee yacht Enterprise and the British yacht Shamrock seems to be more of a test between mechanical devices and brain and brawn of real sailing men. The Enterprise is fitted up with every mechanical device possible to invent to regulate the sails and tell how much pressure per inch is being exerted by the wind, etc., kinda sit in the fo'castle or the cabin, touch a button, make sail and away we go, luff or beat, or jibe, or what have you to the tune of a little clicking instrument. On the other hand the British boat is being sailed with due regard to all the old sailing traditions a fine boat being managed by brain and brawn without the ultra modern doo-dads which the shrewd Yankee has devised to make handling of their boat easier and quicker. All of which may be quite according to the rules as made and devised for the America Cup races but in supplanting the human by the mechanical most of the interest in the race will be lost.

MRS. WINCHELL'S LITTLE BOY, as he calls himself, Walter Winchell by name, who writes a column daily in a New York paper about the sayings and doings of show folks, sugar daddies, spenders, gold diggers and others who make whoopee along Broadway's Great White Way while they last, has just had his salary raised from $500 a week to $1,000 each Saturday night, with a 50-50 break on gross syndicate returns, and a $1,000 weekly radio date. Winchell figures his earnings for the current year will be about $121,000, which places him in the plutoclass with Arthur Brisbane, Hearst editorial writer, W. H. Rogers, O. O. McIntyre and Calvin Coolidge, for Cool Calvin has become a New York columnist. Walter Winchell started in the newspaper business in 1924, previously having been a 'hoofer," or vaudeville entertainer with plenty of past but darn little future. When his earnings shrunk to about $25 a week he quit the stage, and says, "When I came into this racket the wiseheimers said it was a good game but poor pay." As a columnist Winchell made a hit, and not having a good grammar school education, invented his own grammar, syntax and all the rest of it. His Broadway stories are syndicated all over the United States and are more popular in the "sticks" than where the big lights blaze. His vogue is no doubt largely due to the glamor which is attached to that noted boulevard of sighs and lies called Broadway, and he is sure cashing in noble on his knowledge of night life in the metropolis and acquaintance with stage folks, smart folks and the richest bootleggers and gold diggers of that short but hectic life. We're not jealous, only hope that Mrs. Winchell's little boy will continue to enjoy prosperity, even if it does keep him up all night every night. He can sleep Sundays, if he plugs his ears with cottonbatten, and disconnects the telephone and sends the children to the country for the day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Jury Files In

Charles Slaan Reid

Old Tim Pincher dragged his feet slowly along up the trail toward his cabin, on an eminence at the head of the Laurel branch ravine. Tim realized that his eighty years were telling upon his physical forces.

It was a little past noon, and, although cool days had arrived, the old man's exertion brought a moisture to his brow. He carried a shotgun over his shoulder. He had been shooting snipe along the valley creek below. His eyesight had failed so much in the past five years, he no longer could shoot a rifle with any degree of accuracy, and he had had to turn to the shotgun.

Something of old Tim's pride had gone when he laid his rifle for the last time upon the buck's antlers which served as a gun rack over the cabin door.

The trail led around a boulder a little above the cabin, enabling the traveler to look down upon the yard before reaching it. As Tim rounded the boulder he stopped. In the yard he Mary, Tim's granddaughter, with her face buried against her arm. For a moment Tim's heart stood still. But when he could make out that the girl's body was moving, that perhaps she was sobbing, he continued on down to the spot where she lay huddled on the ground.

Mary was Pincher's only living descendant. The old man's wife had been dead for more than a decade, and the girl had been his only solace and companion, until about three months before, when Mary had married "Slim" Taylor, a sort of adventurer who had come into the mountains to work at Beacom's shingle mill.

Pincher had agreed to take Taylor to board; and Slim's ugly temper soon had won the love of Mary who was little more than half his age, and she had consented to a stolen marriage. Pincher had hurt old Tim deeply. He had made the best of it, though soon he had come to regard Taylor as an undesirable citizen. Pincher now stood almost over Mary.

"What's happened, Sis?" he asked.

Mary rolled over, and looked up at to her grandfather's face. Her cheeks were smudgy from the tears she had been shedding. She was a beautiful girl, and a favorite among all of the mountain folks. Slowly the girl rose to her feet. Then she buried her face against the old man's breast.

"It's what Slim done, "she said.

"What's Slim done, Honey?" Pincher's arms clutched her tightly.

"He took my gold money— them two place that Maw left me. He said it was foul to let money like that lie around the house for two or three generations, doin' nobody no good. I fought for 'em, Grandy, but he slap me down, an' kicked me in the ribs. He 'most stove me in—" Mary pressed her hand to her side.

Pincher's teeth went together hard. "Where is Slim now?"

"He's went to Baddlebank to the store, to the gamblin."

"Well, Honey; when a gal has a man like that, it's mighty hard to know what to do about it."

The caller was Joe Rampey.

"Come up here, Tim?"

Pincher turned, and dragged his way back over the boulder.

"We've gound out somethin' about Slim Taylor as we thought yuh ought to know, Pincher," began Joe.

Pincher was silent a moment, —"What's the?" he asked finally.

"The derned skunk he's got a wife an' two brats over in Transylvania."

Old Tim sank to the rock beneath him, and stared blankly.

"Don't know yuh want to do about it, Pincher," continued Joe. "I jest wanted to let yuh know that me an' the best o' the boys is ready, of yuh us far anything?"

"I'll let yuh know, Joe—an' thank yuh!" Pincher replied weakly. "I got to think a little."

About the middle of the afternoon Pincher again shouldering his shotgun and set off down the trail. Half a mile from the house he climbed into a laurel thicket, and sank behind a log over which he thrust the muzzle of his gun, commanding the trail below. An hour slipped by, then another. It had begun to grow dark in the woods.

But there was an end of the waiting. Presently the "boom" of Pincher's shotgun broke the stillness of the woods. It was followed by a scream of pain, as Slim Taylor went down under the charge of small shot which had driven bits of clothing into a hundred tiny pits along his hip and ribs. Pincher went down to his victim, and stood over him.

"Ye derned varmint!" he exclaimed, "I don't know whether yuh'll die or not—them's jest snipe shot in yuh. But I'm leavin' yuh here—maybe the bobcats'll git yuh to night."

During the night Taylor dragged himself down the ravine, and found someone to take him to a surgeon. His recovery was slow, and he had plenty of time in which to plan his revenge. It would be sufficient to have Pincher sent up for a matter of five to ten years. Such a term at his age, would mean life.

It was with feelings more or less of indifference that old Tim Pincher submitted to arrest under a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill which Taylor had preferred against him. In all of his eighty years he never appeared before a bar of justice; and there was something novel about his surroundings, when he stood in the court room awaiting the process of the trial.

Pincher's gaze roved over the walls, and ceiling, along the tiers of seats occupied by the audience, and from one object to another in the inclosure where he sat, a prisoner. What the audience and the jurymen saw was a white haired, stooped little old man with a countenance which showed not the least indication of a murderer's guilt.

As the trial proceeded Pincher sat listening to the testimony of the state's witnesses with but a vague understanding of what it was all about. Taylor told the story of his being bushwhacked, a plain statement of being attacked from ambush without a chance to defend himself, and without provocation.

His surgeon explained the nature of the wound he had received, and the possibility that it might have caused death. Another testified as to the condition in which Taylor had reached his house on the night of the soobing.

When Pincher came to the stand, there was a change in the attitude of the audience. A closer attention was observed; and no word of Pincher's story was lost. He told of having learned of Taylor's perfidy, and of his decision to shoot him because rabid vermints should not be allowed to live and maybe impose on sours other community. There were smiles of amusement here and there along the sea of faces. The fact that Taylor had left a family in Transylvania was proven by witnesses from that county.

Old Tim Pincher listened to the argument of the prosecuting attorney with but a faint understanding of his position. The jury was told that no matter what knavery Taylor had been guilty of it was criminal for a fellow citizen to take the matter of punishment into his own hands, and that when Pincher waylaid and shot that prosecutor, he was guilty of assault and battery with intent to kill. He was said that the judge would so charge the jury. Virtually, the judge did so charge the jury. Pincher wasn't after the jury as it filed into the room assigned for its deliberations he wondered what the were going to do about it in there.

Before the preliminary technicalities for the opening of the next case were completed, the constable announced that the jury was ready to present its verdict in the Pincher case. Once more the 12 men sat in the box. The foreman arose and, contrary, to usage began reading aloud the verdict from the back of the indictment.

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Tim Pincher, Not Guilty with the recommendation that the next time he shoots Taylor he uses buckshot."

stranger unknown, mysterious. But on the steps he was just Joe Carter, the boy I've gone to school with all my life."

With which conclusion she finished her cigarette and jumped into bed.

Before Sonia was up the next morning she was in disgrace. The news of her escapade the night before had been related over at least twenty-five different breakfast tables. And Vera, her married sister, had dressed all three of her children and walked over to tell her parents about it.

By the time Vera arrived Sonia's father had gone to work. Her mother was sewing and Sonia was clearing the table. She realized the moment she saw her sister just why she had come.

"Come on in and spread the glad tidings," she said grimly.

"Well, I certainly will. Children run out in the yard while Mother talks to grandma. The baby's asleep. I'll leave her in the buggy."

Mrs. Marsh looked up with an absent smile.

"What brings you over so early Vera? Sonia, my pincushion!"

"Vera has come over to tell on me, mother.

"Well, Sonia can you blame me? Imagine how I felt having Sarah Simpson phone me this morning—long in before the dishes are done to repeat what Tom told her."

Mrs. Marsh put down her sewing. "Chris, what are you talking about? What have you done, Sonia?"

"Let Vera tell you. I'll bet she knows more about it than I do."

"I know enough." declared her sister angrily. 'I never was so ashamed in my life. Sonia was in the boy's bedroom in the dark kissing Joe Carter when Sidney's mother opened the door."

"Sonia is this true?"

"Yes, mother."

"So that's the reason you came home early last night? And when I asked you, you didn't tell me."

Sonia said nothing. Her head was in the air. Mrs. Marsh sighed and took up her sewing again.

"I don't know what I'm going to do with you. You don't tell me anything. I know no more about you than if you were some one else's child."

There were tears in her eyes. Like a flash Sonia was at her side.

"Mother, darling! I'm sorry."

"Well, why would you do a thing like that? You know you shouldn't go into a bedroom with any boy."

"And in the dark, too." put in Vera.

"You shut up," said Sonia to her sister. "I don't know why we come in on this. And I dont know why I did it. So there! Mother, don't cry please!"

"But I cannot understand. Sonia, hand me my pincushion! No wonder you aren't invited anywhere when you act like that."

This being only too true, there was no answer for it. Sonia went back to her dishes again, and her mother began to baste the hem in the foulard skirt. Vera sat, thin lips compressed.

"Well, mother, I suppose you aren't going to do anything about it?"

"What can I do, Vera? She isn't a child any more."

"Mrs. Underwood said even Tom was horrified. No more automobile rides for you in that car, young lady."

"Who cares!" snapped Sonia.

As she was speaking the telephone rang. With no gentle hand she lifted the receiver.

"Yes?"

"Oh, hello, Tom."

"Im all right. Why?"

"Oh no! A little thing like that didn't bother me."

Then Vera and her mother heard the buzzing of an insistent young voice. Then Sonia—

"Well, I promised to go downtown But ill go. You'll be here at 2? All right."

As she left the telephone the laughter in her narrow eyes zapped out.

"Vera, go on home and tell Tom's mother he's talking me for a ride this afternoon. Go on, darling. Do!"

"I'll do nothing of the kind," Vera replied sharply, then collected her family and left.

INSTALLMENT 2

Sonia stepped into the Underwood sedan at 2 o'clock. Here eyes were as guileless as a saint's, her smile copied from Mona Lisa. She sat silent, drinking in the beauty of the country road. Tom's voice brought her sharply from her reverie.

"What did you say?"

"I said you don't seem to realize that you're in awfully bad. Sonia Sidney's mother is telling that all over town."

Sonia shrugged slim shoulders with out answering.

"My God. Sonia, it's serious. You'll be compromised before that old hen gets through with you."

"I can't be bothered, Tom. Please!"

"Besides,' he continued in a different tone, "I was surprised at you myself. I didn't know you gave a hang for Joe Carter."

"Sonia opened her green eyes.

"I don't. Oh, Joe's all right. I like him."

"Then why would you pick on him to land into a dark room?"

"It isn't necessary for me to explain my conduct to you, Tom Underwood."

"But, Sonia, it 's."

"Why?"

The boy gulped and something in his honest blue eyes hurt Sonia.

"Because I have hoped sometime we could be engaged. And I would not want my wife to be doing things like that before we were married."

"Well don't worry, Tom! Your wife won't."

He stopped the car and gripped her hands hard,

"Don't you talk like that, so hard and flippant! You're not like that. I know you're not."

"Don't. Leave me alone. Let go my hands."

"I won't. Not until you tell me you didn't mean that. You care for me. Sonia: a little bit. I know you do."

"I don't care for any one who picks me to pieces all the time."

"I'm not picking you to pieces, dear. You know I've loved you ever since the grades. It just kills me to know you've done a thing like that. And to have my mother know it. It will turn her against you."

"You told her yourself."

"I did not. Mrs. Maine called up before breakfast. Then mother hopped me about it. I wasn't going to tell her.

Sonia relaxed a little with his last words. He drew her closer, hungrily.

"Sonia, you're wonderful! You're different from any other girl in town. You have more of whatever-it-is than a dozen of them put together."

"More of what, Tom?" This was delicious. The young girls vanity drank it in.

"I don't know what to call it. You don't chatter like the rest. You are neither sweet-tempered nor kind. But theres something about you.....

Oh, Sonia!"

He lifted her vivid. wistful face.

"Won't you wait for me, Sonia? I've loved you so long.

"But you're going away to college." "Only four years."

"Four years! Why, I'd be 21. Anything might happen in that time. I'm going to Chicago and go to work." Tom released her then and started the car.

"If you're going to Chicago it's all up. You'll never come back."

"That suits me perfectly. I'd be glad never to see this no-mans land again, ever."

Silence then, for a mile or more. Sonia's eyes were gleaming with visions of lights and jewels—and a dance ing gown of silver cloth.—But the boy's eyes were full of pain.

"I won't believe you're as hard-boiled as you try to make yourself seem."

"Believe anything you like."

"Inside of you there is a sweet, tender little Sonia, who is shy and afraid."

"Oh, all right!"

"I can see it in your face. Sonia. The other is nothing but pose."

"I never pose," she assured him cold ly. "You ought to know me better than that."

He heeded the car back toward town As they neared the city limits he said earnestly: "Will you promise me one thing?"

"That all depends."

"Well, it shouldn't be so hard. Just promise to consider what I've said this afternoon before you make any definite plans. I can get my father to give you a job in the store if you have to work. And we'll be engaged. I'll get you a diamond Sonia."

"When?"

"This week. I have a $1,000 check from my grandfather."

She lifted her head and looked at him clearly.

"Do you really think my freedom can be bought with a diamond ring?"

"But don't go to Chicago, Sonia, that's all."

"No. I should stay here in this awful town and wait for you four years."

"Think it over anyway. Promise that you'll consider it before you definitely make up your mind to go away."

"You ask me to do that, knowin' your mother would simply laugh at it?"

His eyes were humble but very eager. Sonia watched him curiously.

"We could win mother over in time, I want you, Sonia."

Suddenly she turned away.

"I'll think about it," she said.

When Sonia reached home after her ride with Tom Underwood she found her mother feverishly pressing Mrs. Stillwater's foulard.

Sonia watched her silently. She occasionally wondered about her mother How she could endure the strain of monotonous sewing day after day on other women's clothes! Her lips were drawn into a tight line now. Her cheeks were flushed.

"She's worrying about me," thought Sonia.

"Mother," she said, suddenly, "are you going to tell dad about last night?"

"I haven't decided yet, Sonia. I don't know what I ought to do. I'd certainly tell him if I thought it would do any good."

"It would just make him feel bad, her daughter insinuated softly.

Mrs. Marsh moistened the tip of her forefinger and tested the iron.

"You should have thought of that sooner. It's too late to try to save anybody's feelings now. It's probably all over town."

"Well, supposing it is. There wasn't anything so disgraceful about it. Believe me I'm not the first girl in that class to get kissed, in a dark room, either. Look at the way Janice Peterson acts all the time."

"Yes, I know. But you can't afford to be talked about. It would be different if your father were president of a bank or something."

"Not that that makes it right," she went on quickly. "No matter who you are, spooning cheapens a girl. Makes her common."

"Poppycock, mother! I suppose you never kissed any one but dad."

Mrs. Marsh sighed. But her eyes evaded Sonia's.

"I ran away from boarding school to marry your father. I hadn't had much chance to be kissing anybody before that."

She folded the foulard carefully between layers of tissue paper and wrapped a string about the box.

"I promised Mrs. Stillwater you'd take this over when you came home. She wants to wear it to a dinner tonight."

"Oh, mother, you aren't going to take me carry that box over to Mrs. Stillwater's."

"I don't see how it's going to get there any other way."

"Let her send her wonderful doctor son after it."

"Don is here for only a week. He has about half year in the hospital and his mother said they have engagements for every minute of the time he is here."

"Yes, of course. She'd make him sound as popular as she could. As if any one couldn't be a doctor who had the money and the training he's had."

"Well, you don't begrudge it to him do you Sonia? I don't see that it's anything to you. Run along now."

Sonia sullenly took the box.

"If you never do anything worse than carry a box under your arm, you won't have anything to be ashamed of."

"Rub it in," grumbled Sonia, swinging down the hot street. "Poor mother. I don't know that I blame her. But I can't stand it if she tells dad."

Her mood was not a happy one as she turned in at the Stillwater home.

Her cheeks were flushed and not from the two relentless June sun. As she pushed the electric bell at the side door of the large white house she was conscious of feeling goaded and uncomfortable. And in her irritation Don Stillwater answered the door..

"How do you do, Dr. Stillwater," Sonia said, stiffly. "Here is the dress my mother promised to send."

"Oh, hello Sonia How you've grown up while I've been away!"

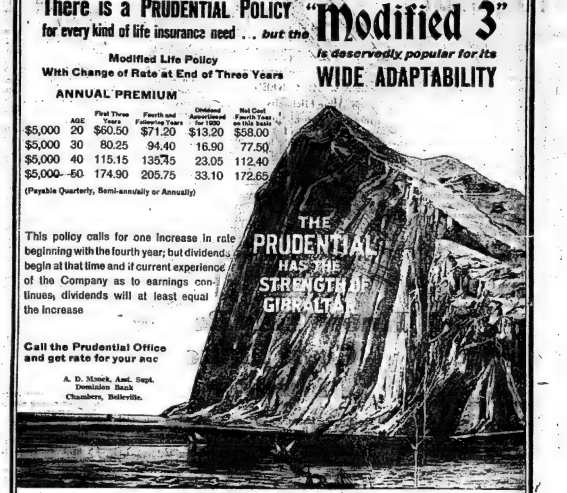
"What did you expect me to do?" Don laughed.

"But your disposition hasn't improved say. I can see that."

He took the box. As Sonia turned sharply from the door he said kindly: "See here, Sonia you look all in. It's a shame you had to carry that box over here through the heat. Come in, and I'll get you a glass of lemonade."

"No thanks. I'm use dto the heat."

"I could have come after the dress just as well as not. Mother is away—an appointment with the dentist. Come in, wont you?"



Sonia hesitated. And he misunderstood her hesitation.

"Mary's in the kitchen. It will be perfectly all right."

Then Sonia's sullen eyes lighted with laughter.

"Don't think that worried me. I'm already in disgrace."

Confederation Life Association,
Gentlemen:

Policy No.

Please accept my sincere thanks for your cheque for $965.80, being $1,000, less the balance of first premium for the assurance my husband took with your Company. My husband had paid only $5.00 for his policy before his death; he had signed a note for sixty days for the balance of his premium, making my cheque $965.80 instead of $1,000.00.

I am very thankful to have been successful in having my husband take out this insurance a few weeks ago. I am also thankful for the promptness with which the Company sent me the settlement of the policy. I will strongly recommend the Confederation Life.

Very gratefully yours,

The New Confederation Series of Policies, with Double Indemnity Accident and Total Disability Benefits, and participating in profits, provide the most economical and modern form of insurance obtainable. We urge you to write for particulars and learn how thoroughly desirable the policies are.

MITZ AND LYNN FAMILIES MEET

Pleasey Reunion is Held at Oak Lake Recently

One of those pleasing events which do far too seldom took place recently, where the different families of the "Mitz and Lynn clan" gathered at "Oak Lake" and held a happy reunion. A few of the members of both families were unavoidably absent, but those that were fortunate enough to be present enjoyed to the full pleasure of the day, in renewing friendships and having a general good time together. It was the "Comic" around whom the interests of the company centred, and also for whom the get- together company was planned, in order to give a happy welcome to some former residents of this vicinity. They being Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Mitz, and son Ross, of Ottawa, who motored up from Ottawa to spend a few days at his boyhood home at Ivanhoe. Mr. Mitz is a younger brother of Mr. Gardiner Mitz of Holloway, and Mr. Charles Mitz who resides on the "Old Homestead, at Ivanhoe, and also Mrs. George Hollinger of Moira. Mr. Mitz has been a resident of Ottawa for the past twenty-eight years,accepted a position in the "Department of the Interior" in the summer of 1902. The Mitz family rank among the first settlers of Huntingdon Township, for the father of the above mentioned family.

The late Mr. Lewis Mitz, often related to the members of his family, how he well remembered, when he was a boy of only nine years of age, that his father the late Henry Mitz, moved up to Huntingdon from the old Bay Bay district, and purchased the farm, the old homestead, where Mr. Charlie Mitz still resides.

That their cases in 1854 and at that time, what is now known as the Belleville and Madoc highway, was nothing but abridle path.

Mr. Henry Mitz, father of the late Lewis Mitz was a staunch "United Empire Loyalist", and also a staunch Methodist, who worshipped in the "Old Hay Bay Church", the first McGnodist Church built in Canada. He was an eyewitness of that memorable tragedy which took place in the year 1812, when a boat load of young people attempted to cross over the Bay to attend Quarterly Service at the old historical church at Hay Bay, but on account of the boat being over crowded ten out of a company of eighteen were drowned. This brought deep sorrow to many homes, and cast a gloom over the whole community.

The younger element of the party at the reunion spent the afternoon bowling, swimming, and the usual sports, while the older members conversed in groups together. The day sped by, all too quickly and the time for leave-taking came, when "Good Bye" had to be said to the Oshawa friends as they motored home that evening, leaving about one-thirty, accompanied by Mrs. Emma Stillmore of Hawdon, who is a sister of Mrs. Mitz and all are hoping to be spared to meet again in the near future, amid such favorable surroundings as on that occasion.

Her Painful Backache Quickly Relieved

Prince Edward Island Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 15 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety percent of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

LIPTON'S HOPES ARE BLASTED AS ENTERPRISE WINS

HOLDCROFT COMPANY AWARDED CONTRACT FOR $43,525 ON BRIDGE

Three Members of Council Against Recommendation of Award

AID FROM OTTAWA

Lower Bridge Condition is Explained to City Council

Preliminary work in the construction of a new reinforced concrete bridge was started today by the Holdcroft Construction Company, builder of the lower bridge, this form having received a mandate from the city council last night at an adjourned meeting of that body to proceed with the construction at a tender price of $43,525.00 A recommendation "that the tender of the Holdcroft Construction Company Ltd., for $43,525.00 being the lowest tender received for the new upper bridge be accepted," was passed in committee with Alderman Wetten, Hyde, and Tice dissenting and later two by-laws, one to proceed with the construction, the other to ratify an agreement between the City of Belleville and the construction company was passed. Mr. Holdcroft was present at the meeting of the council and stated that he would proceed at once and the bridge would be finished in record time.

Cold Weather Construction

There were three other tenders given on the bridge namely Patterson Construction Company, Belleville $47,180.00, Raynor Construction Company Toronto $49,979.00 and Provincial Dredging Company $46,497.00. The tender of the company accepted by the council was higher than the tender when the bridge was first contemplated and this is due to the contractor meeting adverse weather conditions. If the pouring of the cement has to take place while the heavy frosts are on the cement will have to be heated and this will require extra expense. However Mr. Holdcroft will try to get all the cement poured before the heavy frosts set in.

Aid From Ottawa

In connection with the increased expense the council are looking forward to the Dominion Government bearing at least part if not all of the extra expense, though the voting of twenty millions of dollars for unemployment. This bridge will give needed employment to a number in Belleville and it being erected at this time with that end principally in view. This is a public work undertaken under the Government scheme and applications for relief will be made at once by the city council through the proper channels.

Lower Bridge

Some pointed questions were asked consulting Engineer, Mr. Archie S. Creelock respecting the new lower bridge and the council was informed that the bridge is built entirely to specifications and the settling which has occurred in the western span was foreseen but it was impossible to forestall the extra settling that took place. The bridge at the present time is on the rock the entire length and will endure very many years. Apparently the under timber or trestle work holding the bridge went down to bed rock when the pouring of cement was completed due to the heavy weight and there is only a settlement of about one inch which will in no way affect the safety of the bridge in years to come.

Supervision

Mr. Creelock in an answer to Alderman Wetten stated that he would not say the bridge had settled. There is a slight depression, the cause being already given.

Ald. Hyde wished to know of the engineer what supervision meant and Mr. Creelock replied to do all humanely possible to ensure a perfect job

FRANCE UNEASY OVER BENNETT'S TARIFF

PARIS, Sept 17.—CP Cable —Canada's new tariff changes are creating uneasiness in France. Although full details are not yet available there is already a hint in French official circles of possible reprisal. One French official comments "It is that the French were anxious largest purchaser of Canadian wheat in Europe although the extent does come via the English market. The situation, however, has not been considered by the French cabinet.

Tobacco Workers Unpaid, Seek Nightly Shelter Beneath Trees

WINDSOR, Ont. Sept 18—CP—Some sixty former employees of the Turkish Tobacco Company at Leamington are reported to be sleeping in the fields with only the trees for protection as a result of the company's inability to pay wages. Workmen of wide London's guest English harvested the tobacco crop and were provided with bed and board while doing so but when the company was unable to make payments, the employees were unable to secure further shelter. The welfare workers have arranged for temporary shelter until the company raises sufficient funds to pay the wages.

Reports of Mexican Warfare Exaggerated

Canadian Trade Commissioner Speaks to Chamber Commerce

That Mexico is not nearly as bad a country as it is painted in the daily press, but in truth is a tranquil, fine country, is the claim of C. Noel Wilde, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner to Mexico and seven other South American countries. Mr. Wilde was the guest of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their regular luncheon at noon today and he painted a glowing picture of Mexico as it really is.

"Mexico," he said, "is not so dangerous a country as is alleged. True, they do have a revolution once in a while and some people are killed but you never see it. I don't think any of those events ever happen any nearer than five hundred miles to Mexico City where I am stationed. We only see these things in the newspapers."

Fundamentally, the speaker claimed, there is not a more quiet country in the world than Mexico, Mexico too, is an extremely pleasant place in which to live and is fast becoming a popular summer tourist resort.

Although Mexico is bankrupt, and is not paying her foreign debt, nevertheless she is building many roads and in all directions.

The air service, too, is unexcelled, and Mr. Wilde said he could complete a trip in a few hours that at one time took nearly two weeks.

Mexico is trying to build herself up. "The hundreds of thousands of acres of land that once belonged to two or three large landowners have been seized and have been given back to the peons, he said. "Mexico, instead of being a country of distress, misery and heat is fast becoming a tourist country, the finest in the world," he claimed.

Mr. Elliott the local representative at the Associated British Boards of Trade in London, gave a brief report of that gathering.

LOCAL TAG DAY TO BOOST FUNDS FOR BLIND FOLK

Canadian National Institute Is Doing a Worthy Work

EXTENSIVE LIBRARY

Twenty-one Blind Persons in Belleville Under Auspices I. O. D. E.

Rev. Arthur Pickering, L. S. T., organizer of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Toronto, is in the city organizing for a tag day here shortly under the auspices of St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. at a date to be set. There was a tag day here in 1929 when $515 was collected.

There are so many cases of blindness, stated Mr. Pickering to the Ontario Intelligencer today, Our job is to cover cases of blindness and failing sight. We are prepared to stand all expenses in connection with efforts to save sight of those who cannot meet the expenses themselves.

Officially there are in Ontario 1350 blind and in Canada 7000, of which 2100 are in Quebec.

Tests are being made in all centres of population with school children to discover failing of sight. This check-up has been started in Toronto where 20,000 children were examined.

The blind library in braille at Toronto contains over 12,000 volumes, from philosophy to light fiction which will be loaned to the blind in any part of the country. The Courier, the magazine of the Canadian National Institute is sent to every blind person.

The institute has a home teaching staff, to which will help those suffering from blindness to read and write braille.

In Belleville there are 21 or 22 listed blind people, either totally blind or suffering from trouble of the sight.

Last year in Hastings County outside of Belleville the institute spent $2482. Figures for Belleville are not available.

When the date of the tag is set, Rev. Mr. Pickering will come to the city to deliver some addresses, probably in churches.

Mr. Pickering lost his eyesight three years ago. He had a pulpit in the Maritimes when life became dark to him.

Auto Tire was Loosed From Wheel

A peculiar accident, which fortunately ended with no serious results, occurred this morning on Dundas street. An American tourist party was proceeding east at a moderate rate when one of the tires blew out. It was loosened from the rim, rolled across the lawn leading to Mr. T. H. Chalmers' home, leaped over the railing and struck the roof. The velocity of the tire was such as to shatter several shakes of the verandah. It struck the building two hundred and fifty feet from the spot where the blow-out occurred. The tire was repaired and the party went on their way. The car was immediately stopped when the tire blew out.

Vanderbilt Pilots Trim American Boat to Victory At Newport

Newport, R. I. Sept. 18 (CP)—Flash— Enterprise wins.

After gaining a lead of approximately 200 yards the Shamrock was overcome by the Enterprise, which continued to expand the lead to about a mile. The Irish challenger set the pace for about twenty minutes but could not withstand the speed of the American defender.

A period of ten minutes elapsed between the turn of the Enterprise and the Shamrock at the first marker. The challenger passed at 12.12 .14 or almost a mile and a half behind the flying American. Any opposition from the Irish boat appeared to have ended at the conclusion of the first ten miles.

Newport, Rhode Island, Sept 18 (CP)—The United States sloop Enterprise today completed the successful defense of the ancient America's Cup when she won the fourth straight victory and the International series, four races to none.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18.—CP— The Shamrock Fifth and Enterprise competing in the fourth race for the America's cup crossed the line at 10.40 today. Shamrock again had the weather berth as the sloops crossed, the line but Enterprise the United States defender soon forged faster and opened up shortly. The British challenger lost much way when she came up to the line too fast and had to gybe up to avoid going over too soon. The advantage of the start was open to dispute.

DUBS, DUFFERS BATTLE, DUFFERS LOSING BY FOUR

Dinner Held in Clubhouse Following Season's Game

GUESTS PRESENT

One of the most successful sporting events of the local golfing season was staged at the Bay of Quinte Country Club yesterday afternoon when the "Dubs" and the "Duffers" held their annual tournament. The "Dubs" were finally successful beating the "Duffers" by nineteen points to fifteen. Here is the result of the tournament:—

"Dubs"—R. J. E. Graham, 3; Jack Ryan 0; R. J. Wray 3; George Stokes 0; Major Newman 3; Jack Fisher 3; Dr. Tennent 1; E. Tilley 2; R. J. Graham 0; R. D. Ponton 1; Dr. Faulkner 0; F. B. Smith 0; W. A. Parker, 3; C. Cameron 1, Total 19.

"Duffers"—A. McConnell 0; S. R. Burrows 3; Roy Stafford 0; E. V. Hiley 3; Dr. V. Blakelee 0; J. V. Doyle 0; J. S. McKeown 1; J Short 0; H. A. Thomson 1; H Shelley 2; Rev. Robert Hill 1; Bruce Graham 2; Colonel A. E. Bywater 0; A. Schryver 3. Total 15

After the matches a dinner was held in the clubhouse at which banquet several prominent guests were present. Included among these were Dr. Christie the president of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Mr. Leduc, General Sales Manager of the Willys-Overland Automobile Corporation at Toronto, Professor Graham of Ontario Agricultural College H. G. Newman of Brantford.

Dr. V. Blakelee, the president of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, made a short address. The finances of the club he reported were in excellent condition.

Mr. Leduc and Professor Graham also made short addresses.

The many friends of Dr. Christie in this city will be pleased to learn that he has completely recovered from the recent severe illness from which he suffered.

This was practically the last big tournament of the year. There still remains the Country Club closing dance and the presentation of prizes won by the players during the year.

Two-Year Old Child Is Hit-and-Run Victim

Berick Rogers, Murray Township, Instantly Killed West of Trenton

Little two-year-old Berick Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers, of Murray township, is dead today, the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

Between six and six-thirty o'clock last night the child, who was apparently walking along the highway all by himself, about four miles west of Trenton, was hit by a car, it is alleged, driven by a woman. The automobile is described as being grayish brown in color. It is alleged that it failed to stop and police along the highway were notified to be on the lookout for it.

William Deline, Pinnacle street, Belleville, who was the only eye-witness of the affair, believes that the child was struck by the car driven by the woman, who was in front of him, and was thrown back against his car. He immediately stopped, but the kiddy had met instantaneous death. Provincial Constable McBrien, of Brighton, promptly investigated the accident. A coroner's jury was empanelled with Dr. Dure, of Brighton, in charge and was thrown back against his car. The body's remains were viewed and the inquest was adjourned.

What a two-year-old baby was doing walking along the highway all by itself has yet to be determined. The parents were not with it and were prostrated with grief when they heard of its death. The baby suffered a fractured skull and a broken neck. Nothing has been heard or seen of the alleged hit-and-run motorist.

ALLEGE CAPONE LEADS AUTO RING

Chicago Rackateer Is Accused Chief of Theft Gang

New York, Sept. 17.—Al Scarface) Capone, Chicago underworld chief, was accused of ring the head of a nationwide automobile theft ring today by William S. Hayes, reputed member of a wealthy New Haven, Conn., family, who was arrested on a charge of selling stolen cars.

Hayes, who said he was a college graduate, told police that he had acted as sales agent of a local stolen machine ring, which may be but a division of a larger group operating throughout the country with headquarters at Chicago under the domination of Capone.

Sergt. Bernard J. Dowd, of the police automobile squad, said Hayes admitted disposing of nearly a score of stolen high-priced motor cars.

SHIP WRECKAGE TELLSMUTE TALE

Remains of South Coast Found in Pacific Ocean

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18 —The wreckage of the steam schooner South Coast, which apparently foundered 200 miles north of San Francisco, was located by two steamers late yesterday.

Coastguards headquarters ordered the cutter Chelan to steam full speed to the spot in an effort to save surviving crew members. Between 15 and 20 men were aboard the South Coast.

The steamer Benbow picked up one of her empty lifeboats, reported the hydrographic office of the 12th Naval Reserve District, while the steamer Tejon sighted numerous pieces of wreckage floating over a large area 27 miles south of Cape Blanco.

The South Coast left Portland, Ore on September 14th for San Francisco.

WOMAN FATALLY HURT BY HORSES AT ANNUAL FAIR

Mrs. Frank Howard of Windsor Died of Injuries at Colborne

INQUEST OPENED

Drivers of Animals Exonerated of Blame in Track Fatality

Mrs. Frank Howard, a resident of Windsor, received fatal injuries when she was struck by two race horses at Colborne Fair yesterday afternoon, she died within half an hour of the accident.

Mrs. Howard who formerly resided at Wicklow, four miles west of Colborne had been visiting at the home for the past two months and had intended to leave for her home in the border city today. She had been a guest at the home of Mrs. Kernaghan who had accompanied the victim of the accident to the Fair. Several people had been crossing the track while the race was in progress and Mrs. Howard started across. Apparently she was oblivious of the warning shouts and of the horses were rounding the turn, she was knocked down by one of the animals. Another horse directly behind struck the unfortunate woman with its hoofs while its sulky passed directly over her body. Subsequent post mortem examinations revealed that she suffered from a broken neck and three ribs were broken and her body was bruised. The accident occurred at about 4 o'clock.

She was unconscious when picked up and taken to Dr. Pembers office, she died half an hour later. Provincial police investigated and the evidence of eye-witnesses sufficient to exonerate the drivers of the horses of blame. Coroner Dr. McClements ordered an inquest which was opened at Colborne last night. F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg represented the Crown.

The late Mrs. Howard had prepared to leave for Windsor and her two daughters arrived yesterday to accompany her home. Her husband died six years ago at Colborne. She leaves two daughters and two sons. Interment will be made at Wicklow.

BANDITS OBTAIN $50,000 AS LOOT

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 17.—Posses maintained vigils throughout southeastern Nebraska last night as bandits who robbed the Lincoln National Bank here of more than $50,000.

The bandits rushed into two groups as soon as they drove to the front of the bank. Four men, armed with submachine guns stood outside. Twenty patrons and employes of the bank were forced to lie on the floor while the quartet rifled cash and security drawers.

Officials said the robbers had taken $19,521 in cash and between $35,000 and $50,000 in securities.

RE-OPENING OF Y.M.C.A.

Plans for the re-opening of the Young Men's Christian Association for the Autumn are being prepared by Secretary Joe Shortt. The pool is being repainted this week and the gymnasium and showers are undergoing repairs. At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors the Chairman advised a number of plans which were discussed. The membership and financial drive will be instituted and improvements will be made in all departments. The officials of the Y will co-operate with the home, church and school in a well-rounded program. New equipment will be added for the social as well as the physical programs. No changes will be made in the personnel of the staff.

WILL HOLD FIRST MEETING

After a summer of inactivity the Y's Men will hold the first meeting of the Autumn season next Monday night. The nominating committee have been busy for the past week and a new slate of officers will be re-elected. The Club has been signally honoured this year in the fact that Newton Thompson has again been elected President of International Y's Men. Mr. Thompson has served on every committee and has acted as President of the Belleville Club since its inauguration.

STOCK JUDGING

In the district stock judging competitions held on the grounds with the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition some of the winners were:—In Dairy Cattle —Harry Faulkner, Halleyw, 1st; Elmer Wood, Crookston, 2nd; In Swine —Frank Staff, Bloomfield 1st. In Sheep—Harmon Montgomery, 3rd.

GIFT FROM COMPANY

Mayor George A. Reid was the recipient Tues. of a beautiful glass fruit container mounted on silver, the gift of the Great West Life Assurance Company, as an award for leading all other agents in a competition inaugurated for the months of May and June. Mayor Reid has the Belleville district to work and he was in competition with all districts of central part of the Province.

LEAGUE HOLDS TEA

This afternoon a successful tea was given at the home of Mrs. J. P. Dolan Victoria avenue, under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. The ideal afternoon brought many visitors to the affair and the guests were received by Mrs. Dolan and Mrs. J. M. Trudeau, president of the League. The thrilling rooms were decorated in shades of rose, with masses of autumn flowers in varied colours. The tea was arranged by the hospitality committee of the League of which Mrs. Fitzpatrick is convenor, and members of this committee were invlow in their efforts to make the function a success. The tea table had tall candles of rose, with assonable flowers forming the centre-piece. During the afternoon an interesting programme was given. Those taking part were Misses Margaret Forster, Catherine Smith and Bernadette Black.

BEGIN TRAINING

Among the probationers from this district who entered the Kingston General Hospital yesterday as nurses-in-training were Gertrude Sutton, R. R. No. 7, Napanee; Grace Ballyne, R. R. No. 4, Trenton; Margaret Hughes, Napanee; Muriel Parry, Belleville; Morren Coulter, R. R. No. 4, Trenton; Grace McKee, Stirling. THIRTY FOUR TO NAPANEE

The local rugby season will open one week from Saturday in Napanee when the Belleville Collegiate Institute will send two teams, its junior and senior representatives, to the eastern town. Coach Shiels announces that he will take about thirty four players with him to make up the two teams.

ATTACKED BY CAT

Doreen the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Harker, Dunbar street, was painfully bitten by a large cat this morning while at play. The police were called and found the feline perched on the limb of a tree. It was quite hostile to Constable Evans in advance but the latter succeeded in knocking the cat to the ground with a long pole and it was destroyed. The angry animal attacked the tot without any provocation whatever. A physician was called and the wounds which were of a superficial nature were dressed and the youngster is suffering no ill effects.

CEMENT STEPS COMPLETED

New cement steps at Corby Public Library have been completed and the patrons after a few days of finding their way to the reading rooms and circulation department by an exciting subterranean passage can now enter by the ordinary way. The top step has been enlarged to form a small platform and railings are being arranged on each side for assistance during icy weather.

QUOITS DELAYED

The local Horseshoe Pitching Society had hoped to have a series of tournament games with Napanee this week. Unfortunately, one of the officials stated it was found necessary to postpone the matches as the result of the Kiwanis Karnival, a good number of the players not being able to turn out.

A GOOD MARKET

A bright sunny day ushered in a good mid-week market this morning. Although there were few vendors, the market square was quite crowded shortly before noon. The last of the corn, and not very good looking corn at that, sold today at fifteen cents the dozen. Cucumbers were offered at thirty cents the basket and potatoes at $1.15 a bag. There was a big display of melons, ranging in price from five cents each to twenty-five cents. Sir Lawrence apples retailed at $1.60 the bushel. Blue Damson plums sold at thirty-five cents a peck and tomatoes at twenty-five cents a basket. Pears were offered at ten cents a quart

ONLY ONE CASE.

There is only one case of disease that might be called contagious in the district at present, Dr. G. S. Cronk, M. C. H., stated to The Ontario Intelligencer today. This is a case of scarlet fever, on Hooker street. "We haven't even got any diphtheria", the doctor said. This is a splendid record. Infantile paralysis seems to have missed the city this year, but has struck in all the nearby cities.

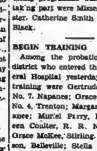
TO SPEAK TO MANUFACTURERS.

Belleville manufacturers and members of the city council will gather in the Dickson Inn room at 8.15 this evening to hear an address from W. A. Harden, manager of the gas department of the city. Mr. Harden will outline the desirability of manufacturers using more gas.

ACCEPTS NEW CHARGE.

It is reported that Rev. Harold Reid to whom a call was extended by the Foxboro, Fuller and Roslin charge of the Presbyterian Church, has accepted the call and will in the near future be inducted in the charge. The Ontario Intelligencer called Rev. Reid but was informed he was out of the city. Members of the district board were then called and confirmed the report, that the call had been accepted.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER GIVEN



At the home of Mrs. J. P. Collins, 311 Lingham street last night a large number of girl friends gathered to honor Miss Lillian Kent, a bride to be in the near future. A miscellaneous shower was given and Miss Kent received many useful and beautiful gifts. The evening was spent in cards, Mrs. Earl Donnelly, Mrs. P. Yorke and Miss Kent were the winners while Miss Gladys Rowbotham was the runner prize. A dainty buffet lunch was served the party breaking up it the midnight hour but not before a hearty vote of thanks was made to the hostess for a delightful evening.

VICE PRESIDENT HERE

W. D. Robb, vice president of the Canadian National Railways, Toronto, was a visitor in the city today. Mr. Robb while in the city visited his son, Mr. Morse Robb, Bridge street east.

CARNIVAL WENT OVER, GUEST IS SHOW FEATURE

2,300 People Milled About In Armouries on Wednesday

POPULARITY SHOWN

Kiwanians are smiling today. The Carnival went over last night. It went over in a big way. The success of the show last night may possibly be attributed to the presence of Jack Guest, Canadas' premier scaman and holder of the Diamond Sculls, emblematic of the championship of the world. At any rate twenty-three hundred people milled and crowded about the armouries floor and the enthusiasm which was demonstrated. The models drew rounds of full bloom last night.

From the time the first mannequin stepped forth in a dazzling, alluring evening frock, until the last barker had closed his booth, there were few dull moments. The models drew rounds of applause as they strutted the very latest modes decreed by Dame Fashion

Jack Guest, handsome and debonair sculler proved that he excels on the public platform as well as in his frail shell. He was introduced by Crown Attorney Bryson Donnan who briefly traced Jacks career from the time he was pulling an oar in the Argo crew until the great triumph at the Henley this year. Jacks story is an unbill right to reach the top. He made a speech that would do credit to many a member of parliament. In his modesty he reminded his audience that scull log is no sinecure. He reviewed the endless months of training that are necessary for the student of rowing to reach the pinnacle of speed. Tired muscles, aching backs and blistered tendons are all part of the game which must be borne if the sculler is to succeed. His score of the Henley which he regards as the best-managed affair of its kind in the world. Jack hopes to bring more rowing honours to Canada in the future.

After his appearance on the platform he visited the booths and succeeded in taking home his quota of prizes. He made many friends last night all of whom expressed wishes for renewed successes next year. Jack motored to the city and he arrived at the armouries just when the committee were frantically searching for him. They had been expressed that he had been delayed.

In the reception room upstairs, Tommy Masons Commodores furnished a program of the latest dance melodies which appealed to the younger crowd.

The rolling pin contest was a laughter. It was finally won by Mrs. Lloyd who was successful in landing Riverai well-directed blows on the nose of the stuffed policeman. The models and several other ladies fired several volleys at the target, Mrs. Lloyd's aim was the best marksman of the crowd. Miss Della Jamieson, local mannequin, was the winner of the door prize last night. Captain Plunkett's orchestra rendered a number of dances while other members of the Merrymakers troupe entertained with solos and duets. The program will be changed again tonight.

The feature this evening will be the Ida Mae Hollywood Girls. Mr. Madden Adonis, here is your chance to cop a prize. Get out of the soup and fish for the best Sunday suit and the judges will tell you who is the most immaculate dresser in town. This is an innovation at the Carnival and it should prove a popular one.

and that he had tried to do.

Alderman McMillan stated that he was rather discomfited when he first met the depression but anyone that had watched the construction of the bridge knows that the work of the contractor was perfect and that the inspector in charge diligently carried out his duties. Ald. Kinnear asked if the situation was foreseen and could have been forestalled and the Engineer stated that a certain condition was foreseen but that it was not entirely foreseiled and under the conditions it could not be.

The only other item of business was the disposing of a water lot near the Corporation wharf to the British American Oil Company for $25.00. The Oil Company is doing extended building in the district and when the work is completed this city will be the distributing point for the central part of Eastern Ontario.

Four lakes which would receive the surplus water from the river and also act as storage tanks against the risk of a summer drought form the basis of one suggestion for doing away with any future risk of the Rivey Thames over flowing its banks.

WHAT TRUE PERFORMANCE MEANS TO YOU

"TRUE PERFORMANCE"—two simple words with a wealth of meaning—a victory long sought, now achieved by the new 1931 Brunswick Radio—a receiving set that faithfully recreates sound exactly as it is put on the air, nothing added, nothing taken away. This is what "TRUE PERFORMANCE" means to you—perfect home entertainment.

Completely armoured chassis, one dial control "uni-selector," tone control, rigid tuning scale, power, selectivity, sensitivity, all these perfected, as only Brunswick could, to the highest degree, makes possible Brunswick "TRUE PERFORMANCE."

By what it does a radio proves what it is. Performance is something definite, something you can easily judge for yourself. Visit your Brunswick dealer today, note the supreme beauty of the new cabinets, arrange for a demonstration, this only can reveal to you what "TRUE PERFORMANCE" really means.

Rides Around World at Least Once Year Not in Fact But on Highway

Day of a Traffic Cop on Provincial and City Roads

Very Human Men

Hundred Miles a Day on Highways and Fifty Miles a Day on City Streets

A traffic officer's job is not "all beer and skittles", according to Wesley O. Prink, local provincial highway patrolman who has chased speeders for the past six years. Mr. Prink has travelled one hundred and fifty thousand miles in that times on his bike, an equivalent to six times around the world. He travels on an average about one hundred miles a day. Formerly his territory extended from Picton on the south and Marmora on the north, and from Trenton on the west to Deseronto on the east. This year Lord S. Byles has appointed to assist Mr. Prink in this area and the latter patrols the front highway while Mr. Prink covers No. 14 from Picton to Marmora.

Mr. Prink has had approximately seven hundred and fifty convictions in six years and this is but a small fraction of the motorists who have been overhauled while travelling at a fast rate. Hundreds more have been sent on their way with admonishment.

Not Bad at All

The traffic cop holds terrors for the average motorist but in reality he is not such a bad fellow. He's only human and it's his job to see that the highways are made safer for travel. If you want to know anything about highways or travel regulations ask a traffic cop if he can't tell you, nobody can. He makes a close study of the problem.

Riding a motorcycle at a seventy-mile-an-hour clip doesn't constitute his job. He has to be able to take accurate measurements, must be a good botcher in judging skid-marks, must appear stern and callous in treating traffic violators, even those, pretty, dimpled female ones who will smile appealingly in the hope that the H.T.O. will just pass her up this time. "Anyway I was only doing forty-five, officer and I won't again" she pleads. "Sorry, young lady, but this will be five and costs." "But officer——" He is adamant, she must pay her fine.

When you see a traffic cop skidding along on his bike, don't think he's having a good time. He is being shaken to pieces, his eyes are red and bloodshot from the dust and he's tired of whizzing landscape.

Reckless Accidents

Bert Prink, the city traffic cop, one of the above, travels about fifty miles a day, and his territory extends from Albert College to the Hospital, and from the Government Dock to the G.N.R. Depot. He was appointed this Spring and scores of city drivers felt that were almost justified in committing homicide when they were faced with the uniformed "copper" as he breezed around the corner to find one cutting out of a designated Stop-street. Chief Kidd is quite convinced that the establishment of the new post has resulted in a decrease in motor accidents in the city.

Motorists are prone to drive more carefully with young Mr. Prink on the job. Not nearly all the offenders are prosecuted. He warns many. Even with the lower bridge closed it was felt that the accident rate would mount here, but Belleville has been singularly free from many serious crashes. Files in "Prink of Shape"

The motorcycle holds a great fascination for the Prink family and although the junior member of the duo suffered a broken leg in a crash this year, he was back on his bike, even before the injury was fully mended. Both admit it is somewhat dangerous but they like it. Their machines are always in "the pink of shape". The brakes are adjusted properly focussed strikes are adjusted properly. tires carry a regulated amount of air. He has been a splendid assistant to Mr. Prink, Sr. The highway has been well patrolled and the accident rate has been low.

Yes, verily, great respect is paid for the exalted traffic cop.

Collegiate Organize Into Central Ontario Association to Foster Sport and Debating Schedule of Rugby Drawn up at Collegiate Meeting

OTHER ACTIVITY

There must be a tinge of fall in the air for last night at the Collegiate Institute representatives of the various collegiates in the district met to consider and form a league for the advancement of football and to foster literary and other activities. Much attention was paid to football, a game which has increased in popularity with the years and is now the ranking pastime for fall sport. A league was formed consisting of five teams: Picton, Trenton, Napanee, Albert College and Belleville Collegiates and the winner will enter the playdowns in Interscholastic series in the fall pastime. To advance every other line of sport among these collegians an Association known as the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association and a strong executive was elected to carry out the objects of the newly formed association. The province has been divided into four districts, namely, the Bay of Quinte District, or Central Ontario; Georgian Bay District, Niagara District and Lake Ontario District. The president of the Bay of Quinte district elected last night will be the presiding president for all four districts for the coming year and four vice-presidents, one for each district shall carry on for the president and assist him in the work.

It will be impossible to give the constitution as adopted in its entirety but these sports columns will carry excerpts from the constitution at various times in order to familiarize the different schools with the laws especially the eligibility rule, which governs the association. Not only will a senior series in the football be run but the collegiates looked ahead to future years when the juniors will be the seniors of tomorrow, and they formed also a junior league to be held in connection with the senior schedule These junior games will be played as parts of double headers on some occasions. There were only three teams represented for the juniors, Napanee, Belleville and Trenton.

The league will open on September 27th and continue till October 29th. The junior league will be opened on the same date and continue till November. Any game scheduled for a Wednesday afternoon will commence at three-thirty till the afternoon, the Saturday games at 2:30 p.m. and the doubleheaders at one-thirty. The following schedule was adopted without dissent and should provide plenty of sport for those, who like the coon coat weather.

Senior Schedule

September 27—Belleville at Napanee Trenton at Albert College.

October 1—Belleville at Picton; Napanee at Trenton.

This Great Healing Oil Must Banish Eczema an Skin Troubles

Or Your Money Back

Make up your mind to-day that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well. Never mind what caused it—you've probably been, like a lot of other people, convinced that the only thing to use was an ointment or salve (some of them are very good) but in the big majority of cases these sticky salves simply clog the pores, and the condition primarily remains the same.

Go to Dolan The Druggist and Doyle's Drug Store or any good drug store to-day and get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength).

The very first application will give you relief, and a few short treatments will thoroughly convince you that by sticking faithfully to it for a short while your skin troubles will be a thing of the past.

One bottle we know will show you beyond all question that you have at last discovered one sure way to restore your skin to perfect health.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful, penetrating antiseptic oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue and that it must give complete satisfaction or your money cheerfully refunded.

THE MODERN METHOD

The barrier of distance is a thing of the past. Now miles are no handicap, for the telephone is a lightning voice-bearer. Over 70,000 times a day the people of Ontario and Quebec place out-of-town calls. It is a constantly growing habit. And an inexpensive one.

GREEN, LINTON KINGSTON WON ACKERMAN CUP

32 Rinks Took Part in Annual Scotch Doubles Bowling Tournament

GOOD WEATHER

Consistently working their way thru still opposition, Green and Linton of Kingston, won the Ackerman trophy for the Scotch Doubles competing for on the local bowling greens yesterday. The games were not concluded until the early hours of the day but many stayed to witness the presentation of the prize by Charles Bulman, president of the club. Thirty-two double rinks from Belleville, Stirling, Norwood, Desoronto, Kingston, Rockwood and Tweed took part in the competition and all were enthusiastic for the hospitality received and beautiful weather that greeted the players. The greens were in excellent condition and some fine bowling was witnessed by the large gallery.

Three grounds were played with four rinks emerging from those who started. Bulman and Embury of Belleville headed the list with 49 points, Green and Linton and Elliott and McFarlane of Kingston tied with 42 points. Scopis and McLean of Belleville fourth with 40 points. A draw was made, Bulman and Embury playing Elliott and McFarlane, while Green and Linton met Scopis and McLean. The Kingston rinks were the winners of their respective games and in the final Green and Linton vanquished their club members. Dr. Carleton and McDonald of Norwood, won the prize for the two wins with the highest scores, while Hurley and Liberty won the prize for the highest score with one win and Bogart and Burnham of Desoronto, the prize for the highest score with no wins. The tournament was a success in every respect.

Advice to Lovelorn

DOESN'T WANT TO GIVE UP HER SON

DEAR MISS FAIRPAX:

Please help a heart-broken mother and widow. My son is 21. When his father died I understood that he would always live with me and his sister and take care of us. Now he says he is going to be married and go away to live, though he will send us money. Shall I go to the girl and explain to her that she must not marry him? MOTHER

My dear woman, must I tell you that you are dreadfully spoiled? It is out of the question that your son should give up his entire life to you. If you love him do you not wish that he should have the happiness of love and marriage? His willingness to continue to support you shows that he is a loving and conscientious son, and what more can you ask of him? If you attempt to break off his love affair by going to see his fiancee you may succeed. But you will be sorry afterwards, because your son will not forgive you. Be reasonable, dear woman and you keep the love that your son has for you.

YOU MARRIED TOO YOUNG

DEAR MISS FAIRPAX:

I married at 16. Now, at 25, I have four children and a husband who has a pretty hard time supporting us. But the worst of it is, I am getting so tired of the grind. I haven't really had any youth. And I am afraid of doing some thing desperate. Can anything be done?

YOUNG MOTHER

Your condition is perfectly natural, I think. You married too young and missed your girlhood. The attendant responsibilities came too early. I believe a vacation even a vacation of a month would help you very much and give you the courage to take up your life again. If your poor young husband isn't equally tired, he ought to arrange this for you. One of you must have an aunt or sister or cousin who would come and take care of your children while you went away and rested yourself up in the country. This would be the best plan. Another would be to take the children with you and make a month's visit to some relative or friend living in the country. One of these arrangements should be made for you immediately, my poor child.

WEDDINGS

BUCKLE — REDNER

On Wednesday, Sept. 1, th. at noon, the home of Mr. W. N. and the late Mrs. Redner, Rednersville, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding, when their eldest daughter, Mildred Irene became the bride of Albert E. Buckle of Belleville, formerly of Allinton. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. McCutcheon of the Tabernacle United Church, Belleville.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in sedge brown georgette with points of fish net lace and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Redner, who wore beige chiffon and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses.

Mr. Gordon Allmark of Kingston, was groomsman.

The wedding music, Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, was played by Mrs. Walter Morrow, of Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckle left for a short motor trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the bride travelling in a nigger brown crepe ensemble with sable stole and beige accessories.

Upon their return they will reside in Kingston.

Auxiliary Holds Opening Meeting

The opening meeting of St. Andrew's Auxiliary took place recently, in the new Sunday School rooms. The bright and sunny appearance of the room makes any meeting held there a pleasure one, members report. There was an excellent turnout. Mrs. Seymour the president, occupied the chair and after the devotional exercises the minutes were read and approved and general business was discussed.

It was decided to hold the annual Thanksgiving offering meeting on October 14th at eight p.m. Mrs. Gould of Formosa, who is home on furlough, will be the speaker. As Mrs. Gould has thirty-eight years service in the field of Formosa, she should prove interesting.

The auxiliary was glad to welcome back Mrs. John Tower, after an absence of three years through illness. Mrs. George A. Reid, president of the Kingston Presbytery, gave a report of the summer meeting of the Presbytery, held at Sandhill. She urged the greater consecration of talent by the power of prayer. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and prayer.

Teachers Honor Prin. MacLaurin

Members of the teaching staff of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School honoured their popular principal, P. C. MacLaurin, last evening when they presented him with a handsome five piece Sheffield silver tea service. After the classes the staff gathered in the Board Room, and on behalf of his colleagues, Mr. James Howard made the presentation of the beautiful service which consists of cream and sugar, tea pot, coffee urn and tray.

Miss Madeline Young read a fitting address with apt eyre for the occasion, and Mr. MacLaurin in a few words expressed his appreciation of the kindness of the staff. Mr. MacLaurins marriage to Miss Dow, of Fort William, takes place next week.

A POPULAR FEATURE

Canada has 1,000 telephones per 100 population. It is second in the world in telephone density. It is doubtful whether the habit of calling out-of-town friends is as prevalent anywhere as in Ontario and Quebec. Daily long distance calls total more than 70,000.

OBITUARY

MRS. SARAH ANNE PHILPS

Mrs. Sarah Anne Philps, widow of the late William Philps, suddenly expired at the home of her son, Wm. Philps, 46 Herchimer St., shortly before the noon hour. Mr. Philps is an employee of the Ontario Intelligencer and upon arriving home for his lunch hour was instructed by Mrs Philps to call his mother, who shortly before had gone upstairs to rest for a short while. Proceeding to the bottom of the stairs he called his mother but received no response and going to the bedroom found her still in death, lying on top of the coverings. Dr. Robertson was hurriedly called but the woman was past human aid, death being due to heart failure.

The deceased was born in St. Blazy, Cornwall, England, 72 years ago and for the past 38 years had been a resident of Belleville and thus another of the list binds the residents of this generation with Belleville of yesteryear has been severed.

The late Mrs. Philps was a woman of kindly disposition and well respected by a large circle of friends, by whom her passing will be regretted. The deceased was an Anglican in religion and leaves to mourn her loss one son, William Philps, with whom she has resided for some years. The funeral will be held on Saturday.

WEDDINGS

ARTHUR—YOSBOURGH

A quiet wedding was held at Holloway United Church Parsonage Belleville on Saturday afternoon Sept. 13th, when Gladys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yosbourgh of Brighton Township, was united in marriage to Alden Edward Arthur of Brighton Township.

Rev. Harold B. Neal officiated.

The bride looked charming in a gown of independence blue silk crepe with hat to match.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left by motor for Toronto. On their returned they will reside at Woolrr.

Miss Ockley at Colegiate Today

Miss Ockley, supervisor of Household Science Training at the College of Education is in the city today visiting Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. Miss Ockley has been inspecting the newer collegiates to become conversant with the organization and equipment of the Household Science Department, and has been especially anxious to visit the well equipped schools, such as Belleville.

Miss Hamill, of the Department of Education, Toronto, is accompanying Miss Ockley. The Girls Vocational Department at B. C. I. and V. S. shows a great increase in attendance over last year. Many girls who have been out of the school for some time have returned to take a special course in this department. This year will see the first graduating class from the vocational section, and all but one of the girls who began the course three years ago will finish the King of Jazz Coming

John Murray Anderson, the director of Universals spectacular all-Movietone and all-Technicolor King of Jazz, starring Paul Whiteman and his entire orchestra, which comes to the Belle Theatre Saturday and Monday, marks definitely, is the famous New York musical extravaganza impressario who for the past six years has produced the "Greenwich Follies. He was brought from the theatre by Carl Laemmle, jr., especially to build the greatest picture possible to conceive, and his efforts as seen on the screen are indescribable in spectacle, music, dancing and beauty. John Boles, the golden voice of the screen, is featured in two gorgeous numbers in King of Jazz—Monterey and the Song of the Dawn. A host of the stages greatest celebrities support Whiteman.

Monument Erected to Nova Scotian Hero of The Sea

Dedication of a monument at Margaretville, Annapolis County, Nova Scotia, in memory of Captain Clair Baker, master of the steamship Ruby L II, who lost his life in a heroic effort to save the lives of his crew when the Ruby L foundered off the Nova Scotia coast in a storm last January. The monument was erected by popular subscription by The Halifax Herald and was recently unveiled in the presence of a large number of friends of Capt. Baker. Hon. O. P. Goocher, Minister of Agriculture in the Nova Scotia Government, unveiled the monument.

McLAREN'S INVINCIBLE OLIVES

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Sharing Fame

Dorothy R. Scoville

Madame Teresa Cerri flung herself down on the chaise lounge and tore at the pink satin cushions with two determined little fists.

"Get out!" she raged. The man standing quietly beside her shrugged. "You are driving me mad! Mad I say!" Her beautiful soprano voice soared into a hoarse scream. "To live in that ugly farm with you! Ugh! Black, tangled curls, curiously childlike shock in a frenzy of agitation. "And after I've worked so hard to be a prima donna."

Hart Davis restrained his impulse to smooth the curls and crushed the cigarette in the crystal tray. A little trinket he has given her because she had wanted it once while they were exploring an old little shop in a tucked away corner of Paris.

"You'd better stop screaming or you won't be able to sing tonight," he suggested practically.

"You think of that—now!" wept Madame Cerri.

"Love speaks out unaware," quoted Hart Davis lightly.

"Love!" Madame Cerri swept majestically to her feet.

"Give up my life for that". She paced the floor like a tigress. "Could your love equal my fame?"

A discreet tap at the door interrupted her. She glared at Hart Davis as he rose to answer it.

"You were to give an interview at four thirty," he reminded her when he returned." The reporter is down there now."

A moan came from the satin pillows and the half hidden form of Madame Cerri. "I don't see a reporter—I hate them! I hate you!—I hate everyone!"

Hart Davis sighed, hesitated for a moment then resolutely shut the door behind him. There was a curious quality of pain around his eyes. Madame Cerri's words had cut deep, as they always did when she saw fit to lash him with her scorn. Fame for love, or love for fame? She had chosen fame, and yet he dared to dream of something more. A change of heart perhaps, or some word of hope for the future.

The elevator dropped swiftly to the ornate lobby of the still more ornate hotel. A porter guided him to a quiet corner where an eager eyed young woman waited."

"Miss Weston, of the Herald-Leader- I believe?" he bowed and took the chair opposite her. "I am Hart Davis McKane Cerri's accompanist.' He smiled as the girl who was so obviously impressed with the distinguished appearance of the man before her. "Madame Cerri is resting for her concert this evening and begs that you excuse her from this interview."

Utter dismay spread over Miss Weston's face. "But what will I do" she began.

"Perhaps the interview might be by proxy?" he suggested.

Miss Weston's distress immediately lifted.

"Oh, could that be done?" he smiled shyly. "You see this is my first big assignment, and I can't go back without a story." She looked at him with a faint shadow of doubt. "I suppose you know Madame Cerri quite well?"

"Quite well," agreed Hart Davis gravely.

"You know, I simply adore her," breathed Miss Weston. "Of course I have never met her, but she has such a gracious, sweet face, and her interviews are always so inspiring."

"You have the press notices telling of her early life and training, I suppose?" Hart Davis questioned absently.

"Yes." Miss Weston nodded. "And is it true that she longs for a home but can't bear to take away the pleasure her voice gives to the thousands who hear her concerts?" Miss Weston was unconsciously quoting from the publicity notices she had been reading.

"Public life demands all or nothing." Hart Davis nodded with a trace of bitterness.

"It must be wonderful to be close to a person like that," dreamily murmured Miss Weston. "Always so unselfish, so serene." She scribbled a word, or two in her neat little book and looked longing for the quiet peace of a little home yet making her golden voice a gift to the world."

Hart Davis stared at the distance. That lead Was old it never failed to please Teresa. Up and down the world she had through her concert years she had been lauded as "Gracious Cerri". The title pleased her vanity. She took pains to cultivate that pose. Reporters always found her a most charming conversationalist. Hart Davis smiled, a bit grimly.

Newspapers spoke of Teresa Cerri as "The Queen of Grand Opera." In her Martha she was superb; as Mimi she swept her audience to thunderous applause. Critics dedicated entire columns of praise to her Tosca. Few singers could boast such popularity as Cerri. Her admirers numbered crowned heads of Europe, statesmen, well known men of affairs, down to the most humble of music lovers. Hart Davis had seen them come and go. Had envied the smiles and sweet words Cerri had bestowed on them. Cerri could be very kind when it pleased her to be.

The earnest young reporter scratched a few more important words in her note book with the shiny red cover The same words so many reporters had scribbled. Hart Davis toyed with a strange thought that had leaped suddenly to his mind. Why not give her the real story?

The inside information so many had tried in vain to reach. The story so many cynics had hinted was there. Why not tell them Cerri was selfish and very jealous? That she was not of the aristocracy she claimed, but came from the unknown depths of East Side, New York.

Why not make her feel some of the shame and disgrace she deserved? He was tired of being a governess for an unappreciative Cerri. His accompaniment alone fitted her voice so perfectly. He had attained that perfection only by hours of painstaking study, yet there were times when she scream ed at him like a fishwife, cursed him with the volubility of a truck driver.

In spite of it all he had remained with her. Protecting her from the little buffets which annoyed her. Had comforted, encouraged and guided her. His rewards? What had it been for all those things?

"And you share it all with her." The girl reporter looked at him with a sympathetic sigh.

That was it. His reward was in being near her; in sharing her triumphs and in her tantrums, her selfish indulgences. Her ugly tongue and shrill voice? She was Cerri.

The girl reporter closed her notebook with another sigh.

"You must know her awfully well," she said enviously.

Hart Davis gave her an odd little smile.

"Quite well," he agreed.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

Sonia closed her eyes and sank deeply into the comfort of the cool darkness. When she opened them Don was back, drawing a chair near hers.

"Now then, young lady, let's hear what you're in disgrace about. Tell your Uncle Donald."

His tone pleased Sonia, who had known him rather frigidly as one of the "big boys". For the first time in her rather reserved 17 years she felt the desire for confession.

"It was at Sidney Malone's party last night. Perhaps you've already heard about it?"

"No, not a thing. I've been out playing tennis all morning."

"It was just this," blurted Sonia. "Sidney's mother opened the door of the room where we had left our coats and caught Joe Carter kissing me."

His face was expressionless.

"And then?" he asked.

"What do you suppose? Righteous indignation on her part. The light was off, too you see. I took my coat and went home. Joe followed about a block behind me."

Don was watching her curiously, as if she were a strange specimen of some kind. She resented the superiority of his expression. She felt that she would have preferred his disapproval.

"Was it a good kiss, Sonia?" he asked suddenly.

"Was it ..... what?"

"A good kiss? Did you enjoy it? Lots of kick, and all that?"

Sonia experienced the thrilling sensation of an airplane swooping from the earth.

"Well, of all things. I like your nerve."

"I merely wondered."

With a little audacious laugh, Sonia slid nearer his chair.

"How much do you wonder?" she cooed him.

At that inauspicious moment Mary entered with the lemonade. Her eyes took in Sonia curiously. Don's mother would hear about this. They could be sure of that.

When she had disappeared, the spell was broken. Sonia felt awkward and ill at ease. They drank their lemonade in silence. Then Don spoke in a well-controlled voice.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have asked you that, Sonia. I was just wondering if you are in the habit of kissing the boys?"

The blood congealed in Sonia's veins at his tone.

"And supposing I am, Dr. Don Stillwater?"

He smiled.

"Professional curiosity, that's all. If you are, I've no doubt you're clever at it."

Something in his bantering tone cut Sonia like a sharp knife.

"Well, I'm not," she said suddenly. For no reason at all tears stood in the gray-green eyes. "It was the first time I'd ever been kissed in my life, and now the whole town's talking about it."

Don put down his glass of lemonade and came over to her.

"Why, you poor kid! And here I was thinking you a regular little devil in your own home town."

"Every one does," gulped Sonia.

"But, my dear girl, how can they help it when you pull stuff like this? You should have known better than to go into a dark bedroom with a boy if you don't expect to be talked about."

"Others girls get kissed."

"Other girls are probably more discreet about it than you were. There's something about you Sonia, that makes you appear more sophisticated than you really are. You look entirely too experienced for a 17-year-old girl, Sonia. I think you ought to get away from this town."

Her eyes shone.

"That's just what I want to do. I want to go to Chicago and go to work."

"It would be the best thing in the world for you. You're going to be spoiled if you live much longer in this atmosphere. But you'd have to watch your step in a place like Chicago. No one will talk about you, but it's awfully easy for things to happen to a girl there."

"I want them to happen."

He lifted her face in his hands and looked deep into her eyes.

"No, you don't, Sonia. There are a few experiences in life no woman ever wants to go through. Things that tear the soul, that eat like acid—a doctor knows. There are things Sonia you want to avoid."

His set face frightened her.

"I don't see why you want me to go then."

He smiled at that.

"I want you to go because I think you're smart enough to play the game. You say you're in bad in Muncie. This is only an episode in what I trust will be a very full life. But let it be a lesson to you, Sonia. Don't do things that give people a chance to give you a black eye. You're going away. Every one will soon forget about it. And when you come back it will seem different. What kind of work can you do?"

"I took book-keeping at school."

"Are you any good at it?"

"Am I?" she answered modestly. "Head of my class."

"That doesn't mean a whole lot. But I take it you know enough to start. You know, I might be able to get a job for you in my uncle's real estate office."

"Your uncle?"

"By marriage, Sonia. Aunt Grace Stillwater's husband."

"But do you think he'd do it?"

"He might. Uncle Jed is awfully fond of me. Of course, it would be a small pay, you understand. In the bookkeeping department with a lot of other girls. You'd probably have to live at the Y.W. for a while."

"I can live in the city jail if I only get to Chicago. But, Don, I can't go."

"What is it now?"

"My father. He's awfully opposed to my going away from home."

"If you get a position in my uncle's office, I'll stop in and talk with him. Do you think it would do any good?"

"I don't know. He can be dreadfully stubborn when he makes up his mind."

"Let's cross that bridge when we come to it. I'll write my uncle. Shall I?"

Sonia stood beside him, barely reaching to his shoulder. She put out her hand.

"You don't know what this means to me, Don. And I came in hating you."

"Hating me for what, please?"

"For being Mrs. Stillwater's only son and having thousands of dollars spent on your education, while I had to carry your mother's dresses home."

"Aren't you sorry now?"

"I certainly am. But there really is no reason on earth for your being so nice to me."

He held out her hat and smiled.

"My interest, as I said before, is purely professional."

"I don't care what it is, if it helps me to get to Chicago."

"Now look here, young lady. Remember all my good advice. That goes with it."

Her green eyes were inscrutable.

"To be discreet in my indiscretions?"

"That wasn't all of it. You know what I mean."

"Of course I do. But I must go. Your mother will be coming home and I'll be suspected again."

The idea that his mother might suspect him of anything must have amused him. But Sonia saw only kindness in his gray eyes. She thought of him all the way down the street. Tall and dark. Not handsome, but his voice was so deep and interesting..... Suddenly her promise to Tom occurred to her. She had forgotten to consider him at all in her plans for going to Chicago On well, Nothing definite had been decided yet.

As she opened the door of her own home she came face to face with her father, storming up and down the living room. In his rage he reminded her of an irate turkey gobbler.

"Come on in here and shut the door!" he shouted. "What's this I hear about you and Joe Carter?"

INSTALLMENT 3

Sam Marsh was slow to anger but his wrath once roused, was a veritable cyclone. Sonia made no effort to pacify him. Instead she turned to her mother.

"It's is your fault, mother. I knew he'd act like this."

"Your mother had nothing to do with it," her father interrupted. "I overhead some boys talking in the store today. A fine thing for a man to be smirking around about my daughter! If you weren't so big I'd give you a thrashing right now."

"I'm surprised you don't anyway," Sonia said, coldly. She knew how her insolence could hurt.

"What do you mean doing a thing like that? Where do you think it will get you? Don't you realize how people talk?"

He turned on his wife, too.

"Have you talked to her? Has she offered any explanation to you?"

"There isn't any explanation to make father," said Sonia quietly. "It just happened that's all. I went after my handkerchief and Joe shut the door and kissed me."

"And you stand there and admit it? You should hang your head with shame — are you sure that's all there was to it?"

Sonia burst out crying.

"I think you're dreadful. Everyone suspects me of something awful. I didn't do anything. I'm going away and never come back."

Her father melted instantly.

"Come here, Sonia. Here, honey! Your dad doesn't think there was anything bad to it. Only I can't stand having people say things about my baby."

"You said things, too."

"I didn't mean them, honey." He patted her shoulder. "I know you didn't mean any harm You mustn't let the boys kiss you, that's all."

Sonia slowed herself to be comforted in her father's arms until gradually the crisis passed and peace reigned again.

Several days later Sonia announced her intention of spending the day with her sister. Her mother offered no objection, so Sonia set forth.

As she wandered down the sunny street she was busily rehearsing the events of the last week. She had been tamed, proposed to, and advised respectively by three different serious young men.

"What is it about me men like?" she was thinking with the impersonality of an artist. "I never flatter them. I am not beautiful. But they do like me. It's because I'm a mystery. They see things in me I don't have." She grinned, naughtily. "Let 'em see. The more they imagine the better they like it. Sweet fools."

She pushed the straight black hair from her eyes. There was a selfishness about her least motion, a winged precision that gave meaning to her slightest action.

"At least," she concluded, "I am not aimless, spineless. apologetic. Thank God for that."

As she opened the door of her sister's little house she heard the baby screaming. Sonia walked through to the kitchen where Marta was almost bursting her tiny lungs with angry cries.

"Well, what's the matter with you?" asked Sonia, rescuing the little creature from the bottom of the buggy.

The baby's wet mouth dug frantically about her neck.

"Hungry, aren't you? Oh Vera!"

There was no answer but the door to the basement stood open. Sonia started down with the baby over her shoulder. Vera sat sobbing, half way down the stairs. Garbage was scattered about her. Sonia was startled at the white face lifted to hers.

"What in the world's the matter?"

"Oh, the confounded paper around the garbage broke when I was just tearing my hair to get the kitchen cleaned so I could bathe the baby before her 2 o'clock feeding. I haven't touched the ironing yet and my back is just breaking."

Sonia said, composedly: "Your child seems to need food."

Vera took the baby while Sonia collected the garbage.

"Some men," she muttered, kicking at the cat.

"Yes isn't it?" Vera answered, without spirit.

"Say," Sonia demanded suspiciously, "what's eating you anyway?" .

Vera brushed the untidy hair from her eyes and answered irritably.

"I'm going to have another baby. That's all. And when I told Paul last night do you know what he did? Started in as he if I were crazy, said 'Good Lord' and walked out of the door"

Sonia was dumbfounded Vera must be feeling terribly low to confide in her like this

"Gosh I'm sorry, Vera. Isn't there anything you can do?"

"Certainly not, snapped her sister. "Nothing but have it And that with precious little sympathy from my husband. Take it from me, Sonia, when you get married, youre nothing but a slave.

What does OPEN HOUSE mean?

For a leading bakery or maybe a dairy for that matter, "Open House" means a period, often a week, that is set apart in which everything in connection with the plant is "polished" up and is at its very best, so that visitors may carry away the desired impressions. At LOBLAW'S—every day of the week is "Open House," for we don't know who visits our stores—everybody being welcome to stroll through and see the working of this excellent self-serve, money saving system. So that "everything" has to be "up to scratch" all the time. It is the minute attention paid to cleanliness; refrigeration; sanitation; freedom and ease; of well-stocked shelves; and actual savings, that keep the LOBLAW GROCETERIAS first and foremost in the grocery business.

BENNETT TARIFF CHANGES

The most sweeping increases in customs duties in Canadian history announced by Premier Bennett on Tuesday have been accepted by Canadians irrespective of party affiliations at first view as likely to serve the purpose for which they were intended, to relieve unemployment, and to improve economic conditions of the country by means of the tariff changes. While the full import of the emergency changes cannot yet be appreciated, enough is clear to the great bulk of people that beneficial results are likely to follow. Throughout the Dominion the straightforward manner in which the Premier has attacked the problems of unemployment and of depression, and their relation to customs duties has aroused the enthusiasm of workers, employers, consumers and the people generally. While the changes have to prove their value, the public believes they will have the results sought.

One of the strong points of attack on the late administration was the condition of agriculture. Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings, during the last year, visited various portions of the country and found everywhere the same conditions of evident exhaustion of agriculture. He attacked the treaty whereby large importations of butter were possible from New Zealand to the detriment of the welfare of Canadian dairymen. His appeal was heard, and it is noticeable in the present revision of the tariff on one hundred and seventy odd items, those items relating to agriculture and dairy products occupy a great deal of space. The premier has felt a mandate from the people to strike a blow for the agricultural class and the changes are expected to make for beneficial results before very long. This is but one of the points of interest in the changes.

The chorus of approval with which the Bennett changes have been received is proof of their general acceptance to the people. Canada has passed through depression and there is idleness and it is characteristic of the optimistic character of the people that they greet Mr. Bennett's changes with a welcome.

Dumping of foreign goods is to a large extent prevented and the Dunning countervailing duties are thrown overboard. Protection is given the manufacturer but from him comes the assurance that he will not exploit the consumer. Protection that protects industry and also the man and woman who use the products of industry is the policy of the Bennett regime. The Premier has given his assurance that if there should be signs of raising of prices under protection of the tariff, the Governor-in-Council has authority to reduce or remove duties.

A spirit of enthusiasm and hope is evident and there is a widespread belief that the measures of Mr. Bennett will do much towards bringing about that economic recovery to bring in which he was sent to Parliament with a large following on July 28th last.

ANXIETY OVER GERMANY

Once again Germany is causing anxiety in the European camp. Recent elections show a trend to the dictatorial type as indicated by the Fascisti and Communistic voting results. Some blame the situation on the fact that there are at least fifteen parties in the Reichstag, which makes it possible for the development of small groups.

THE YACHT RACES

Results of the first three heats in the America's Cup races have not filled sportsmen with the fullest enthusiasm owing to the outlook to which the results of these two heats give rise. Yacht races of this class are not attracting so much attention as a dirigible or a plane conquest of the ocean, probably because for the first dozen the contest appeared one-sided. Conquest of the air is not one-sided it is a battle of the machine and its pilot for supremacy over the air and the hazards of the aerial lines. But perhaps other sea heats may be more of a contest.

CLOSE OF SUMMER

By Aline Michaelis

We have come to the close of Summer
And the roses nod farewell,
While a golden haze
Veils the dream-filled days
With Autumn's tender spell.

We have come to the end of Summer,
With its glamorous song and glow,
With its scented breeze
And its hum of bees
Where the sweet red clovers grow.

But even with Summer's passing
And the lessening beat of wings,
Though the red rose sleeps
A strange beauty creeps
Through this season of changing things.

We have come to the days Autumnal
Where life drifts on an ebbing tide;
But new glories lie
Over earth and sky,
Which to Summer were denied.

STIRRING DAYS OF FENIAN RAID as reported in a Daily Ontario "Extra" are recalled by a copy of said "Extra" sent in by a Sidelight Fan. The extra is printed on one side of a sheet of white paper fifteen inches long by six inches wide. According to the extra 25,000 Fenians were reported enroute determined to capture Canada. The first paragraph is a despatch from Poughkeepsie, New York, dated May 24, which states that "Three car loads of Irishmen are on their way up on the Hudson River Railroad tonight on the midnight train. They have all purchased tickets for the Reneesaler and Saratoga R. R. They are without arms but it is supposed they are all Fenians." Despatches from other points in the Eastern states make up the balance of the extra, all of an indefinite but alarmist character. The last despatch on the sheet is dated Montreal, May 24, and reads "The Telegraph cable at Ogdensburg has been cut and Fenians are reported to be assembling at Pigeon Hill. The wires between Ogdensburg and Montreal have also been cut."

KIWANIS KARNIVAL now holds the centre of life's little stage, as far as Belleville is concerned, and this year's Karnival promises to be fully equal to its successors of happy memory. This is one gala week when joy will reign supreme in the armouries and anyone can exchange their blues for glads in the merry moving throng which will fill the armouries nightly. Most of all the proceeds of the Karnival will be used to help the sick and crippled and destitute this winter. Let's give it the backing it deserves.

"Go on, my boy," said the father. "Here's half-a-crown. Kiss her. When I was young I used to make them scream."

The son returned a few minutes later.

"Well, my boy, did you kiss her?"

"Yes, father."

"She certainly screamed all right!"

"Yes, I kept the half-crown."

Picton Girl is Given Appointment at Albany Hospital

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, Sept. 16.—Picton and Prince Edward County was visited by a severe electrical storm early Sunday morning. No damage has yet been reported in town. The heavy rain which fell is a great benefit to pastures. It will also enable farmers to get ahead with fall plowing which has been impossible in many sections owing to the land being hard and dry.

Tomatoes are being rushed to the canning factories. On Saturday 30,000 cases of canned goods left the county, 10,000 being bound for Montreal on the C. S. L. freighter, City of Toronto, the remainder from Hyatt Haris wharf to Nova Scotia and Cape Breton in the ocean going boat, Somies. This boat after discharging Prince Edward canned goods at the above ports goes on to Cuba

A recent shipment of canned goods was made direct from Prince Edward County to South Africa.

Miss Ruth Gunnom has received word of her appointment as a pupil dietitian in the Memorial Hospital at Albany, N.Y. Miss Grimmon will assume her new duties in February.

Mr. F. H. Minaker, secretary of Prince Edward Agricultural Society, attended Kingston Fair.

In a recent issue of the Toronto Star Weekly appeared a write-up of Dr. Wilfred G. Fralick eminent New York surgeon, who is a native of Picton and a graduate of Queen's University. While no members of Dr. Fralick's family live here, there are a number of cousins in Picton and district.

Dr. Fralick, according to the article is known to every sport fan in the United States, but little known to Canadians.

He operated on more than one hundred boxers' hands; hockey players' knees, shoulders, tendons; joints etc. with the result that they are still in their games instead of on the list of "has beens."

A few of the most noteworthy of these athletes are Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Jack Delaney, Harry Wills, Jack Sharkey, Max Schmeling Mike McTigue, Paul Berlenback; Firpo, Bad Battalino, all boxers who need no introduction to the sporting world. Then too there were Lew Diegel, pro. golf champion; Perdie Bishopp, former pitcher of New York Giants and many others. Some of the operations were no less than amazing and have never before been successfully accomplished. Dr. Fralick has no competitors. Other feats of Dr. Fralick include the transplanting as early as 1900 of vial organs from one person to another. He evolved an anti-toxin for the dread gas being in trenches. He saved the life of a grown-up boy with infusion of synthetic blood of his own discovery. He was the first doctor to treat tub erculosis by intravenous infusion of gilmicide. He perfected sterilization and purification of water for the boys in the trenches. He completely removed the stomach of a 62-year-old patient with successful results of the operation. He found a successful treatment for spoon monoside poisoning. Dr. Fralick's specialty however is setting bones and remaking shattered hands. For this he is just as famous.

Prince Edward County has many distinguished sons but perhaps there has been no one who has gained such a high reputation as a surgeon.

WILLIAMS — TURPIN

A very pretty September wedding was solemnized in the church of St. Mary Magdaline on Monday morning at ten thirty when Miss Louise Turpin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Turpin of Picton, became the bride of William Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson of Hallowell. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. Cecil Winter, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by the organist, Miss Eleanor Holmes. She was attended by her sister, Miss Daisy Turpin. The groom was supported by Mr. Gus Turpin brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, following which the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a trip through New York State On their return they will reside in Picton.

"I certainly was amazed such white clothes!" says Mrs. A. Kurth

"They told me about Rinso when I bought my washer. I tried it and I certainly was amazed. What suds! What speed! The clothes come from the washer whiter, brighter than ever. And we have hard water here, too. Yet with Rinso alone—no powders, no softeners—I get the most marvelous suds you ever saw! I think Rinso is very economical; a little goes so far. I use it for dishes and all cleaning."

ROGER BABSON DECRIES CUT IN ADVERTISING

Business Analyst Declares Now Is Time for Local Merchants to Profit by slash in Commodity Prices

"It is a mistake to reduce advertising expenditures merely because sales are slow and profits lower," warned Roger W. Babson, business analyst in a signed and copyrighted statement published recently in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He added:

"Admittedly, business must cut out all unnecessary expenses at this time; but it is shortsighted policy indeed to consider advertising as an unnecessary expense. Instead, look at it as the strong right arm of the sales department capable when rightly used, of wresting profits from seemingly barren fields. Look at it as a vitalizing force in American business, as a key factor in mass production, as a potential stabilizer of employment, a creator of new industries, a foundation builder for future business growth.

"Ask any business man today what he considers the most important department of his business, and nine times out of ten he will answer the sales department. And yet business men who would not think of letting their factories run with broken machinery, are often guilty of giving broken tools to their sales forces and expecting them to produce business. A half-hearted or severely curtailed advertising program is a broken tool. Now, more than ever, the sales department needs every possible support.

"The larger industrial corporations which advertise on a national scale have come to recognize more fully than have the local business men, the advantages of sustained advertising in times of dull business. Particularly the local retailers should realize that their greatest selling aid under present conditions is more and better advertising. Especially now that wholesale commodity prices have declined so extensively, retailers are in a position to offer merchandise at attractive price concessions. In order to increase volume of sales he should tell the public about the savings which can now be made in the purchase of staple commodities. The best way to tell them is through the local newspaper."

CHILDREN NEED THIS TEMPTING BREAKFAST for PROPER GROWTH

This young lad starts the day right with a nourishing breakfast of Quaker Oats. How proud he is of his pets.

Quaker Oats provides lasting energy for the most active hours of the day

The most important meal of the child's day! This is how leading educators and nutritionists regard breakfast.

Morning hours are by far the most strenuous, mentally and physically. Children's breakfasts must supply sufficient food energy to meet these morning demands—or nervous energy will be consumed instead. That is why the right kind of breakfast is so vitally important. Why one cereal known as "the most nutritious of all cereals" is urged above all others.

The Quaker milling process retains every valuable part of the corn. Nature's best-balanced food. Thus Quaker Oats contains 16% protein —the "growth element"; 68% carbohydrates — the "energy" food. Besides body-building minerals and the important vitamins. It's easy to get children to eat Quaker Oats—for this famous Quaker milling process makes them different . . . better . . . than "just oatmeal." Quaker selects only the plump, firm, full-flavored oats. Your grocer has both the Regular and the Quick Quaker that cooks in 2½ minutes from the time the water boils. Please do not confuse Quick Quaker with ordinary quick oats. Only Quaker can give you the incomparable Quaker flavor and rich nutrition.

Large household packages and small 10c. size. Never in bulk. All Quaker packages contain coupons with which you can get valuable premiums.

CHINA
In Every Package
Marked "Chinaware"

A surprise in every Quick Quaker package marked "Chinaware"—a piece of attractively patterned genuine English chinaware. As pretty as you could buy. Beautifully colored . . . distinctively shaped and bordered.

For Catarrh—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil that it can be used internally with as much success as it can outwardly. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

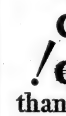
Last nite after supper pop sed to ma Theres no use wasting any more time choosing between these 2 cars. We been beating around the bush till the bush is black and blue, he sed.

Thats exactly my sentiments and I choose a Sparrow ma sed.

Im in perfect accord and complete harmony with you, except that I choose a Wimple. pop sed. I looked both cars over again today and I discovered that the Wimple has one big-time advantage that the Sparrow lacks, he sed.

My goodness what is it? ma sed.

Its an electric cigar lighter that werks in the highest wind, it will make driving a pleasure instead a burden pop sed, and ma sed, For land sakes thats no reason, I've been looking over a lot of back auvertisements that I clip out of the papers, and in almost every case the Sparrow ad has a much better choice of werds and is much more attractive to read and just think of the constant advantage that will be. Every time we reed a Sparrow ad in the paper we'll be dubbly glad and grateful that we chose a Sparrow, and even if the car dument always behave to perfecky we'll have plenty of consolation as soon as we open a paper and read the invertizement. she sed.



Yee gods and do you call that a good reason? pop sed.

Yes I do, because its practical, ma sed.

Practical yee gods, and how about my cigar lighter inducements for buying a Wimple? pop sed.

Thats idiotistic, ma sed.

So is a red underskert, pop sed. And he went around to the bowling alle.

Awards at Prince of Wales School Fair

Over one hundred and forty entrants yesterday made the Prince of Wales School Fair this year the most successful exhibition ever to be held at the school. Judges stated that the exhibits were of a particularly high calibre.

In the afternoon races and sports were run off. The children who won received prizes, as did the first three in the exhibits.

It is due in no small part to the efforts of W. M. Bird, the principal, that the fair was such a success. Parents, proud of their kiddies' handiwork, thronged in the basement of the school house all afternoon.

Last night a most successful day wound up with a concert. The children supplied the talent.

Following are the prize winners in the various departments.

Tweed Singer Wins Medal

Miss Dorothy Sager takes second place in C. N. E. contest.

In competition with the best soprnos that Canada can offer Miss Dorothy Sager of Tweed, carried off the silver medal and second place in the dramatic soprano section at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The contest was held on Tuesday morning. Miss Sager is only seventeen years old. She has been studying music only since last fall, which adds to the honors which have fallen to her. Studying under Miss Dorothy Allen Parks of Peterboro Miss Sager has a beautiful rich voice.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sager of this village. It is interesting to note that the winner of first place was awarded eighty-one points while Miss Sager was only three points behind scoring seventy-eight.

On her return to town from her triumph in Toronto Miss Sager was given a royal reception. She was met at the station by a number of school friends. The express truck gaily decorated with flowers and bunting had been requisitioned for the occasion and she was placed in a chair and drawn uptown. A stop was made at the Star Cafe where lunch was served followed by a real jollification.

Mr. Jim Collins of Napanee, spent the week end with friends in town.

Mr. Darcy of Madoc, purchaser of the store of Mr. Collins will open the store on Monday.

Mrs Bess Donnelly spent the week end in town.

The regatta held in Tweed on September third under the auspices of the Park Commission was a great success and the different events were keenly contested. The cups were awarded to Tweed High School but they are to be competed for annually.

On Saturday about 4.30 fire broke out and destroyed the home of Mr. Ray Marsh, farmer, residing about a mile south of Tweed on the Chapman road. The fire was caused from the stove pipes. Every effort was put forth by neighbors to save the home but it was totally destroyed by the flames. The men were successful in saving most of the furniture. The insurance on the place ran out about three days previous to the fire and Mr. Marsh had intended changing the insurance to a different company. Most of Mr. Marsh's bee hives were save but a few were destroyed by the smoke.

Her Painful Backache Quickly Relieved

Prince Edward Island Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 15 —(Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety percent of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

GOODYEARS EXCEL

In the TWO Main Parts of a Tire

1 Press the palm of your hand down on the Goodyear All-Weather Tread and feel how the deep-cut sharp-edged blocks under pressure grip and pinch the flesh. That is what the Goodyear Tread does on the surface of the road, and why it has superior traction.

THERE are two main parts of a tire—the tread and the carcass. Goodyear Tires excel in both!

There is greater traction in the Goodyear All-Weather Tread. There is greater vitality in the Goodyear Supertwist carcass. What proves this? These two tests.

2 Have us show you on our cord-testing machine the greater stretch in Goodyear Supertwist Cord over standard cord. This extra stretch gives the Goodyear Supertwist Carcass its unmatched vitality, enabling it to withstand road-shocks and continuous flexing.

These advantages in Goodyear Tires cost you no more; yet they are indispensable to the utmost enjoyment of your car. Come in and talk it over.

CITY BUYS LAND AT UPPER BRIDGE TO IMPROVE APPROACHES

Council Buys Land at Bridge

Improve Entrances on Both Sides of River Moira

WORK IS STARTED

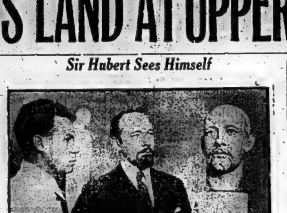
No Trouble Anticipated With Coffer Dams at Upper Bridge

Shortly after the agreement between the City of Belleville and the Holdcroft Construction Company was signed by Mayor George A. Reid, a staff of workmen started on the construction of the new upper bridge, which it is hoped will be completed before extreme weather is encountered. The bridge was closed to motor traffic late yesterday afternoon and today the bridge is well on the way for dismantling. The work will be rushed as will the placing of the false understructure so that the piers may be poured and the bridge proper started. The emergency water pipe is being dismantled by the Provincial Company, and it is understood the old bridge has been sold to a local second hand dealer in iron and steel.

Three Feet Roadway

The new bridge will have a 20-foot roadway, six feet narrower than the new lower bridge with two five foot pedestrian walks, which are also one foot narrower than the walks on the older new bridge. The width over all will be some 46 feet and in architecture will be identical with the new lower bridge. In order to bring the bridge out directly facing North Front Street, the city yesterday purchased a part of the premises of Walter Moore, on the south side of the bridge and also part of a lot on the north side near the old Belleville Laundry. The east side of the bridge will be in the same position as the old one but the west side will be extended down Lower Front Street and a wider turn made to approach the bridge from Front Street. The height of the bridge from the water will be the same as the old one.

As the water is low in its particular area of the river, the construction company is not anticipating any troubles with coffer dams that were encountered when the lower bridge was constructed. Where the centre pier will be located there is no water and the work is progressing rapidly in that section. The Bell Telephone Company have removed all poles that will interfere with the construction and in the new bridge the water main and telephone lines will be laid underneath the roadway of the bridge.



CHARMING SHOWER FOR MISS L. KENT

A charmingly-arranged shower in honour of Miss Lillian Kent, bride-elect of October 1st, at the home of Mr. J. S. Mason, Bellevue Apartments, by members of the staff of the Canadian Department Store, last evening. The drawing room was gay with dainty decorations in yellow, pink and white. Miss Kent was led to a seat in the bay window to await the arrival of hilarious bridal couple, Mrs. John Kerr, being the blushing bridegroom and Miss Pat Kirby, the triumphant bride. The bride's bouquet was found to contain a number of pretty presents, while the guests brought a sultry lady-in with gifts for Miss Kent. The stuff of the store presented her with a silver tea service and other beautiful gifts. Lunch was served and the remainder of the delightful evening was spent in dances and games.

STATIONED AT NAPANEE

Harold Lloyd, who is a member of the Provincial Police Force and who is a patient in Toronto General Hospital suffering from gun-shot wounds was formerly stationed at Napanee. Lloyd was always regarded as a painstaking officer by Inspector Lougheed and his colleagues. The shots were fired by his wife, according to her own admission. Lloyd will recover.

CLAIMS STOCKS RISE

Group in Far Corner" Present Sub-Amendment to House

Ottawa, Sept 19 (CP).—Only a few speakers remain today on the list for the House of Commons debate on the government's tariff proposals. There probably will be three votes, one on the sub-amendment introduced yesterday by the U.P.A. labor group, another the amendment sponsored by Rt. Hon. W. M. King, leader of the Opposition and the third and main motion originating with the promise of R. B. Bennett as minister of finance.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—Citing stock exchange quotations on three securities Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader last night charged in the House of Commons that Premier Bennett had "tipped off" certain industrialists that the tariff was to be increased on their products.

Before galleries crowded to the last square inch of standing room, the Opposition chieftain renewed his attack on the Bennett tariff with the allegation that he Premier, in approaching manufacturers for assurances against consumer exploitation, had of necessity let them know where the tariff increases would be.

He cited the stocks of Dominion Textiles, Cockshutt Plow and Steel Company of Canada. Dominion Textiles stock had been at 71 points on July 26, election day. On budget day, Sept. 16, it sold for 84 1-2, he declared Similarly Cockshutt Plow had gone from 5 3-8 to 20 1-2 between these two days and Steel Company of Canada from 43 to 47.

DEGREE FOR BISHOP TSEN

It has been announced that Bishop Lindel Tsen, of China, is to receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity at Trinity College, University of Toronto. It will be remembered that Bishop Tsen spoke at a banquet at Christ Church here not long ago and charmed his large audience with his masterful command of the English language, his wit and his humour. The many friends that he made in Belleville will be pleased to learn that this honour is to be conferred upon him.

Wheat "Bootlegging" Cases in Court

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 19 (CP) — Manitoba's wheat pool brings suit today against the alleged "bootlegging" of pool grain. Some twenty or more injunctions have been obtained against farmers who were said to be selling grain inn violation of their contract with the co-operative body. Some of the cases have been settled out of court but a number are to be tried today in the King's Bench Court.

WERE JUDGES

Included among the judges at the Prince of Wales Fair this year were Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Stewart who so carefully looked over the school work, such as composition, writing and other school subjects that made awards. Their names were inadvertently left off the list last Tuesday.

Horseplay Ends With Loss of Sight Squirt Gun Costs $200 Dollars

KINGSTON, Sept. 19.—In the case of Donald Lord against Earl Cronk damages of $200 were awarded by a jury at the Supreme Court session presided over by Mr. Justice Kelly. Lord sued for $10,000 damages for the loss of an eye caused when the defendant discharged a water pistol loaded with liquid ammonia, striking the plaintiff in the eye. The incident occurred at a house in Sydenham, in which both young men boarded while attending high school, and followed "horseplay" in which water pistols were used. In trying to get plaintiff out of his room, defendant shot ammonia water through the keyhole, striking Lord in the eye, the sight of which was destroyed.

NAMED CITY SALESMAN

Mr. Everett Smith, who has been a member of the Walker Hardware staff for the past ten years has joined the Belleville Hydro system and has been appointed local salesman. Mr. Smith severed his connections with the Walker Hardware this week and immediately took up his new duties. His friends will wish him success at his newly-appointed post.

ARRANGEMENTS NOT COMPLETE

Mr. E. J. Butler, chairman of the Separate School Board informed the press this morning that no definite arrangements have been made for the official opening of St. Michael's Academy. However, the event will take place some time during the month of October and it is planned to have the Minister of Education, Premier Howard Ferguson here on that date. His Grace Archbishop O'Brien and Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., pastor of St. Michael's parish, here will also take part.

CLASS ENTERTAINED

Miss Morton's class of Bridge Street Sunday School were guests of Miss Margaret Stewart, Church Street, Miss Stewart acting as hostess for the evening. A table was set under a large tent, decorated with asters and dahlias. Refreshments were served after which a recitation was given by Grace Stewart. Singing was then indulged in, closing with "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow." All expressed thanks for the wonderful time had.

STATEMENT RECTIFIED

It was stated in last night's issue in connection with a traffic story, that Miss Byles assistant to Wesley Prink in patrolling the local district. This was an error as Mr. Byles is vested with the same authority and has been equal service on the force with Mr. Prink.

POST NUPTIAL RECEPTION

Over a hundred callers enjoyed the very pleasant reception of Mrs. James Willis Howard, formerly Miss Dorothy Berrien Rogers of Grafton, Ontario, on Wednesday and Thursday. The pretty bride wore her wedding gown of Japanese-embroidered silk chiffon and her charming manner won the hearts of all. Miss Rogers of Grafton, received with her niece, and Miss T. Rhoades, daughter of Col. R. W. Rhoades, D.S.O, of Toronto, looking sweetly pretty in her yellow chiffon and of honour frock. Also received with the bride Mrs. J. P. Wills was very gracious at the tea table. Miss St. George Wills, Miss Alice Evans and Miss Frances Rhoades assisted. Guests were present from Cobourg, Brighton, Grafton and many other places.

MAY MAKE COBOURG COUNTIES CAPITAL

COBOURG, Sept. 19.—Failure of arbitration in the matter of increased rental for court rooms and offices of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham will mean the designation of Port Hope as the counties town. Warden W. H. Nelson has intimated.

Mr. Nelson, however, sincerely hopes that no such change will be necessary, but he declared emphatically that the counties council will not pay the $3,000 increase in rental demanded by the Town of Cobourg on renewal of the lease.

Whitby, Sept. 19 (CP)—

DOLLAR APIECE FROM ALL LIPTON'S FRIENDS!

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—CP— Will Rogers humorist and writer in his daily column in a New York paper, suggests that "everybody send $1 a piece for funds to buy Sir Thomas Lipton, a loving cup, something like the one he would have got if he had won, contributed to by everybody who really possibly could."

MRS. JAMES CANDON

The death occurred in Niagara Falls, Ontario, last night of Mary Frances Evans, wife of James Candon. Although the deceased had been in poor health for the past two years her death was unexpected by her friends. The late Mrs. Candon was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Evans. She was born at Camden but had resided in Tyendinaga for the past seventeen years. She was a member of St. Charles' Roman Catholic church at Read. The late Mrs. Candon was well known in East Hastings She is survived by her husband and one brother, Joseph of Buffalo, New York.

FIRST FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Albert College football team held their first practice of the season this afternoon on the campus under the direction of "Cal" Mungovan, former captain of Queen's University football team and well known in Canadian ranks. Mungovan will come to the city thrice weekly to send the Collegians through their paces. There are few better-informed men in Canadian football than Mungovan. He has a sturdy lot boys for material this year and the College should be represented by a smart squad on the gridiron. They defeated their ancient rivals, the local Collegiate in the 1929 series and they are out to repeat the dose.

Belleville Man Impressed With Sights and Outlook in Turner Valley

Frank White, of this city, at one time a prominent cheeseman in Sidney district, has just returned from an extended visit to Western Canada and the United States. Mr. White went west to pay a visit to his son in Vancouver, B.C. and his sister in Tacoma, Washington.

Speaking to The Ontario Intelligencer, Mr. White said the thing that impressed him most in the west was the oil wells in the Turner Valley, near Calgary. "It's a wonderful sight," he said. "They use up all the natural gas they can in Calgary and as it is too far to pipe it to Edmonton or Regina they have to burn the surplus gas, and it certainly is awe-inspiring."

Mr. White says that so far as he can see the farmers were remarkably loyal to the wheat pool in Western Canada. "They don't blame last year's condition on the pool," he said. "They are just taking it philosophically and blaming general conditions."

"The crops in Saskatchewan are light this year but they are decidedly heavy in all parts of Alberta., The farmers in Albert seem to be perfectly satisfied the way things are going."

While out west, Mr. White visited Banff, the great Canadian Pacific summer and winter resort and claims that it is one of the most wonderful places that he has ever seen. He motored through a great part of the west.

STOCK MARKETS

Market summary and quotations by Jamieson Bone and Company.

The recent selling in New York developed into a health reaction today, heavy higher priced stocks dropping 2 to 6 points, which makes them quite attractive from an investment standpoint. Toronto stocks eased a little in sympathy, but the Mines gave very little ground. Grain prices were weak, wheat making a new low again, for about 18 years or more. Quotations at 2.50 were.

Ralph's Foolish Fad

By R. RAY BAKER

(© 1931, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The psychology of the trouble between Elaine Gardner and Ralph Porter was psychology. To be more definite, it was ghosts.

When he was in Chicago on a business trip Ralph attended a lecture by Sir Oliver Lodge. When he returned to Dodson he was convinced, and emphatically he set out to convince every one else. With some men they have succeeded, but with Ralph Jenny he failed. Instead he only succeeded was Grace.

"All dishonest!" Grace told him. "If you believe that stuff you're reverted to the belief of our uncivilized ancestors. If everybody believed it the world would have taken a big step backward."

"On the contrary," Ralph persisted, "it would mean the world had taken a big step forward. It's only the stubborn materialist who closes his ears and refuses to be convinced. You wait and you'll see."

The more serious Ralph became, the more scornful Grace laughed at him. Soon, however, she ceased to laugh and became vexed.

"You'll be the inmate of the insane asylum if you keep this up," she warned. "You'd better drop the foolish stuff before it's too late."

But Ralph refused to drop it. He preached and he argued, and every time he called on Grace he offered terrible phenomena. Before long they found themselves engaged in verbal combats that were rather bitter.

The climax came one Friday evening.

Like all respectable small cities, Dodson had its quota of haunted houses. It was in reality a ruin of a veritable castle that had been erected in the woods by a wealthy family several generations ago. The window glasses were all more shattered, due to the earliest aim of youthful stone throwers, and weeds had grown in profusion on the long-neglected grounds. The interior was barren except for a few pieces of antique furniture which the last tenant had left. Three violent deaths at the place gave it its reputation for being haunted. It had been handed down from generation to generation among the citizens.

On this Friday night Ralph appeared at Grace's home with bulging pockets. A path that ran through the woods, passing close by the haunted house, was a short cut between the two, and here, and usually he made use of it.

There's a disembodied entity in the old haunted house," he informed Grace earnestly. "I heard it groaning around when I passed. Let us investigate. If we see a materialization it surely ought to convince you on the reasonableness of the survival theory."

"Not I," Grace objected. "I don't believe in ghosts, as I've explained time, but just the same, I have no desire to visit that old ruin in the woods especially at night. Personally, I think you've dwelt too much on your foolish notion, and you're beginning to see things."

Ralph was in no mood for criticism of this kind. He took himself seriously with his new hobby, or whatever it was, and he felt that Grace had not hitherto very seriously resented his attitude in the matter. Now, being told that he was seeing things, or hearing things, which would have to be the product of his own mind, he believed there was a spirit counting in the haunted house, and now he offered Grace an opportunity to become convinced he wanted her to consider the proposition in a more serious manner.

The consequence was that a regular battle of words ensued, and terminated in a breach in relations. Ralph left in the grip of a mood of self-pity, leaving along the path. However, he changed his mind and decided to call on Grace. He was rather lonely in the woods at night. Of course, he was not afraid, but—and the investigation could wait.

The breach put Grace in a far from sensible frame of mind. She loved Ralph, for all of his "foolish fad," as she called it, and she was sorry for it the next day.

Early Sunday evening Beth Stark came to see her, and they went for a walk, wandering into the woods.

Suddenly Grace appeared to have an inspiration.

"Let's visit the haunted house," she suggested. "Maybe we will get a look at a spook. I don't take any stock in such things, but we can have some fun prowling over the ruin. It's just growing dusk, and it isn't as bad as if it were really dark."

Beth agreed. She was a sensible girl and braver than many of her sex, and she was ready for a diversion. So the two girls made their way to the haunted house.

Grace hesitated when they stood before the ancient structure. Everything looked so gloomy and silent—and foreboding. But she could not draw back now, especially when Beth was manifesting anxiety to begin the exploration.

So into the haunted house they went, gaining access through a window, because the doors were boarded up. Inside it was quite dark, for foliage covered most of the windows. Grace felt herself trembling.

The girls went through several rooms, feeling their way along dangerous passages. In one of these hallways Beth stumbled upon a board leaning against a wall, and it fell with a clatter. At the same instant, Grace distinctly heard a step overhead on the floor above.

"Walls have ears," whispered Beth. "Maybe it's the spook."

Grace stood still, listening, and the noise above was repeated.

"Let's leave," Grace suggested then. "I'm willing," her chum agreed.

They retraced their steps toward the room they had just left. It was the room in which a staircase mounted to the upper story. As they moved along the passage, the girls heard a step on the stairs—a perfectly distinct step. They stopped again, wondering what to do next; for certainly they did not want to meet the spook or whatever it was.

Then it was again—the step, and it was repeated consistently. Somebody or something was descending the stairs.

The girls turned again and moved swiftly in the other direction. But they could not find a door. Evidently the hall had only one means of egress.

They crouched close against the wall, while their hearts beat loudly. Tap, tap, tap. The noise was growing nearer.

Grace's foot touched the board that had fallen, and it moved with a scraping sound. The footsteps ceased for a moment, then were renewed.

Chills coursed up and down Grace's back, and her teeth chattered. The steps were now on the floor near. Evidently the spook had descended the stairs and was walking across the floor. Yes, and—horrors!—it was making for the hallway.

Grace was convinced now. Her experience was having more weight than all of Ralph's arguments. Why did she make fun of him? He was right in his ideas, and she only wished he was with her now.

Tap, tap, tap. The noise became more distinct, then right at the hall door it ceased. Grace tried to make herself believe she had imagined the sound, but it was removed while her mind was following that trend.

Yes, there it was, right at the doorway. She looked with fascinated eyes, and watched a tall shape appear in the doorway. Beth wanted to scream, but her tongue clung to the roof of her mouth. Beth was shaking violently. Then the spook spoke, in a low, wavering voice:

"Who's there? Answer me, I say! Who's there?"

The spook advanced along the hall, moving slowly and peering into the girls. Finally Grace mustered her vocal powers.

"Ralph—it's just us," she said weakly.

The spook stopped, and scraped against the wall. A match flared, revealed in its hand and illuminated its countenance. Ralph Porter stood there, looking very lifelike but pale.

"You startled me," he said shakily. "I came to investigate and I heard you down here, and came down to find out what you were doing. I thought you were a spook, and frankly, I was scared to death. I guess I've got the ruin in the ghost business. Let's go to your house and talk about—about the matter or something."

"That suits me," said Grace.

LABOR IN THE SOUTH SEAS

Toiler, Who Has No Pressing Need to Work at All, Never Demands Bigger Pay.

Even in the remote islands of the New Hebrides the labor problem has reared its head, and the natives of the Illand nations has a slight advantage, resulting from the fact that they do not work for hire. In the New Hebrides, indeed all throughout Melanasia, the Black man can live very contentedly, according to his own standards, on what nature provides, writes Harold Johnson in Asia Magazine. Only a minimum of effort is required to secure food and clothing and shelter, and most of that effort is put forth by the female slaves he calls his wives. The recruiter who travels through the Islands to engage labor for work on the coconut plantations usually finds it harder to get the Melanesian to exchange his life of ease for life of toil. And the inexperienced recruiter finds it very hard. The days when natives could be picked up on the beach are past. The blacks in the more accessible regions know what powerful weapons—two years of hard labor from which there is no escape and from which a man may or may not return home. So the recruiter must look for hands in the interior, where knowledge of the white man and his ways has not penetrated. Even here the inexperienced recruiter is at a disadvantage. Fup the experienced recruiter has invariably preceded him.

Each year the number of available recruits is growing fewer, for the native population is dwindling rapidly. As a result the cost of labor is high. In the Solomons one may secure a native for a three years' term at £5 or £6 a year in the case of inexperienced workers, or at £9 a year in the case of natives who have already served for three years. In the New Hebrides planter bids against planter and the native benefits, receiving from £12 to £15 a year for his work.

A Case for Silence.

"Josh," said Farmer Corntossel, "did you tell the new summer boarders there are no mosquitoes worth mentionin'?"

"Yes. The language that has been used about those mosquitoes has got so free that the less they are mentioned the better."

WEDDINGS

DAY — WOOD

A quiet wedding was held at Presbyterian Manse, 271 George Street, Rev. Dr. Seymour officiating, on Wednesday, Sept. 17th, when Maggie Anna Wood, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wood of Belleville, Ontario, was united in marriage to Frederick Marshall Day, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Young Day, also of Belleville, Ont.

The bride was charmingly attired in white georgette gown with trimming of tulle lace with hat and shoes to match. The bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The couple were attended by Mr. Joseph Copeland and Miss Violet Connors. Little Miss Margaret Day was flower girl.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple returned to the home of the bride where a sumptuous repast was served. The bride and groom are leaving for an extensive trip to the west on their honeymoon the bride traveling in grey and green ensemble hat and shoes to match. On their return they will take up residence in this city.

A wedding of interest to people of Belleville takes place this evening at Trinity Church, the United Church, Winchester, Ontario, when Miss Helen Geddes Agnew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Ross becomes the bride of Dr. John Hayden Emery. Miss Agnew was formerly a member of the teaching staff of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School and was especially identified with girls' sports. Among those from Belleville who will be present at the wedding this evening are Miss Eric Grout, Miss Bessie Billings, Miss Ida Beerman, Miss Nellie Merry, Miss Mary Dwyer, Miss Marion Smith and Miss Jean MacLaurin. Miss Marion Smith will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding, which will be a very smart affair.

LOCAL MANUFACTURERS TOLD OF LOWER GAS RATES TO COME HERE

Use More Gas at Lower Rate is Advice Given by Manager

Is the manufacturers of Belleville will only use enough gas they will get a splendid rate, they were told at a banquet of the manufacturers' section of the Chamber of Commerce by Alderman George Tice, chairman of the Gas Department and William Harden, manager of the same department, last night.

New rates which have come into effect are practically as low as any city of a comparative size and even larger than Belleville in the Dominion of Canada. And the rates will be lower, the manufacturers were told, as soon as the debentures which were issued to build the new plant are retired. They are being retired at the rate of about $20,000.00 a year.

Manufacturers Ready

H. W. Rowsome, president of the Aikmile Stewart Warner plant here, one of the largest factories in the city, voiced the general opinion of the rest of Belleville manufacturers who use gas when he said that he was willing to use gas for every purpose, both for heating and other uses in his home and in the factory, as soon as he could be shown that he could use gas just as cheaply not necessarily more cheaply, than coal. "I think", he said, "that all the local manufacturers are willing to support a local industry and buy local products if they can be assured that the gas is as cheap as coal."

Unexcelled Rate

With regard to heating by gas, the city claims that they will give a rate surpassed by no city in North America if the manufacturers or home owners will instal gas furnaces. However, whether gas is as cheap as coal in the long run has yet to be determined. Engineers are going to be brought to the city from an outside point, engineers who understand gas in all its phases, and they will look over local factories and be able to estimate just what it will cost to heat the building with gas as well as its use for other purposes.

"We have all kinds of gas," Alderman Tice said. "We have enough gas to supply Picton and Trenton if they were piped from here. There is not a gas plant more up-to-date on the North American continent than that of Belleville. We can manufacture one million feet of gas practically as cheaply as we can manufacture one half million feet. There is only the cost of the extra coal to be figured in. The overhead is just the same. The gas plant is going to retire its debentures at the rate of about $20,000 a year. We have practically done that in eight months."

Need More Consumption

"We will give a lower rate if enough gas is used. We are prepared to give such a good rate if we go up to so many thousand feet. If you will use a guaranteed amount of gas each month we will give you a good rate that you won't kick at."

W. H. Harden, the manager of the plant quoted the following figures, which to say the least are reasonable: Comparative Statement of Present and Proposed rates of Gas Department for Industrial Plants on basis of one month:

		Rate
1	9,999	1.60
10,000	19,999	1.55
20,000	29,999	1.50
30,000	39,999	1.45
40,000	49,999	1.40
50,000	59,999	1.35
60,000	69,999	1.30
70,000	79,999	1.25
80,000	89,999	1.20
90,000	99,999	1.15
100,000		1.10

For every 10,000 feet of gas used a reduction takes place.

The question will remain in abeyance until competent engineers are able to give their report on the cost of using gas for heating and other purposes.

Local Industries

Factories represented last night were the Springer Lock Works, by G. M. McIlhenny, Cash's Woven Names by Captain Tom Webster, the American Optical Company by Ed. Worth, the Deacon Shirt Company by W. B. Deacon, the Aikmile-Stewart Warner by E. W. Rowsome, the Belleville Hardware by M. J. Vance and the Houston Lumber Company by John Houston.

J. O. Herity, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce was also present at the dinner.

Two sons of President Pascual Ortiz Rubio, of Mexico, visited Los Angeles on way to Benedict's College, Atchison, Kan.

As a nerve tonic more efficient than anything conceived by medical skill, Canada's rocky highlands and placid lakes were given first place by Sir William Dendy Wheeler, M.D., F.R.C.S., interviewed recently at Lake Louise where he rested after attending the arduous convention of members of the British Medical Association held last month at Winnipeg.

A note of confidence and sincere optimism in the soundness of Canada's economic position at the present time and faith in her future development was sounded by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at a banquet given recently in St Saint John by the Board of Trade of that city in celebration of the first sailing of the Princess Helene, new C.P.R. coastal steamer, on the Saint John-Digby route. Mr. Beatty said he hoped to see a second boat run alongside the Princess Helene in the not distant future.

Determination of the Canadian Pacific Railway to maintain for Canada the pride of owning the largest, finest and fleetest ocean liner on the Pacific and the company's foresight in providing for needs beyond those of the present in the realm of transportation were lauded at Vancouver recently, at a dinner held aboard the liner Empress of Japan, new 26,000-ton Pacific vessel. Hon. R. Randolph Bruce, Lt.-Governor of British Columbia, added his tribute to those of nine other speakers at the function.

Mrs. L. N. Calverley, wife of the famous British surgeon, was credited with taking the largest fish, other than salmon, to be caught in British Columbia waters this season, when she landed an 18½-lb Rainbow trout from the sparkling waters of Shuswap Lake recently. She is a cousin of Lady Diana Duff Cooper who as Lady Diana Manners gained world-wide fame as the heroine of "The Miracle."

The Banff Highland Gathering of 1930 goes down not only as the greatest yet so far as events and entrants are concerned but also for attendances since more than 10,000 spectators saw the events. Eight events ran continuously and concurrently; athletic events were confined to Alberta and British Columbia; dancing events added Manitoba to the list, while the piping contests brought in the whole of Canada, Scotland, China and the State of Washington.

Marking the earliest opening of the apple shipping season from Halifax to Europe, over a week in advance of last year, the first overseas shipment of the fruit went September 2 in a cargo estimated at about 4,000 barrels of Nova Scotia apples.

Deer, to avoid being shot, must keep away from rifle range, claims Peekskill, N. Y., game warden.

Radio Fans Corner

Well, well would you believe it. Friday night again and all our old friends back for an evening's fun. Just in passing may I mention that the reception last night wasn't everything good reception should be. It wasn't exactly bad but we've seen it better.

To-night over Cheerio at 9 EST we'll be able to listen in on a program of band music by the Regimental Band of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. Music by the band will be interspersed with song by Mrs. Gilmour soprano and Ernest Mettrop tenor.

If you want to get in on something good listen in to Cheerio or WJZ to-night at 8 EST to Ernie Jones and Billy Hare as they wax philosophical in a humorous way when they sing "Laughing at Life". The orchestra under the direction of Will Perry will try to offset the duo's comedy by playing sentimental selections.

With WEAP to-night beginning at 7 EST we'll listen-to Jessica Dragonette and the Cavaliers in the presentation of the Ciilés Service Concert Orchestra. Cliquot Club Eskimos immediately after, same station, and they bring plenty of sparkling new numbers along for our approval.

Vincent Lopez and his hotel St. Regis orchestra at 10 EST to-night and heard over WEAP (and at 10.15 EST Uncle Abe and David. David was suffering from all the symptoms of a bad cold last night and Uncle Abe was bound he was going to bed all day today. We'll see, what happened to-night.

WJZ presents at 7 EST Nestle's program which features Johnny Marvin, ukulele and tenor, as guest artists and an orchestra under the direction of Nat Brusiloff. At 7.30 EST same station Le Trio program, violin piano and harp. Another big hook up at 9 EST to-night the dedication of Camden as the Radio Centre of the World.

OBITUARY

LATE WILLIAM E. McGIE

The funeral of the late William R. McGie, who passed away in Muskoka, was held from the home of his mother, Mrs. William McGie, 38 Forin Street yesterday afternoon. Many were in attendance to pay their last respects to one, who was deservedly popular and was well respected in a large circle. The deceased was a graduate of Toronto University in engineering, later joining the Ford Motor Company and many from that company were in attendance at the obsequies including Mr. Porter, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Israel, Mr. Ellis and Mr. Ferris of Ford Ontario and Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch from the plant in Toronto. Others included Dr. Garrett, of Toronto, Mr. Craig of Toronto; Mrs. Wilson, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Ewart of Cobourg and Mr. and Mrs. Frost of Hamilton.

Services were conducted in the home by Rev. Robert Hall pastor of John St. United Church and interment took place in the family plot at the Belleville cemetery. A wealth of floral tributes testified in a small measure to the esteem in which deceased was held. The bearers were R. D. Ponton, K.C., D. Waters, J Whalen, C. A. Cameron, Leo B. Riggs, and G. Sinclair.

Triplets, two of whom arrived with pair of twins, were born to Mrs. Walker Petty, Chicago.

Exhibits and Races At Fair Highclass

Attendance was Not up to Expectations Though Weather Ideal

SCHOOL COMPETITION

Fastest Time on Record is Made Over Marmora Track

Exhibits which would do honor to the largest of rural fairs met the eyes of the crowd at Marmora Fair on Thursday of this week. Exhibits in the departments were restricted by their numbers and their excellence, it having been the policy of the directorate to build up the primary by making substantial awards. The result has been a uniform high standard of quality in the competitions in every class.

Marmora Fair board picked one of the best days for the annual showing of the rural products of the district. Bright sunlight shone and there was the tinge in the air which is always considered a feature of the exhibition. It felt like early autumn as it indeed was.

CROWD FAIR

Yesterday's attendance was good but it hardly touched two thousand or twenty-five hundred mark which is called a good crowd at this fall showing. One reason given by some for this is the fact that last year there were no races whereas this year the track was one of the places where the crowd received their money's worth. There were good speed tests in the "A" and "B" class which kept the excitement at the top until six o'clock. The return of track event, this year it is said did not bring back all who were said to have fallen away from the fair a year ago because of omission of the racing card.

TRACK RECORD BROKEN

F. S. Johnston of Marmora handled the bell in the track events to good effect. The trials were contest in all few delays owing to one horse losing two shoes and which troubles. Eliminations racing time was the fastest on the Marmora fair track, said the officials in charge of the sport, think Mr. L. Neal acted as judge, Mr. Clayton Tucker as Clerk and J. Wellman as timer. The course is said covered with light grass but practically every heat was a horse race, with close and exciting finishes. There were no three heat decisions for one race but into four heats and the other into five.

FREE-FOR-ALL

Minnie Patchen won the Class A or what some call the Free-For-All, with Lou Todd second. The summary:

Minnie Patchen	1 2 1 1
Lou Todd	2 1 2 2
Dorothy H.	3 4 4 4
The Limit	4 3 3 3

Time 2.36, 2.33 1-4, 2.30, 2.28 1-4.

THE FIFTH HEAT

Added interest was developed in the Class B event. Risko Maid which had won two seconds and two firsts had to race off the fifth heat with Lena Direct with two firsts, one third and a second place. Excitement followed the pair of horses about the track for the two laps. The close was a heated race down the homestretch which Risko Maid winning by a small margin.

The summary of Class B event:

Risko Maid	2 1 1 1 1
Lena Direct	1 1 3 2 2
Peter Hal	4 3 2 3
Frank Fielder	3 2 4 4
Mona Bart	5 5 dr

Time, 2.36 1-2, 2.30 1-2, 2.30, 2.32 1-4, 2.30 1-4.

FIDDLERS' AND DANCERS

Old time fiddling and dancing contests on the stand on the south of the grounds appealed to a large section. Here the merry steppers kept time or sawed in the grand old style to the content of the crowd.

FINE SCHOOL FAIR

To the children of the schools of Marmora and vicinity must go the palm for the part they played in the department handed over to them. It is familiarly known as the school fair. It deserved the big place it occupied on the day's proceedings. They filled an entire building with their exhibits ground floor and upstairs. Friends could linger over what they saw was being accomplished in the training of the young of Marmora district. Here were seen the samples of scholastic training in writing, there was scientific work in the collections of specimens of wood, of bugs and flies, manual training models indicated the developments of the interests of the boys in the making of airplanes, pens and houses and in contests with particular relation to farming such as windmills, models of barns, artificial flowers, relief maps of soil and their mixture, collections of knots, halters, weeds, weed seeds and home garden collections. There were contests in drawing and art, contests in public speaking and demonstrations on life saving and first aid.

WINNERS OF PARADE

In the parade Deloro Public School turned off first honors with Marmora No. 5 second, Deloro Separate School third, No. 8 Marmora fourth and No. 2 Marmora fifth. In the chorus Marmora Separate School was first, Deloro Public School was second, Deloro Separate School was third, Marmora No. 4 was fourth and Marmora No. 2 fifth.

Marmora Public School, carried off the Strathcona competition with Deloro Separate School, second, No. 2 Marmora third, Deloro Public School fourth, Marmora Separate School fifth and Marmora No. 8 was sixth.

A HAPPY SCENE

No small portion of the success of the fair was due to the efforts of these youngsters. On the field the calves and colts occupied considerable attention from an only young but their elders. Boys and girls laughingly went into these contests with their pet animals on which they had lavished care for the past year. Colts of the draft type and carriage type and dairy type calves were judged and led by the halter. The market lamb was not forgotten.

In poultry, flour, grain and corn, vegetables, fruit, cooking and recipes the oncoming generation proved them selves apt pupils.

FLOWER SHOW

The main hall was the subject of much comment. Flowers occupied the principal place of interest in the centre of the hall. Nature lovers lingered about these specimens of the culture of Marmora district. Not only was the flower garden so well represented but the kitchen also in its products of the oven such as cakes, pies, and bread, while preserves proved that fruit is treasured up against the winter days. Grains and vegetables of large proportions satisfied the eye and fruits like apples and plums and all on showed that while the name Marmora may signify a rock or marble, it is but a name for there is good rich land on which these products are grown.

Ladies' work made no small showing. Butter and cheese judged by Mr. C. Lynn was of a high standard.

LIVESTOCK

Some fine herds of cattle were shown in Ayrshires and Holsteins there were a number of good horses of all classes and h'cowpuntion was keen. The swine exhibition was fairly large while the winners of awards in sheep ought to deem themselves fortunate to obtain a prize for the sheep there were one of the finest ever seen in Hastings County. Poultry had numerous entries of all breeds Marmora and district and the children's work with a resultant creditable competition.

Around the grounds there were the usual signs of the substantial progress of Marmora, the fine stock, the well-dressed crowds, the up-to-date farmers and the modern buildings. There is depression felt here as elsewhere but the people know that they have a solid substantial foundation for their prosperity.

Among the exhibitors were Everett; Ireland, Springbrook; J. W. Wilbrin, Terry Fitzpatrick, Marmora; Clement Sheridan, Marmora; Douglas Rutherford of Campbellford; John Neal of Marmora; W. H. Hoath of Stirling; Mrs. Cora Faulkner, Harold; Mrs. Wm. Neal, Marmora Tp.; Chas. Jones, Marmora; W. Billings, Marmora of the first prize with Ayrshire bull; J. W. Bonter, Marmora; Miss B. Hay, W. H. Heath, Stirling; O. H. Davidson of Marmora; Russell Wells, horned Dorset sheep); William Vance, Tweed, poultry; C. U. Heath, Stirling; Peoples Brothers of Havelock, Ayrshire herd; M. Humphires of Hastings, sheep and vegetables; Mrs. W. F. Osborne, Bellville, ladies work; E. V. Hosber, Harold, apples; Sam Adams, Hastings, vegetables; Stewart Sullivan of Campbellford; H. R. Hazzle of Deloro; Clarence Martin of Corbyville, sheep; Mrs. W. A. MacColl of Wooler; Mrs. L. Bryant, Wooler; Mrs. F. E. Trenton, of Marmora; S. A. Terrill of Wooler and A. E. Hubbell of Havelock.

Clarence Martin of Corbyville won many awards with sheep and swine.

Marmora Band under the direction of Bandmaster Woodhouse furnished music for the afternoon. There were the shouts and sounds of the concessionnaires shouting their wares, their prizes and their skills and devices. Here humanity mingled freely in the thick crowds.

NO ACCIDENTS

Every precaution was taken to prevent accidents during the horse contests on the track the police being present and there in the vicinity of the open portion of the track being constantly warned to keep out of the way of the horses. Warnings were posted in various places along the track. The dancing stand which was erected on the north side of the park was moved by a decision of the directors on account of the risk involved in its old position. Fair board directors wanted no accident nor fatality along the race track and escaped it.

Johnson Family Held Reunion Here

A re-union of the family and descendants of the late James B. and ary Ann Johnston, pioneers of this district, was held on the tourists' camping grounds, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnston emigrated from Ireland about 95 years ago with their eldest child, eight more children being born in the land of their adoption. Of the nine children two survive, James E. Johnston, of Peterboro, formerly of Campbellford, and Miss Susan Johnston, who has been a resident of Whitnjey for 27 years and had not been here in 17 years.

There were 94 present at the re-union, including the following: Miss Susie Johnston, Whitnjey; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin McComb and three children, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. Mar Win McComb and seven children, Morganston; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ross and child, Brighton township; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Vance and five children, Hastings; Mr and Mrs. Garnet Ruther ford and four children, Havelock; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mumby and three children, Bonar Law; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Forde, and child, Seymour; Mr. and Mrs James B McKeown and child Stanwood; Mr and Mrs. Carl Johnston and child, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wrathall and child, Menie; Mr. and Mrs. R. Millsap and child, Napanee; Mrs. Wm. Close and children; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Mc-Greggar and two children, Crowdon; Robt. McGregger and four children, Crowdon; Mrs. John Miller, Campbellford.

The event was arranged in honour of Miss Johnston, who has been visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity for the past two months. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in visiting and renewing acquaintanceships.

Craps, and Opera Favored by Capone

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Al Capone, "self-made man", today achieved a new measure of notoriety with the publication of his biography.

Fred D. Pasley, Chicago newspaperman, wrote the volume which deals in elaborate detail with the scar-faced czar from the time, in 1920, when in security he first reached the Illinois metropolis from the Five Points gang in New York City to the present day, which finds him the world's most pub licized racketeer.

It is a story of "success"—of a man climbing his way to the top of his trade in the face of spirited opposition Living to the age of 32, far past the life expectancy of a gang leader, is in itself no mean achievement.

But Pasley does not confine his account to Capone's rule over the liquor racket, of the murders of which he was suspected, but never convicted, or to th enmities and friendships of Hamilton that brought his subject to the racketeering peaks. In addition are many intimacies concerning the man who has been termed "The Czar of Chicago's Underworld."

QUEEN'S SENIORS DOWN TO WORK

Coach Harry Batstone is Driving Proteges at Top Speed

Kingston, Sept. 18.—Queen's senior rugby squad numbered 39 this afternoon when Coach Harry L. Batstone gave orders that henceforth two practices will be held daily, the players turning out at 11 o'clock in the morning as well as in the afternoon. Thomas substitute middle wing last year, made his appearance on the field this afternoon, along with Turkey, a former McGill player, who looks like a good bet for a place on the team this season. Both players seem in the pink of condition.

Today Physical Instructor James Dews went to work on the squad and for more than half an hour they had a spell at physical training. Every morning and afternoon from now until the first game the players will be put through their physical training paces, so that there will be no complaint about condition when season opens.

Captain Watches Workout

Captain Ian Gourlay watched the practice from the sidelines again today and while he has secured his uniform and equipment, it may be a week before he gets into action. Gourlay is in fairly good shape despite his having undergone a serious operation a few weeks ago and it is not likely that he will be forced to miss many games this season.

Gib McKelvey, Davis and Elliott have been doing the kicking in the absence of Howard Carter, who will likely be in the first part of next week and they have been getting great distance to their punts. It is not unlikely however, that McKelvey will be called upon to relieve Carter in the kicking role during the season.

Queen's play their first game at London on Oct. 11.

ST. LOUIS SWEEP CRITICAL SERIES

Cardinals Now Have National League Flag Within Grasp

BROOKLYN, Sept. 19—The mad dash of the St. Louis Cardinals down the stretch in the National League pennant race continued yesterday when they made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Brooklyn Robins by winning the final game 4-3. A crowd of 28,000 saw the game.

With a lead of a dozen over two games and only nine games left to play the Cardinals have the pennant in their clutches and will meet the Philadelphia Athletics, who clinched the American League pennant in the world series starting October 1, unless they show a complete reversal of their present form.

Instead of spinning yesterday's game in the final inning as they had the two previous fixtures, the Cardinals saved it in the ninth when the Robins began an uprising which, one time, threatened to wipe out the Red Birds' lead.

Lopez Fails Again

Going into the ninth the Cards had a 4-2 lead, which seemed ample with Burleigh Grimes, one-time Brooklyn pitcher, going great guns.

With one out, Hendrick singled off Sparky Adams' glove and Ike Boone followed with a single past Rollie Hemsley, putting Hendrick on third Lopez could do was force Warner, who ran for Boone, at second, Hendrick scoring on the play.

Jake Flowers, pinch-hitting for Thurston, popped to Mancuso along the third base line to end the game, leaving the tying run stranded.

The Cards made only five hits off the combined deliveries of Babe Phelps and Rollie Thurston, who relieved the former in the sixth after a hit and a walk, but three were enough to give them their four runs.

Pass Destroys Trouble

Phelps had entered the Cards in order in the first three innings and then he got himself into trouble by walking Douthit to start the fourth. Adams forced Douthit at second, but Pritch made his first hit of the series—a long triple to left—which scored Adams.

Jim Bottomley followed with a home run over the right field screen, scoring Pritch ahead of him and giving St. Louis a three-run lead.

The Cards added another run which eventually proved to be the winning tally, in the sixth when Douthit led off with a triple to centre. Adams walked and Phelps was relieved by Thurston. Pritch grounded to Wright forcing Adams but permitting Douthit to cross the plate with the deciding run.

Brooklyn scored its first run off Grimes in the sixth on Gilbert's triple to centre and Herman's sacrifice fly to Douthit. Babe Herman, who was the biggest bust of the series, made his first hit of the series when he drove a fly ball to right which bounded off the right field screen for a home run—his 33rd of the season. Cards Should Hold Lead

Barring unforeseen events the Cards should coast home to the pennant as they open the Philadelphia tomorrow for a five-game series against the last place Phillies, and then return home to complete the season with four games against the Pittsburg Pirates.

LOUGHRAN TO MEET WALKER

Philadelphia, Sept. 19— Tommy Loughran, former world's light heavyweight champion, and Mickey Walker holder of the middleweight title, were matched for a ten-round bout at Phillies Baseball Park on the night of October 1st, opening day of the world series here.

LANTERN FIRES BARN

Galt, Sept. 19—Hunting chickens in the barn with a lantern, Earl Smith, a farmer living eight miles southwest of Ayr, fell through a trap door and the lantern set fire to the barn, destroying it with the season's crops as well as considerable machinery.

Casablanca, Morocco, due to a boom is forced to erect skyscrapers.

DECIDING GAME SATURDAY

The third and deciding game between Oshawa Arabs and Peterboro C.O.E. will be played in Port Hope on Saturday and should be one of the most interesting of the year. These teams have met twice, the Arabs winning at home by a 3-2 score while the C.O.E. team took them into camp in the Lift Lock City by a 2-1 count. By these scores it can be seen the teams are very evenly matched and anything is liable to happen. Ken Colling arbiter from this city, will be in charge of the game having been appointed by R. A. Elliott president of the O.B.A.A. "Ving" Uronski former butler with the Nationals will likely be the groundsman for the C.O.E.'s.

NO CLUE FOUND

Montreal, Que., Sept. 19 (CP)—The police as yet have no clues that might offer any solution to the killing of seven year old Simone Caron, whose body was discovered partly decomposed in the cellar of an educational institution in Montreal. Doctors attached to the morgue will examine the body today and it is thought something may come of that.

CHICAGO CUBS LOSE TO GIANTS

National League Champions Almost Lost From Race

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—The New York Giants required but one hour and 33 minutes yesterday to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 2, and, at the National League champions out of the pennant race. The Cubs, with but eight more games to play are now 1 1-2 games back of the leading St. Louis Cardinals.

Yesterday's game, the shortest of the season, for the Polo Grounds, found Freddie Fitzsimmons, portly New York right-hander at his best. Freddie allowed the Cubs but six hits, three of which came in the fourth inning, when the champions scored both their runs.

Bush and Nelson Hit Hard

While Fitzsimmons was putting on his act, his mates rapped Guy Bush and Lynn Nelson for 11 safeties, including home runs by Mel Ott and Hughie Critz.

Ott, first man up in the second inning, gave the Giants their first run with a home run to the upper deck of the right field grandstand.

The Cubs won their first and temporary lead in the fourth inning, when, after Heathcote had flied out, Hartnett singled, and long George Grantham slammed the left field stands for two runs. The Cubs never threatened after Kelly's homer, Fitzsimmons holding them to two hits the rest of the way.

The Giants got to bush for five hits and four runs in the first half of the fourth to clinch the game. Ott and Hogan singled and Jackson walked, filling the bases. Moore then drove Roettger then rolled to Bush, forcing Ott at the plate, and was doubled at first.

New Song Hits In King of Jazz

Breath Taking in Beauty of Melody and Magnificence of Spectacle

New song hits by the nation's greatest song-writers are literally packed into "King of Jazz," the Universal musical extravaganza starring Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, which is coming to the Belle Theatre Saturday and Monday, matinee daily.

Besides the eight spectacular musical numbers of the picture, there are many specialties, in all of which genius and song are combined. The entire picture is photographed in Technicolor.

Mabel Wayne, who wrote "Ramona" and "Spanish Town," two of the biggest song hits ever registered, has contributed largely to "King of Jazz." She wrote "It Happened in Monterey," a beautiful ballad which is sung in a supremely beautiful Mexican setting by John Boles and Jeanette Loff, and "My Ragamuffin Romeo," sung by Jeanie Lang and George Chiles especially for the Universal production.

Jeanie Lang is known as "America sweetheart of the air" because of her widespread popularity on National Radio programs. Chiles is a famous New York vaudeville headliner. Both work in this song with Don Rose and Marian Statler, whose "rag doll" dance is a sensation.

Milton Ager and Jack Yellen, whose "I Wonder What Became of Sally" and other hits have made them one of the best known song writing teams in the country wrote several numbers especially for the Whiteman picture. "A Bench in the Park," "I've Got Those Happy Feet," "The Song of the Dawn" and "I want to do Things for You" are among them.

As played by the Whiteman orchestra, these, and other numbers provide the ultimate in popular music from beautiful ballads to catchy jazz. And never before has the clarity of sound of "King of Jazz" been even approached on the screen.

Grace Hayes, vaudeville star, sings in the picture some of her distinctly individual personality songs, including "They Call Dancing a Pleasure," "Happy Feet" and "Song of the Dawn." Norman, Paul Howard and other famous eccentric dancers, strut their best to the incomparable tunes.

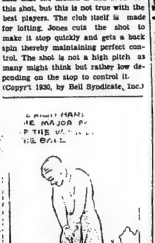
LEAGUE BUDGET

GENEVA, Sept. 19 (CP)—The budget of the League of Nations organization for the year 1931 is estimated at 39,660,000 gold francs, compared with 38,310,000 francs expended in 1930.

DAVIES DEFEATS ATHERTON

Pittsburg, Sept. 19—Willie Davies, 114 3-4, Charleroi, Pa., was given the decision over Happy Atherton, 113 3-4 of Indianapolis, in a ten-round bout here last night.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS
By M. B. Martin



MASHIE NIBLICK APPROACH
SHOT HARD TO MASTER

Playing the mashie niblick approach is an art that many of the leading players are not as proficient in as they might be. Bobby Jones comes nearer to perfection in this shot than any other even when playing it out of a sand trap.

In the ordinary pitch to the green Bobby can come as close to the cup as anyone. Jones plays his shot off his right foot. Some golf experts have said that the niblick is laid back for this shot, but this is not true with the best players. The club itself is made for lofting. Jones cuts the shot to make it stop quickly and gets a back spin thereby maintaining perfect control. The shot is not a high pitch as many might think but rather low depending on the slop to control it.

(Copyrt 1930, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Strong Right Hand Means Long Shots

The right hand does a great portion of the hitting. The picture shown here well explains that for we cannot impart much power by pulling through with left, so naturally we use this as the guiding hand and hit with the right for all we are worth. The left hand is not a passenger on the club by any means as it does its bit first in taking the club back and, second, in guiding the right on the downward swing.

Naturally both hands work together and the right, as the stronger of the two, comes in for the lion's share of the work. If we attempt to hit with the left we usually make a sorry mess out of attempt.

RUN-UP SHOT VALUABLE ON SOUTHERN COURSES

At this time of the year the run-up shot is the most useful of Southern fairways. In California the perfect greens enable one to play just as they would in the summer months, but in the South where grass greens are supplanted by sand greens, in many cases, the run-up is valuable. This shot unlike the mashie niblick pitch is played off of the left foot. If the shot is by any chance topped it makes very little difference as it will run about the same distance.

Alex Smith always played this with a drag or back spin at the same time keeping the ball low along the ground. Playing off the Bermuda grass a run-up is best the experts find. One can better gauge the run of the ball than in pitching.

The Red Man Tries the Pipes

Sandy has a broad grin on his face as he watches brother Redman take a fling at the bagpipes which he has loaned him for a moment to try his luck. The Indian is all intent on his musical-toned task and since it is only a photograph and not a sound picture you can contemplate the scene without misgivings. Photographer was taken during the recent Highland Gathering and Scottish Music Festival held at Banff, Alberta.

MORE SPACE FOR FALL URGED BY COLLINS

Department Stores Must Advertise More to Keep Up Sales Volume, Macy Executive Declares — Sees Good Prospects.

Department stores should use more, not less, advertising this fall to keep up their sales volume, according to Kenneth Collins, executive vice-president of R. H. Macy and Co., Inc., New York, whose views appear in the August bulletin of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. Mr. Collins is chairman of the sales promotion division of this association

If increased expenditures for advertising result in a slightly higher percentage to sales volume, he said, it is entirely justified by present conditions. His article state:

"Because of poor business conditions during the past few months, hundreds of stores are radically changing their sales promotion activities. There are more sales today, there is less institutional advertising, there is, in many cases a complete abandonment of price lines, and there is an unfortunate tendency to palm off a lot of inferior merchandise under the guise of lower wholesale prices.

"It seems to me that no one of these attitudes is really justified—except perhaps the necessity for more sales when justified by market conditions.

"In very many lines, as we all know, there has been no marked reduction in wholesale price levels. And in those most affected, such as textiles, there is every indication that the prices must be about at the bottom now and that since most wholesale stocks are being rapidly liquidated, there will be some strengthening prices early in the fall.

"With this in mind, it seems futile to abandon the methods of the past few years when most stores have been building up reputations for the future rather than spending all their energies in building sales volume for the moment.

"In 1920 when conditions were far worse than at the present time, when commodity prices were lower and there were far greater stocks of merchandise on hand business recovered rather rapidly. There is no reason to suppose that we are not passing through a far more favorable period than that.

"Panicky methods in various stores, therefore, appear to me to be quite unjustified by the facts. Nevertheless, I do strongly urge stores to do all they can to keep up volume. Rather than curtail advertising, I feel that advertising should be more extensive this fall.

"All our plans have been laid on the expectation of bigger business in the year 1930 than in the year 1929. Fixture costs, costs of merchandise delivery, and various other items of operating expense cannot be greatly curtailed. It is imperative, therefore, to keep sales un. And if a slightly higher percentage of advertising to sales has to be used, it is, in my opinion, entirely justified."

Mr. Collins is at present spending a vacation in Europe. He will return in September.

ROGER BABSON DECRIES CUT IN ADVERTISING

Business Analyst Declares Now Is Time for Local Merchants to Profit by slash in Commodity Prices

"It is a mistake to reduce advertising expenditures merely because sales are slow and profits lower," warned Roger W. Babson, famous analyst in a signed and copyrighted statement published recently in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He added:

"Admittedly, business must cut out all unnecessary expenses at this time; but it is shortsighted policy indeed to consider advertising as an unnecessary expense. Instead, look at it as the strong right arm of the sales department capable when rightly used, of wresting profits from seemingly barren fields. Look at it as a vitalizing force in American business, as a key factor in mass production, as a potential stabilizer of employment, a creator of new industries, a foundation builder for future business growth.

"Ask any business man today what he considers the most important department of his business, and nine times out of ten he will answer the sales department. And yet business men who would not think of letting their factories run with broken machinery, are often guilty of giving broken tools to their sales forces and expecting them to produce business. A half-hearted or severely curtailed advertising program is a broken tool. Now, more than ever, the sales department needs every possible support.

"The larger industrial corporations which advertise on a national scale have come to recognize more fully than have the local business men, the advantages of sustained advertising in times of dull business. Particularly the local retailers should realize that their greatest selling aid under present conditions is more and better advertising. Especially now that wholesale commodity prices have declined so extensively, retailers are in a position to offer merchandise at attractive price concessions. In order to increase volume of sales he should tell the public about the savings which can now be made in the purchase of staple commodities. The best way to tell them is through the local newspaper."

TWO INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Mixup of Cars as Brakes Cause Skidding at Newcastle

Two were injured in an accident which occurred on the Provincial Highway when a car driven by e. Belleville man crashed into another driven by an American citizen, says a Port Hope despatch. The driver of the American car was cut on the chin, while his wife was taken to the Bowmanville Hospital suffering with a dislocated hip and severe lacerations on the hands and face caused from flying glass.

The accident occurred near Newcastle and the Canadian car, a Chevrolet coach sustained damage to the fenders, front axle and radiator, while the United States car fared much worse with frame twisted, springs broken, axle twisted, fenders dented and windshield broken.

Traffic officer J. H. Hinchliffe, of Bowmanville, investigated the accident and laid a charge of reckless driving against the Belleville man, who was later in the day fined ten dollars and costs when he pleaded guilty.

According to the statement made to the police the Belleville man was following a buggy and suddenly applied his brakes causing his car to skid across the path of the American car. When the latter car was hit the driver lost control and his machine ran into a ditch, sideswiped a tree and then collided headon with another tree Damage on the American car is estimated at $250 while the Canadian car suffered damage to the extent of $35.

Mission Circle Is Entertained

One Wednesday evening last at the home of Mrs. F. Jarrell, Grier street, Miss Merri Howe was hostess to the "Bi-ve-Am-Ti" Mission Circle of the Tabernacle Church. In the absence of the president, Miss Laura Dourbrick presided and expressed the pleasure of the members in having Mrs. E.I. Sharpe present again.

The program opened with a hymn followed by worship service, conducted by Miss Laura Bell and followed:— Chant—The Lord is in His Holy Temple let all the earth be silent before Him. Scripture lesson. Psalm 126. After which Miss Bell conquered the religious fervor of today with that of Paul and other prophets and martyrs of the early church. The hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past", was followed with silent prayer under several bread'ns suggestions by Miss Bell.

Miss Jessie Smith introduced a Biblical pageant of names and pieces Maanan's wife and waiting maid and in closing compared the opportunities of Canadian girls with those of the little girl who waited upon the Captain's wife "She did what she could, do you?"

Another story of The Talenta was produced in pageant form by five young ladies, followed by the hymn "There is Work to do for Jesus".

The watch tower was conducted by Mrs. Verna Irvine. It was responsible to with news from India, Korea, China Japan and Africa.

The business routine included a report from the supply secretary of a bale of Christmas Joys in the shape of Christmas stockings for boys and girls the whole valued at forty-two dollars, also plans for the Circle rally in the Tabernacle Church.

The meeting closed with the hymn "Jesus Calls Us" and the Mizpah benediction, after which groups one and two served delicious refreshments.

SHORTER CAMPAIGN IN ELECTIONS

OTTAWA, Sept. 19. — It seems a pretty good guess that Canada's next general election campaign, whenever it may be will be materially shorter than the eight weeks which comprised last Summer's ballot battle.

In his report on the last election, which was tabled to-day in the House of Commons, Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, makes suggestions which he believes, would help aid the enumeration of voters and reduce the duration of the campaign to six weeks.

His suggestion which will be laid before the House committee of elections and privileges, is that in future elections a copy of the enumerators' list be left at each residence in an electoral district so that the voters themselves can check it and see if their names are properly listed. They could then appear if necessary before courts of revision to have changes made.

A group of British financiers have organized to rescue prosperity to Great Britain.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Meddlesome Reporter

N. Florence Leech

"Important Clew in Love Nest Tangle Unearthed by Local Architect." This tall, black letters on the front page of the Morning star seemed to shriek forth the news the moment he set foot on it Thurza Tilghman as she read. And then picked it up quickly and skimmed the spicy story with disgust and anger. Milton H. Tilghman, her husband, was mixed up in a love nest scandal! Viciously she twisted the offending paper and flung it into the ticket. This, she told herself, was more than she could endure.

Milton was draughtsman in an architect's office and until recently his life had been placid and above reproach. He and Thurza played tennis with other young couples in the neighborhood, attended bi-monthly dances in each other's homes and play of bridge once a week. Milton had always seemed perfectly happy and contented with this routine. But six months ago Dick Gayle had come to Tidecrest from New York, to accept a position on the Morning Star. He was an old college crony of Milton's, and their intimacy was quickly renewed. Milton formed the habit of accompanying the newspaper man on assignments whenever possible, and as a result began staying out until all hours, unheeding Thurza's protests. She began reading the Morning Star not for the lurid "news" it contained but to learn where her husband had been the night before.

If Milton had been tactful, he might have avoided trouble. But he was just average masculine and couldn't see why Thurza was ashaming of his clever piece of detective work. So the love-nest episode precipitated a crisis. They had quarreled frequently these last months, but never with such ugly words or bitter recriminations. Thurza had threatened many times to leave Milton; today she did not threaten, but after he started for the office she began packing. She had decided to go to St. Louis and stay for a time with her sister, Emily and she hoped fervently that she would never see her wild husband again.

As she sped eastward she kept repeating herself that she was glad she had left Milton before he discarded her. Now he could become a police reporter, as he had threatened to do.

"Love-nest, Love-nest" the rails sang. Presently it changed to "Desarted Spouse; De-serted Spouse." All night she wept as she listened to the rhythmic rattle of the train. In the late afternoon she reached St. Louis. Thurza was welcomed heartily by her sister and brother-in-law.

"Sam will find a position for you, and you can live with us," Emily declared optimistically.

It sounded delightful, but after a long week Thurza grew more and more restless. It was hard, hard to forget Milton. But Emily and Sam agreed that she had acted wisely in leaving him.

"He's probably always been wild," declared Samuel, "and you are just finding it out."

"So different from Samuel," Emily contributed.

"Oh, yes." Thurza replied emphatically. She realized suddenly that she must go out and find herself a job and a room. She could not stay indefinitely with her sister. But all the world seemed topsy turvy. Samuel was so good, but somehow she almost hated him. And Emily's sympathy, so soothing at first, jarred on her terribly. How could Emily love a bald mat with a big paunch? He was stolid and perfectly consistent to all like a bump on a log. Milton, whom she would never see again, was calm and energetic and alert.

Thurza took long walks, exhausting herself physically, but she could not sleep. And every day she bought a coupy of the Tidewater Morning Star which she read with eager loathing.

On Saturday she shut herself in her room before she opened the familiar sheet. Black headlines leaped to meet her glaried eyes. "Bloody Battle Waged," she read. "Architect Injured by Thug." A highly colored story followed. A reporter of this sheet—that would be Dick of course,—accompanied by a well known architect Milton H. Tilghman, had been attracted by the noise or shots and buryied to the assistance of several officers. Mr. Tilghman had been struck on the head with some blunt instrument. His condition was said to be undetermined. There was more but teh dancing print blurred before Thurza's tear dimmed eyes. Milton was injured, and who was caring for him? He was probably in some hospital, suffering and alone. Feverishly she packed her trunk, and threw necessities into a bag. Her husband needed her, she must hasten to him.

Samuel, stolid as usual, took her to the train and bought her ticket, but Emily expostulated all the way.

"Oh shut up," Samuel said at last. "Can't you see she loves him?"

Finally she was in her berth, and the train was rattling and roaring through the night.

"Love—lim; Loves—im," clanked the rails. "Can't you see—she loves im, —loves—him?" Thurza awoke at dawn smiling.

Arriving at Tidecrest, she took a taxi home. The neighbors could tell her where to find Milton. The living room windows were dark, but the front door was unlocked, and there was a light back in the dining room. She tiptoed down the hall and paused at the half open door. Dick — that loathsome reptile—was playing solitare at a card table. Milton sat slumped in a big chair close by, a strip of adhesive plastered above one eyebrow. His eyes were tragic and his whole posture indicated utter weariness and misery.

"I've lost her," he said, finally, out of the deep silence.

Dick carefully laid a red queen on a black king. "Not on your life," he answered, cheerfully. She's a good little sport at heart and when she sees the story I wrote in the Morning Star—"

"She hates that paper."

"Possibly, but she reads it."

So Dick had written that dreadful story to make her realize her love for Milton and bring her home! The good little sport stepped inside the door. "Good evening," she said, her voice tremulous with laughter and tears.

An hour later Milton was still reiterating that he was through forever with amateur reporting and Thurza was repeating that he could not live without her husband regardless of how he behaved. They had forgotten the reporter until he came breezing in from the kitchen bearing a tray with a pot of hot coffee and a plate of buttered toast.

"You're so—versatile, Dick," she said, with sudden admiration.

As they sat contentedly aroung the table, Dick smiled quizically at Thurza. "You will be glad to know, Thurza," he said, "that I've accepted a better job out on the Pacific coast. My talents, you will admit, are wasted here."

"Milton and I will miss you sorely," she answered quickly. "But you must stay right here with us until you go."

Outstanding Canadian Artists and Musicians
APPROVE the Tone Quality of the New MARCONI Radio

"Rich beauty of tone . . especially clear," says Dr. Ernest MacMillan. "Exceptionally faithful," says Madame Jeanne Dusseau. "Quite perfect," says Mr. George Brewer. Such is the praise of the new Marconi radio from some of Canada's most brilliant artists and musicians.

The same famous engineers who perfected Marconi wireless have this year Perfected Marconi Radio Sets . . .

3 DIFFERENT WAYS

1 TONE—Marvelous . . natural . . specially designed speaker and amplifier give you perfect tone quality . . tested and approved by such outstanding concert artists and musicians as Dr. Ernest MacMillan, Dr. Herbert Austin Fricker, Madame Jeanne Dusseau, Boris Hambourg, Stanley Gardner and George Brewer.

2 APPEARANCE—Beautiful . . absolutely correct, modern design . . judged and approved by such outstanding interior decorators and social leaders as Mrs. Minerva Elliot, Miss Martha Allan, Dr. A. E. Whitehead, Mr. Arthur Savard, Mr. Herbert J. Hodgins and Dr. Augustin Frigon.

3 SENSITIVE - SELECTIVITY — Amazingly keen and accurate in both far and near stations. Tested and approved by world-famous radio engineers . . a set that requires no artificial tone adjustment, yet one that will bring you stations you never hoped to get.

RADIO tone has this year been perfected by Marconi's world-famous wireless engineers. Outstanding Canadian musicians and composers have approved the Marconi radio's tone qualities!

There is a thrilling new joy for radio lovers and a new pride of ownership in the living, sparkling, musical tone beauty of the new Marconi radio.

A specially designed auditorium type dynamic speaker reproduces voices and instruments with amazing clarity. Massive construction does away with vibration. And a scientifically developed audio amplifier insures faithful reproduction.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

Opening of the Banting Research Laboratory at Toronto this week caused Lord Moynihan to forecast the trend of medicine in the next few years.

Medicine has made great strides in the past two generations and with the aid of modern scientific research it is almost certain to more than rival the developments of the past.

Before the discovery of antiseptic surgery and the discoveries of Pasteur, life was quite uncertain as compared with what it is today.

The future lies in all probability in the research laboratory, where scientific apparatus can be used as a handmaiden to the science of medicine.

Recognition of the discovery of Dr. Banting in the form of an institute under his name is not tardy in this age. There was a time in history when recognition might have been delayed for many years but the time is now ripe and recognition comes immediately. Insulin was the discovery of the laboratory and proves the need and value of research.

Research work in medicine is carried on by men of marked character. It is an absorption, where the profits are human benefits and the knowledge of a real contribution to the science of health.

Such men as Lister, Pasteur and Banting are public benefactors more than he who gives his millions, for they give what few men can give, the product of a mind's amazing keenness, something that prolongs life, eases pain, and makes living more enjoyable.

Honored in his own time, Banting must feel proud of the place he occupies in the medical world of discovery. Recognition of him is to the credit of this age.

CHILDREN AS EXHIBITORS

This is the season when the young have their fling at the fair as well as their parents. No prouder group can be found than the school children who have an opportunity to show the result of their work and care of animals and crops.

The school fair imposes a responsibility upon the young which is shown not only at fair time but for long months before. Crops are not grown in a day or a week nor are animals brought up as by magic. They grow the same for their child masters as they do for the latter's parents.

An early love for the farm and its life is inculcated in the attention paid to crops, to animal husbandry and to works of their own initiative, such as modelling, construction of model houses, airplanes, sewing, cooking and other domestic attainments.

Samples of the work and of the enthusiasm of the young can be seen at the fair at Cannifton, at Prince of Wales School, at Wallbridge, and at fairs in Tyendinaga, and other townships.

The school fair is peculiarly a rural effort so far. Whether something along the same line to interest town pupils in the life of their hometown could not be worked out remains to be seen.

ROAD NETWORK

Roads are much to the fore today. On Monday there was opened the highway from the provincial highway to Point Anne. Wednesday saw the opening of a stretch of concrete roadway from Rednersville westward, as a portion of the provincial system along the north shore of the County of Prince Edward. Those who know these two roads appreciate what has been achieved in the substitution of modern roads for these macadam ways best undescribed when contrasted with concrete roads.

On the Point Anne road the county and the Canada Cement Company cooperated in such a way as to make the road possible. The Company deserves the thanks of the municipality and of the village of Point Anne in particular.

The Prince Edward Road is something new in concrete. The way is narrow, but it is well shouldered with properly built sides which make for a road which can bear heavy traffic as well as light faster traffic at a minimum of expense.

The network and seesawing of roads is to begin, the linking up across country has started. A new era has begun.

SIDELIGHTS

DROUGHT

By Aline Michaelis

Now all the land lies parched beneath the fire
Of a relentless sun.
Now eager brooks have lost their glad desire
Seaward to leap, to run;
But lagging, stumbling, sink into the sand
With plaintive murmuring,
Too weak to paint green fields on either hand,
Too faint to laugh and sing.
So, too, the spirit suffers arid times—
Its seasons when drought rules
And all within its bounds seem desert climes,
No cloud or rainfall cools;
But as some day the bounty of the rain
Will bless the earth once more,
So faith and love will quench this doubt, this pain,
Again the soul will soar.

COLUMBUS IS IN DANGER of being read out of the party for being a bold, bad, pirate in his early days. Scientists are now trying to prove that he visited America before 1492 with a pirate fleet. Well, what about it? Columbus might have been a bold bad pirate who sailed the angry and otherwise seas, and after discovering America in his capacity as pirate saw fit to rediscover it as a discoverer.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, keeps climbing, once Governor of Massachusetts he became President of the United States, graduated from the White House into the editorial chair and is now on probation as a newspaperman. If he makes good in his present job he should be satisfied that he has reached the summit of successes, the pinnacle of his dreams, the top as it were—Pike's Peak or bust, and time will tell if Calvin can continue to sit on the peak. At the same time he might go over big as a newspaperman in New York but he would just be a plain bust in Belleville where more is expected of its newspapermen.

ONE-WAY TRAFFIC REGULATIONS have been issued to govern the air traffic over London, England, the air lanes becoming so crowded that navigation is extremely dangerous. One effect of the new one-way regulation is to make the trip between Heston and Hanworth three and one half miles straightaway, now a journey of thirty-five miles, and aviators are making protest. How any aviator could find his way around in the air over London during one of those thick and pasty fogs is a wonder to groundlings who generally are content to anchor at some pub or club until the beastly thing lifts. Another thing Belleville have over London, no fogs here.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Pop was trying to make his newest cigar lighter work and ma was darning holes out of socks, saying. Willyum, that baby is realy getting too remarkable for werds.

Meening my sister Gladdies baby, and pop sed, Then its too bad you cant tell me about him.

What do you meen, why cant I? ma sed, and pop sed Because you'd haft to use werds.

Dont be rediculus it sounds absurd ma sed Anyway, you know he has 3 teeth now, she sed.

Thats quite a feet, but it seems to me I once herd of another baby somewhere who had 3 teeth pop sed. I think it was a little Hindoo baby with remarkable powers of concentration.

I remember correckly, he sed.

It is not the fack that he has 3 teeth, in fact he's a little backward in that detail, to give the devil his due, ma sed. The important point is that one of his upper teeth is almost directly above his little lower tooth so that it almost touches it but not quite, and this morning Gladdis herd a peculiar clicking sound and low and behold what was Willy doing but manoovering his jaws so that the 2 teeth rubbed together. Where will you find another 7 months old baby who has worked out in his little mind just exactly what his teeth are for, in spite of the fact that he only has 3 to experiment with and no 3 of them naturally touching? she sed.

I don't know where to find another one now, but I knew there was another one when I was 7 months old, pop sed. I had 4 upper teeth and not a single lower one, and every time another upper came out instead of a lower I was reddy to bite my nerse with vexation, until finally I hit on the idee of holding a thimble against my lower gums and clicking my upper teeth against it, he sed.

Ma not blowing it and the idee making her so mad pop had to take her to the movies to make her better.

Girl's Body Found In School Cellar

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—Wrapped in a potato sack the body of Simone Caron, aged seven, of Pointe aux Trembles, on Montreal Island, was found yesterday in the cellar of the Rousin Academy, Notre Dame street east, less than three blocks from the point of her disappearance on July 16. The body was badly decomposed. The bones of both legs were broken.

Police of Pointe aux Trembles and officials of the provincial police began an investigation of what they regard as one of the most mysterious murders in the history of the district.

Discovery of the body was made by the brother of the student, who noticed a distressing odor in the cellar. Tracing it to its source, they pulled away some partition boards, and the rack, from which hair was streaming, caught their attention. Finding the little girl's body inside, they summoned police officials.

For Catarrh—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil that it can be used internally with as much success as it can outwardly. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

There was no use pretending. She was homesick—homesick as only a girl can be on her first night in a strange school a hundred miles away from her mother.

Then she heard the telephone ringing and her room-mate came running:

"Hurry, Betty — it's long distance. Maybe it's your mother".

And it really was mother — talking with her just as though she were in the same room — and the whole world changed from grey to sunshine.

School was fun after that, because Betty and her mother had a regular weekly visit by telephone every Friday night. It didn't cost much because they waited until eight-thirty when the lowest night rates begin. It amounted to about the price of a movie and it was worth twenty movies to Betty. It was worth still more to her mother.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls now begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m. Just give "Long Distance" the number you want—it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

Home Market for Our Wheat

Enormous Growth in Use of Prepared Whole Wheat Foods

That Canada is finding one growing market within her own borders for Western Wheat surpluses is revealed by statistics compiled over the past few years and released today (September 18th) by the Canadian Shredded Wheat Company Ltd. The figures.

"In round figures you can take it that nearly two million families are today including whole wheat foods in their daily diet," said an official of the Shredded Wheat Company in an interview. "Our researchers, while not of course covering every home in Canaa, tend to show That hundreds of thousands of these homes are using today at least one ounce more of prepared whole wheat in the shape of Shredded Wheat Biscuits, per head of the family, than was the case five years ago. Thus Canada is finding a market for about 3,000,000 pounds more Canadian wheat weekly from this source alone."

"We attribute the growing popularity of whole wheat prepared foods to a growing interest in dietetics on the part of Canadian housewives. Both the medical fraternity and the whole wheat food manufacturers have for years been urging, and rightly urging, the essential food value and the economy of wheat in articles of diet. The combined propaganda is beginning to take effect and as a result, Canada's surplus of wheat is being reduced, at a time when reduction is badly needed.

Midnight Train From Toronto

New Series Will be of Special Benefit to Hockey Fans

The new midnight trains between Montreal and Toronto of the Canadian National Railways, which will come into operation, September 28th, will give travellers an extra hour in each city, according to announcement made by C. W. Johnston, general passenger traffic manager of the system. Leaving Montreal and Toronto an hour later, the trains will arrive in the morning at practically the same time as at present.

Westbound the arrival will be the same as now, 7.30 a.m., The eastbound train will reach Montreal at 7.45, according to the Fall and Winter schedule, instead of the present 7.30. By leaving at midnight or to be exact, one minute to the hour, the trains will greatly facilitate the visit of passengers to both cities. At present the trains leave at 11 o'clock.

"Theatre-goers and hockey fans will benefit by the new service," Mr. Johnston said, "and with the knowledge that the train does not pull out until a minute from midnight, dances and other parties and social functions need not be broken up or interrupted. The midnight trains should make for greater social interchanges between Montreal and Toronto.

Departing from Montreal at 11.59 the westbound train will stop at Cornwall, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville and Dashwth, arriving at Toronto at 7.30 a.m. In the other direction the train will leave Toronto at 11.59 making the same stops except Dashforth and reaching Montreal at 7.45 a.m.

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT

OUR position as the largest one-price tailoring organization in the British Empire is recognized as a great Canadian achievement.

It also places on our shoulders a tremendous responsibility to Canadian men.

Because we are the leaders in our industry more is expected of us; particularly now when men are demanding greater value for their clothing dollar.

We have no thought of standing still or resting on past achievements. We must strive to retain public confidence and move forward to more business by giving still greater value.

Therefore, in selecting the woollens and materials from which Tip Top suits and overcoats are to be made our sole idea was to give more quality.

Tremendous volume naturally provides us with a greater buying power than our competitors.

This buying power was particularly effective in buying for this season when general market conditions were uncertain and "cash buying talked".

We were actually able to select our Fall and Winter ranges from woollens that were selling 20% higher than we paid for them.

On top of this saving, which is being turned over to our patrons, we are putting more workmanship into the styling, tailoring and finishing of our clothing.

The net result of all this is an astonishing step forward to greater value and improved service—at strictly One Price $24 to measure.

Before buying your clothes (regardless of the price you have in mind to pay) visit the Tip Top store in your city.

Come and satisfy yourself of our claims. We welcome those who come to investigate just as cordially as those who come to buy.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

"I adored Margaret Ann' and I want-ed Peter. But everything is so high. A dollar doesn't buy anything any more. I want my children to be clean and well bred. But that takes time and money. How much time can I devote to them when I spend every minut-doing work a servant could do? How many new clothes do you supposes the baby had? None, except what was given to her. I can't stand it, that's all."

The despair in her voice sounded like a knell to the listening young girl.

"If marriage is like this, believe me I'll step out of it." Sonia shuddered.

"Come on upstairs and I'll down. I'll do the ironing for you and bathe the baby."

Vera rushed again to Vera's swollen eyes.

"Oh, will you dear? I'm so sick I can not see."

Leaning on Sonia's strong arm she climbed upstairs and fell into her bed. Her thin face, sharpened with work and worry, was etched against the white pillow.

"You don't know what it means to me, Sonia, to be able to lie down."

"Shut your eyes and go to sleep. I won't do more than drown this poor kid."

Sonia's sympathy was as awkward as a boy's. Her heart ached for Vera, but she abhorred sentiment, particularly between women.

She bathed the baby, gingerly, almost afra'd to touch the tender skin. It roused no maternal instinct in her. Instead she was wishing she could be Paul Warner's wife for about an hour. Wouldn't she tell him a thing or two!

"The dirty dog," muttered, Sonia, twisting cotton in the baby's bottom-hole nose. "Walking out of the door like that. Leaving Vera to worry all alone"

Vera wasn't bad looking, either. She could have had lots of good times if Paul hadn't insisted on getting married.

Later, when the baby was asleep in her buggy and Sonia was banging the iron up and down the ironing board, she heard the front door open. Paul came softly down the hall.

"What's the idea?" she asked coldly. He seemed embarrassed to find her there.

"I came home for something. What's the matter with Vera?"

"You ought to know."

Shamed color rose in Paul's cheeks.

"I know. I acted like the devil last night. I didn't see how in the world we were going to manage with four kids."

"I should think if Vera can stand it you ought to be able to bear up," Sonia responded cruelly.

But he seemed in no mood for recrimination now.

"I know. I ought to be kicked."

When he had gone upstairs Sonia found she had left the iron standing on his shirt.

"And I don't care," she said viciously. "I hope Vera just lays him out."

She listened, but there was no sign of conflict from the room upstairs. After a while Paul came down and went away again. The two older children came in, begging for bread and butter. And before the ironing was finished it was time for lunch.

Sonia pushed the hair from her perspiring forehead and sighed.

"Think of working like this every day in the week for years!"

Through the kitchen window she could see Tom's mother pulling weeds in her garden. She had a disreputable hat flapping about her ears and old kid gloves on her hands.

"Wouldn't she die if she knew Tom had offered to buy me a diamond? I'd like to take him up on that just to see her squirm. Her precious Tommy boy engaged to Sonia Marsh!"

But the thought of Don Stillwater and his promise to write his uncle shone in her mind like a lamp. Every thing would be all right if she could only get away to Chicago.

She boiled potatoes for the children's lunch and made a pitcher of iced tea for Vera, with thin pimento sandwiches. Poor Vera had looked so miserable, so utterly tragic! Sonia fed the children and put them to bed for their naps before she went upstairs. Then, with the tea and sandwiches on an old copper tray, she knocked at her sister's door.

She was surprised to find Vera relaxed and smiling. Her cheeks were faintly flushed.

"Bless your heart, Sonia. This is awfully sweet of you."

She sat up to take the tray and Sonia sat down beside her. Every muscle in her body ached.

"Paul came back," confided Vera, between bites, "just to tell me how sorry he was. He said he walked the streets for hours last night worrying about me and wondering how we'd manage."

"It was a dandy way to show his sympathy," Sonia remarked icily.

"Oh, Sonia, you don't understand. Wait until you're married, darling."

"I wasn't so dumb that I couldn't see how you looked this morning. Things haven't changed any since then that I can notice."

"But they have, dear. That's just it. Paul says we will hire some one to do the ironing and he will do the scrubbing at night after he gets home."

She turned to Sonia and her eyes were no longer bitter but dark and sweet.

"You see, this morning I was bearing it all alone, but now Paul's helping me."

Sonia rose and stalked from the room.

"This is what I get," she thought, "for working like a dog all morning. Paul's helping her!"

What really hurt was that dark sweet look in her sister's eyes.

When she had finished the dishes and straightened the kitchen she decided to go home. She had no desire to met Paul again. Anyway, she said to herself as she left, it's settled Tom's idea.

"I wouldn't marry him for a thousand-dollar ring."

As she passed the postoffice Don Stillwater came up to her.

"I've just had a reply from my uncle," he said. "If you can arrange to leave next week there will be a place in his office for you."

The world whirled before Sonia's eyes. She caught at Dr. Stillwater's arm.

"You mean.....oh, honestly, that I have a job awaiting me in Chicago?"

"Does it mean so much to you, Sonia? Get in my car. I'll take you home."

A week earlier Sonia would never have dreamed of being raked to ride in Mr. Raymond Stillwater's car. But she was too excited over her future to appreciate the present.

"I want to give you a few instructions before you go" said Don. "Better stay at the Y.W. until you've got your bearings. They can give you a list of outside rooms. And don't get into automobiles with strange men."

This brought Sonia from her trance laughing.

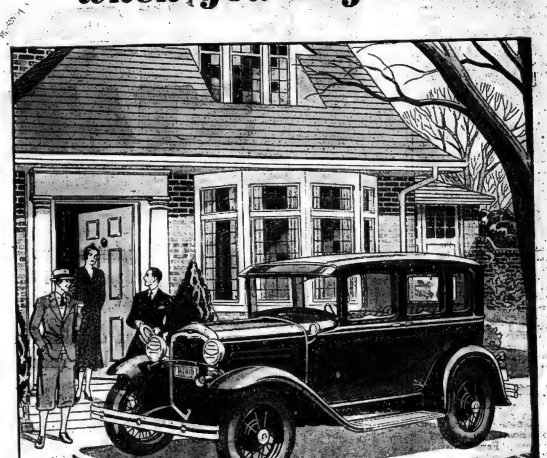
"Just listen; do I look as green as that?"

"You don't look green at all. Which may or not be a protection. But I do want you to use your head, Sonia. You have one.....I really predict a bright future for you."

"Do you, Don? Why?"

"Because, for one reason, you have a cold-blooded streak of common sense. Then you are adaptable. Learn quickly and have too much pride to be vulgar."

Color stained her cheeks.



She would be worthy of his confidence. Oh she would! But she could answer nothing.

"And one thing more. Try to drop some of your rough talk. Not because it's wrong, but because it cheapens you. Your voice is beautiful, Sonia. Has any one ever told you that?"

"No."

"Well it is. Very. Low and sweet, with a husky quality that makes it appealing. When you get to Chicago make an effort to use it correctly, and accepted it sweetly.

You save in many ways when you buy a FORD

THE NEW FORD TOWN SEDAN

Low first cost is just one advantage of buying a Ford. Of even greater importance is the saving in the cost of operation and upkeep. As the months and years roll by, this saving will total many dollars.

The economy of the Ford is due to its simplicity of design, high quality of materials, and accuracy in manufacturing. Every part has been made to serve you faithfully and well, under all sorts of conditions, for many thousands of miles.

Ford owners everywhere will tell you of the economy and reliability of the new Ford. Following is an excerpt from a letter written by a salesman who travels long distances daily by automobile:

"I purchased a Model A Ford Coupe May 8, 1928, and have run it 75,888 miles. After I had driven it 44,400 miles, I spent $45 in repairs and at 61,000 miles had an additional amount of work done costing $25."

Another Ford owner tells of traveling 24,000 miles in a year, "and the only parts expense was 75c for a shock absorber link and 50c for a new rubber for the windshield wiper."

A drive-it-yourself firm operating thirty-one Fords is enthusiastic about their performance. They write — "We have found the Model A Ford more economical to operate and the depreciation less. We do not hesitate to say that the new Ford is worth at least $300 over any other type of car in its price field."

A total of 39,721 miles is reported by a Ford owner on 1105 gallons of gasoline. Another Ford owner describes a 13,000-mile cross-country trip and says the car was "extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy."

Large industrial companies which keep careful cost records are buying more and more Fords cars every year because of their proved economy of operation and up-keep. Their experience is a dependable guide for you in the purchase of a automobile.

Because of the value that is built into it, the new Ford is outselling every other automobile in Canada by a large and increasing margin.

In some sections, between 50% and 70% of all cars sold are Model A Fords.

See the nearest dealer and have him give you a demonstration ride in the new Ford. You will be particularly pleased with its easy-riding comfort, ease of control, alert speed and acceleration, and the safety of its fully enclosed four-wheel brakes. In addition, every new Ford brings you the added protection of a shatterless windshield — an important safety factor in these days of heavy traffic.

Low Ford Prices

There is a Ford car for every need and purpose. You have your choice of a variety of colors in each body type. The Ford dealer will gladly demonstrate the car over any roads you wish.

The Feminine Viewpoint

Your Baby's First Few Weeks

by Constance Cameron

We are sometimes prone to regard the first two or three weeks of a baby's life as a time when we can do just anything with him without having any effect upon his small melody.

But it has been pretty well proved by people who observe tiny babies constantly that, even as young as two weeks, they are well aware as to whether they can get attention by crying or whether this act doesn't bring forth any unusual scurry from nurse or mother.

In Dr. Mandel Sherman's book, "The Process of Human Behaviour," he says: "The influence of early emotional response upon personality can be seen even in the young infant. In the hospital nursery at least two types of infant can be distinguished easily—the quiet child who cries rarely except at feeding periods, who is not irritable and who demands little attention from the nurse, and the child who begins to cry long before the feeding period, who is extremely restless and demands considerable attention. In many cases it is found that the former baby does not have a private nurse, and, therefore, is handled very little except for feeding, clothing and bathing, and is allowed to cry until it becomes quiet. The latter usually has more attention, is picked up frequently, to be taken into the mother's room to be shown to visitors and is rarely allowed to cry very long without being soothed by patting or singing. There is thus a direct parallel between the amount of handling an infant receives and the type emotional response it develops."

So, even though you think your baby's cry is merely a natural thing, he is for the first time outwitting you by being conscious in a vague way that he is master of the situation and that if he yells loud enough some one will come on the run.

Skimp on the clothing for the baby, if necessary, but don't skimp when it comes to finding and hiring an intelligent nurse, for a right start (and that start is at BIRTH, not six months or a year after), means happiness or a struggle for discipline a little later.

Even the tiny baby will soon form habits and the first few weeks are much more important than we generally realize.

Don't yet ANY ONE wake your baby just to see how cunning he is. There will be plenty of time for that later. The visitor will go merrily on his way, but YOU can't; and to you will fall the job of correcting bad habits formed in the first few weeks of baby's life. It behooves you to prevent bad habits, because that method is much easier than to break them once they get set.

Her Painful Backache Quickly Relieved

Prince Edward Island Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

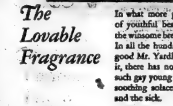
Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 15 — (Special)—I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety percent of the ailments from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.



Poor Law relief was being paid to 794,668 persons in England and Wales who were also in receipt of old age or widow's pensions at the end of 1929.

Douglas' Egyptian Liniment is an excellent dry wash for stock. Also removes corns in horses and quickly relieves bruises, sprains, swellings and joint stiffness.

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING
BY LUCILLE

Dear Readers

Perhaps you have in your wardrobe some of last season's summer frocks that you found too short to wear this year, and that they did not lend themselves well to alteration. You don't like to throw such things away and yet you wonder just what can be done about them.

Have you thought of making them over into undies? If you sew at all, you will agree that it is an easy matter to make up some coordinating lingerie pieces with a little ingenuity. Plain georgette or crepe de chine sets of brassiere and step-ins can be made fro ms discarded dress. Pajamas with contrasting blouses offer another solution as to what to do with last year's frocks. Use printed material for the sleeveless tuck-in blouse, get some plain fabric in a blending shade for the trousers and trim these with cuffs and top band of the patterned goods.

Now that suits are the accepted thing, you can make many blouses from discarded dresses, when part of the fabric is still good. One girl had a white and black dress, white silk dashingly marked, off with splashes of black which she could no longer wear. In this case the blouse was the compromise. With a bit of scissors and needle work it became a sleeveless blouse, for wear with the girl's tailored black suit and she had enough left over to make a square handkerchief to wear in the pocket of her coat. If your dress had a plain neckline with no collar and you want the blouse a little different, buy a yard of that pretty frilled georgette which is about four inches wide, in a contrasting shade and make a collar and jabot.

When the summer season is on the wane, and remnants of wash goods appear at low prices in the stores, you can replenish the stock of blouses for your suit by buying a few yards of different fabrics. They make up easily and since cotton prints and dotted voiles are so favored as blouses there is no reason why you shouldn't have a number of them to give variation to your suit.

Lucky indeed, is the person who is apt with the needle for she can find many ways in which to economize with the sacrifice of smartness. Expensive costumes often take the background before a simple, but cleverly harmonizing outfit. Good luck to those who sew, this season!

Fashionably yours,

LUCILLE

INFORMAL PARTY INVITATIONS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman

Dear Mrs. Beckman,

When giving a party how should the invitations be written? (The party is to be given in the evening).

It's a bit difficult, dear friend, to write an invitation to a party when I don't know what kind of party you are giving, but perhaps this will give you an idea of the form:

"Dear Grace:

"I should be so happy if you will come to a party at my house on Friday evening, the twentieth of August. It isn't to be a bit formal—just a gathering of nice friends like you. Please come in about eight o'clock.

"Dearest wishes to you from us all.

"Affectionately yours,

SINCERE NOTES OF THANKS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

1—In acknowledging wedding presents is it not better to use correspondence cards instead of the regular printed forms sold in stationery shops?

2— In acknowledging gifts should mention be made of the particular gift received?

P.

1—It is terrible form,—no form at all—to use the ready-made printed cards for acknowledging wedding presents. I can think of nothing that is such a social insult as having a printed card sent to one in response to the kind thoughtfulness that one tries to use when buying a wedding present. Anyone who sends such a card should hang her head in shame. Such a lack of fine feeling is deplorable.

And I think the fact you should not "cram" your style by using a correspondence card, and you will limit what you have to say if you use these cards. Correspondence cards are for the slightest of notes, and an acknowledgment of a wedding gift should be more than a slight note. It should be articulate—an appreciation of kindness, friendliness and generosity. And it should think about the gift. So you had better have on hand a generous supply of your most stylish letter paper, and use this for your notes. Make your notes proof that they come from you!

2—Yes,—it is socially correct to write "your gift" and distinctly gives the impression that there is a possibility that you have forgotten which gift it is. By all means mention the gift, interpret its beauty, its usefulness, or both, where you are going to place it, its appropriateness for your home, and similar items that will make the sender glad that he or she sent that particular thing.

Mrs. Beckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

Doctor Known as Maker of Champions Repairs 125 Boxers

From time to time interesting stories have been told about the fame of graduates of Queen's University but it is safe to say that no graduate of this university has won more fame for his work than Dr. Wilfrid G. Fralick, who is not only a distinguished graduate of Queen's, but a former resident of Kingston. He is a brother of Charles Fralick of this city, and a son of the late Joseph Fralick, who forty years ago was the proprietor of the old Windsor Hotel in Kingston, who was widely known all over eastern Ontario. Dr. Fralick is a native of Picton. His nephew, Jimmy Fralick, is sound movie operator at the Belle Theatre, Belleville.

The records show that Dr. Fralick has gained fame for his surgical research work—in the repairing of pugilists' hands shattered in the prize ring and the doctor is no modest over his work that he merely refers to it as a side-line in his medical practice. The records show that Dr. Fralick has cared for no fewer than 125 ring stars, among the most outstanding being Max Schmelling, heavyweight champion of the world; Gene Tunney, ex-heavyweight champion; Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight champion; Jack Sharkey, contender for the heavyweight crown; Jack Delaney, light heavyweight champion; Harry Wills Marion's heavyweight and Destroyer's persistent challenger; Paul Berlenbach, former light heavyweight champion; Mike McTigue, former light heavyweight champion; Louis Kid Kaplan, featherweight champion, and many other boxing celebrities. However, the work of Dr. Fralick has not been confined to the men who have won honors in the ring, but he has also worked on prominent golf, hockey and baseball players. Athletes by the hundreds, so it is claimed, owe their success to his skill.

Those in close touch with the work of Dr. Fralick say that Gene Tunney owes his fame and fortune to the former Kingstonian and his skilful gradsate, and writing in a recent issue of the Vancouver Province, Harry Hertz devotes a full column to the superb work of Dr. Fralick. Among other things Harry Hertz has the following about Dr. Fralick.

"Today, few Canadians have ever heard of Dr. Fralick's name. South of the line, however, the thing is different. Any pug fan in the States, any pickaninny with or without ambitions for the prize ring, anyone around for that matter, will tell you without a moment's hesitation, that Dr. Fralick is the man behind the scenes in the guise of the gloves and the cauliflower ear; that the doctor is a mighty man thus Tex Rickard of Madison Square Garden knows, that but for his surgical invention most of today's luminaries not only in boxing but in baseball, golf and hockey—in fact in every line of sport would have been names of by-gone days alone.

"The fans will tell you that if it were not for the doctor's magic work with the surgeon's knife, Herr Max Schmelling would not be heavyweight boxing champion of the world today and Bill Melhorn and Leo Diegel might not be able to turn in such wonderful scorecards of pars, birdies and eagles.

"Dr. Fralick is a surgeon in his own right, with a list of accomplishments to his credit that any surgeon might be has established for himself a name in fields where even medico-professional knowledge is hard to tread. And all his professional life the doctor has used the knife; it is only those who are ignorant of the most elementary facts that refer to him as a bone-setter. A list of his achievements reads like a book of fairy tales."

It is interesting to note that while at Queen's, Dr. Fralick had among his teachers Prof. Michael Clark, later on Senator Sullivan, and Prof. Kenneth Penwick. After graduating he walked many of the hospitals in Ontario before going to the States. He now has his residence and clinic in the Select Seventies off Central Park in New York City.

Health cannot be looked for in the child that is subject to worms, because worms destroy health by creating interest disturbances that retard development and cause serious weakness. Miller's Worm Powders expel worms and are so beneficial in their action that the systems of the little sufferers are restored to healthfulness all the discomforts and dangers of worm infection are removed and satisfactory growth is assured.

Fashion Flashes
By Alice Aldon

Done to a crisp brown are many of the newest fashions, whilst other cloth es content themselves with touches of brown. In the latter classification is an ensemble consisting of an evening gown of white georgette with a jacket of white satin banded in sable. Brown gloves and slippers complete the scheme.

Lace trails through the news of the new fashions with added emphasis on the importance of black lace. Very lovely is a frock of fine Chantilly with a clinging skirt finished with a pointed train. It has short, loose sleeves coming to a point just below the elbow and is worn with a ec ame matching cape and elbow-length white gloves.

A clamour for glamour in evening clothes has been answered by the designers who have devised new and glamourous models. Who would not fall to be overwhelmingly triumphant in a frock of red crepe marocain worn with a wrap of cream gold and silver brocade and banded in fitch. With this ensemble go slippers of matching brocade with red heels to blend with the frock.

Fashion bows to bows and one sees them on both day and evening frocks. A frock of white georgette owes its only other trimming than soft self bows, three in number, tied to one side.

The fur flies in many workrooms this autumn for furs are of great importance in the new styles. A frock of off-white homespun quite similar to that made is worn with an Eton-length jacket of black bretschwants. The jacket has short sleeves and is tied with a tie of matching fur.

Ascemble your ensemble for the Autumn and you will be smart. Soft surface black woolen and black caracul make an ideal ensemble with a seven-eights coat belted in the front only. The frock is simply tailored and the coat shows a very new sleeve with its upper part folded around the arm and a deep caracul cuff.

Walker Stores Ltd. Display Hats and Costumes at Review

Brilliant Collection of Garments Shown last Night With Fur Wraps Displayed Again by Delaney's

COSTUME JEWELRY BY McFEE'S

Costumes of unquestionable taste, reflecting the style tendencies that have taken Paris and New York by storm, were presented last evening by Walker Stores Ltd. in the fourth night of the Kiwanis Karnival Style Show. Hats, gowns and coats were all from this store, while the furs were by Delaney and the costume jewelry was furnished by McFee's.

Frocks of lovely charm for afternoon, and semi-formal wear, street dresses that inspired instant admiration for their smartness, evening dresses of glamorous loveliness, and cloth coats that followed the latest dictates of Dame Fashion passed in review, and were splendidly displayed by the Toronto mannequins, Misses Louise Burns, Dorothy Mitchell, Billie Brown, Eleanor Watson, Merla Watson Lillian Petrie, assisted by Mrs. John Kerr and Miss Della Jamieson.

The fashionable shades for Fall and Winter, as shown by Walker's, are led by black, which this season assumes a position of greater importance than ever before. In coats, in frocks of velvet, chiffon, and flat crepe this smart colour kept well to the fore. It was closely followed by brown and green, whose popularity this year is almost equally divided. A deep green, called cricket green, and a dark, almost chocolate, brown that came under the engaging name of "sandune" were predominating in the shades of these two colors. For evening wear, Fashion has been lavish in the use of colours, and the pastel shades, especially in satin are seen in great array.

The Russian Influence

In the styles shown last evening the vogue for things Russian, which is the mood of the moment with style fists, was well displayed in frocks that claimed the interest particularly of the business girl for here were dresses that would give her chic at the office and give her distinction at tea, and informal gatherings of the late afternoon. Of these an outstanding creation was in French beige, with long tunic effect, and cowl neck lined with shell pink. The cavalry cuffs of this frock were also lined with the pink. With this was worn a beige bolero-jacket, coat with deep collar and cuffs of black fur which also formed a band at the bottom of the skirt.

An unusual effect was attained by combining a Russian tunic dress of black canton crepe with a bodice of figured chiffon. A green frock of flat crepe was embroidered in white about a bolero jacket and had a little flare below the hipline. Another clever dress displayed tucking in a different manner, with smart arrangement of the pleats in the skirt.

For more formal occasions there was a pretty gown of brown lace and flat crepe which blossed over a vest of shaded crepe. A brown coat of silvertone with the new Genet fur collar and cuffs was worn with this costume. Many blue dresses featured fashioned a delightful frock that had a gold lace vestee. For sports a jaunty little costume was shown in shades of red. This consisted of a wolf dress tweed short jacket, rubberized for rainy weather, tiny hat of red and a red umbrella.

Evening dresses heralded the new mode for royal fashions. The graceful design that is the feature of the evening styles this season imparts added charm to the wearer. The beautiful lines into which satin and rich fabrics fall in the new silhouette of one reason why dresses for evening are so fascinating this season. Eggshell satin, formed a stunning gown which was worn with a tangerine transparent velvet evening wrap, in the longer style, that had a deep flare. In pale pink and delicate green, satin was a happy medium for two lovely evening creations while the most spectacular evening garment shown was of silver tissue cloth, in slightly bolero style, with a bow of rose velvet in the back. When shown with a Delaney fur wrap of grey squirrel the effect was striking indeed.

The silver hats and scarfs that the mannequins wore were from Walker Stores. Millinery showed all the newest ideas in headwear for fall. Satin velvet and felt models in scarves to blend with the costumes.

Costume Jewelry

Jewelry in the modern manner was shown by McFee's, and pieces suitable for wear with sports and formal attire were displayed. For the jeune fille there were rope chain necklets, some with amethysts, others with sapphires or other colored stones, giving an antique Russian effect, so suitable to the tunic frocks with which they are worn. Crystal with rhinestones effect was also shown a great deal, both in chokers and the longer strings, and with different colored stones.

A charmable piece on a long black cord was shown very effectively, with one of the black dresses and was very beautiful. This is something new in French designs. There was a large assortment of ear-rings including crystal in all colors, gold bead, jade circle with brilliant tops. And last but not least, one must mention the brilliant and ever evening dress with colored stones, others with pearls or brilliants that will be particularly fashionable this coming social season.

Fur Wraps

Bringing to a climax, a fashion review of great merit, the fur wraps by Delaney were again the centre of all attention just before the finale. Lapin, that soft, graceful fur, in dark beige, grey squirrel in a garment of real beauty, the new civet cat coat with pony trimmings and many other models lent an air of luxury to the close of the show. The fur neck pieces that were worn with the costumes last night were also from Delaney's.

Persian Balm the creator and preserver of beautiful complexions. Tones to effect and wonderfully stimulating. Safeguards and beautifies the most delicately-textured skins. Cools and relieves all skins flushed or irritated by weather conditions. Magical in results. A little gentle rubbing and a youthful freshness and daintiness is instantly created. Invaluable for after-shaving the hands and making them flawlessly white. Truly the perfect toilet requisite for the woman who cares.

IN FRANCE

The poplars in the fields of France
Are golden ladies come to dance;
But yet to see them there is none
But I and the September sun.

The leisurely contented cows
Can only see the earth they browse;
Their pie bald bodies thru' the grass
With busy, munching noses pass.

Alone the sun and I behold
Processions crowned with shining gold
The poplars, in the fields of France
Are glorious ladies come to dance.

Good Manners

WHEN THE MARRIAGE IS NOT FORMALLY ANNOUNCED

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

You have such good advice to other readers, that I, too, should like you to help me.

1. Is it permissable to send a wedding present to a young man who was married last month and from whom I never received an announcement?

2. Would a card of congratulation be sufficient, or is it too late for that?

3. If so, to whom should I send the card, as I am not acquainted with his bride and they live in another city?

WONDERING

In answer to all three of your questions, I doubt if I would send a present or a note of best wishes yet, if I were you. Apparently they are waiting to make an announcement of their wedding in their own way later—maybe by a receipt on or something of the kind—and when they do make the announcement you can make some gesture of congratulation.

In any event, don't send a card of congratulation or best wishes, for these, under all circumstances, are banned by good taste and good form. Nor should you send a present to the bride man. The present should be sent before the wedding to the bride whether or not you know her and after the wedding addressed to the couple or to the bride. Never to the groom only

GOOD TASTE IN BIRTHDAY GIFTS
BY MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man whom I know very well gave me a lovely box of candy and a silk handkerchief for my birthday. As his birthday is soon, will you please tell me what sort of gift to give him. READER.

Since this man used such good taste in the presents he gave you you should justify his taste by giving him a gift that is also accepted by good form. One of the best gifts is the well chosen book, and there are many books nowadays that are especially appropriate to men.

A carton of his favorite cigarettes every man welcomes, or a box of cigars, or a box of letter-paper (white or very light gray or French grunite) and with large sheets and envelopes.

With your gift, enclose your card with a birthday greeting on it, or better and more personal a note of birthday greetings. A birthday telegram is also, I think, a charming birthday gesture.

WEDDINGS

SWAYNE—KEY

St. Mary Magdalene Church, Picton, decorated with ferns, asters and other autumn blooms, was the scene of a wedding yesterday, when Edythe Elizabeth only daughter of Mrs. Fby and the late I. B. Fby. of Bancroft, was married to Rev. William Gerald Hope Swayne, son of Rev. W. G. Swayne and Mrs. Swayne of Bath, Ont. The ceremony was father officiated, assisted by Rev. Cecil Winter, the rector. The bride who was given away by Mr. George A. Welch, wore a gown of pale pink georgette and Chantilly lace and motoir hat in matching shade. She carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and sprays of white heather, the latter a gift from friends in Scotland. Miss Louise Coleman of Toronto, as bridesmaid, wore a period frock of pale green georgette with shoulder cape and picture-hat and carried a bouquet of sunset roses with long white streamers. The groom was attended by Mr. W. J. MacPherson. The wedding music was played by Miss Eleanor Holmes. A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch with Mrs. Rhys Mrs. Swayne and Mrs. Welch receiving. Later Rev. and Mrs. Swayne left on an extended motor trip, the bride travelling in a smart ensemble of crepe roma'n in tones of dahlia and beige, with a French model hat in dahlia shade, travelling coat of beige brocadecth. On their return they will reside in Cannanoburn, Hastings County, where Rev. Mr. Swayne who has been assistant curate of St. George the Martyr Church Toronto, was recently transferred.

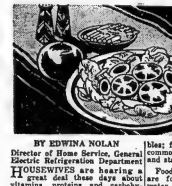
Carnival Crowd Still Growing



The Carnival spirit has not diminished and last night at the Armouries another large and enthusiastic crowd gathered to enjoy the entertainment provided by the Kiwanis Club. There was no feature like the previous night, but the assembly got a great "kick" out of the man fashion parade, that wound up the vaudeville performance. The entries could have been heavier, but Ralph Adamson, a youth of nine, took the people's fancy, and as the contest was by popular vote, he easily outpolled the other entries. The attendance of Wednesday and last night was much better than the two opening nights but the receipts have not gone up in proportion. The club was not expecting the same response as in other years owing to adverse financial conditions and are perfectly satisfied with the generosity of the patrons. The money will be used to the best advantage to help all those in need in the next year and to foster the community spirit.

Plunkett's Revue continues to be the main attraction of the show with "Margie" the girl wonder winning a place in the affection of the patrons. This youngster contortionist is on her way to a high place in her chosen profession, some of her "stunts" being scandalized for so youthful a performer. Elinor Watson gave a beautiful toe dance and Louise Burns drawing best bell hop would go dancing through his work. Ella and West entertained with patter and song and the whole ensemble gave two first class jazz and dance numbers.

Charlie Coyer and his Bon Tons attracted a large number to the dance floor and until the last quarter of midnight were the people there enjoying themselves. The orchestra was augmented by Jack Lang playing the sax and added much to the strength of the orchestra. There will be dancing every night and the pavilion is the rendezvous of the younger set. Of course the games at the back of the Armouries are an attraction for many and the play was apparently good last night for many were seen carrying blankets, lamps and prizes from the bingo game. The games are staffed with members of the club and enjoy the entertainment with the rest of the throng.

Mrs. B. C. Hinchcliffe had the honor of winning the door prize but only after several numbers had been called. The club was not aware that only those inside the Armouries at the time of the drawing will receive the prize offered. Tonight Kiwanian Joe Delaney is offering a grey beige fox scarf for the door prize and everyone should make a try for this beautiful gift. A contest that should show the popularity of long hair, will be held tonight from the stage. A girl or woman with the longest hair, perhaps a nobody in this age of shorn tops a novelty in this age of shorn from the club a valuable award. The contest is open to all and any one desiring to enter should hand in their names to the office or back stage while the show is in progress. Only two more night remain for the Karnival and it is hoped that the kind patronage will continue for the rest of the week.

Correct Diet Builds Body, Gives Energy

BY EDWINA NOLAN
Director of Home Service, General Electric Refrigeration Department

HOUSEWIVES are hearing a great deal these days about vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates; about mineral elements in food, about food preservation and about what goes on the family table.

The body requires fuel to carry on its various functions; it burns up the food and takes out what it needs. It can certainly find a source of energy, others as building material and others to regulate body processes.

Energy is derived, we are told by biochemists, from fats — butter, cream, salad oils, sausage meat, bacon and other fatty meats; from carbohydrates, such as flour cereals, rice, macaroni, potatoes and sugary foods; and from proteins, such as milk, meat, legumes, fish, eggs, nuts, cheese.

Building material comes from mineral elements, abundant in milk, eggs, fruits, green or leafy vegetables; from water in milk, and all common foods except fats, sugars and starches; and from proteins.

Foods to regulate body processes are found in mineral elements, water and vitamins. The latter being abundant in milk, eggs, leafy vegetables, raw fruits and vegetables.

Now, how may the housewife select from this list the proper combination of foods so that her menu will furnish what the body needs? Dr. E. V. McCollum, noted biochemist and discoverer of important vitamins, says that if cereal foods are first provided, then the rest of the menu may be planned to suit individual taste. First allow, he says, a quart of milk each day for each person; serve one cooked leafy vegetable each day; serve an uncooked fruit or raw vegetable twice a day. Protective foods, of course, also are perishable and they must be kept in properly refrigerated to be wholesome and to retain their best flavor and full amount of food value.

GUM in Gasolene sticks your Valves

is free from harmful GUM

CITIES SERVICE OIL
ONCE - ALWAYS

"YOUR valves were stuck," is the repairman's frequent reply when asked by a motorist—"What was wrong with the engine?"

A common cause of sticky valves is excessive gum in gasolene. Inferior or carelessly refined gasolenes have a high gum content. This forms a sticky, gummy, clinging deposit on your valves. When you step on the gas for more power your valves have to fight to get free—valuable power and compression is lost—your power is dissipated in a laboring engine.

Koolmotor Gasolene—the original high test, anti-knock green gasolene—is free from harmful gum; it is powerful and clean burning—a constant protection against the annoyance and expense of sticky valves because it is produced by the special Cities Service mini-gum process. This process, characterized by extra care and extra refining, reduces the gum content of this superior motor fuel to a harmless minimum.

OVERCROWDING OVERCOME BY TRANSFER OF SCHOLARS

Transfer Pupils to Prevent Crowding At Public School

Board Faces Possible Outlay for Present of $4,000 for Cadets

PURE WATER NEEDS

Board's Action in Providing Classrooms is Appreciated

The first meeting of the Board of Education since the holiday season was held last evening when considerable business was disposed of. A request from Mr. J. W. Howard, teacher in the collegiate and cadet instructor was made for $4,000.00 for new uniforms. After some discussion the matter was referred to a special committee to investigate and report at a subsequent meeting of the board. The over-crowding of Queen Victoria School will be alleviated by some of the pupils attending King George School.

Members present were Messrs. A. Jones, chairman; J. W. Barlow, H. W. Greenleaf, M. W. Ankerman, C. O. Stewart, W. Harvey, R. P. White, H. F. Ketchenon, E. J. Butler, J. Hillis, C. A. Chanonhouse, Mrs. Agnes McFee, A. E. Green, Col. W. N. Ponton, A. E. Schryver and G. F. Ostrom.

The chairman expressed his pleasure at seeing the members present at the meeting after the holidays. He also spoke briefly in reference to some matters that had arisen during the vacation. The chairman stated he had a complaint from the mayor in reference to the weeds growing upon the lawn in connection with the collegiate building. During the summer vacation several matters had been attended to such as making some necessary improvements in the public schools of the city. Some leaky radiators in the collegiate had been properly attended to.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Board went into committee of the whole on communications, reports, etc. Mr. Greenleaf in the chair.

The offer of Mr. McCullough to tune the pianos in the collegiate and public schools and keep them in proper tune each year, the cost to the board would be less than $37.00 a year.

Water For School

A brief discussion took place in reference to the drinking fountains in the schools being shut off.

Mr. Wilkins, principal of Queen Victoria School, stated that some of the children brought water to school in bottles.

Mr. R. P. White suggested that the board provide proper drinking water until the fountains are in use again.

Mr. Elliott moved that provisions be made in both the schools with drinking water and the matter be referred to the printing and supplies committee to act on.

Mr. Elliott made an explanation as to the various accounts presented by the finance committee and all were endorsed by the board.

Principal's Report

Principal McGarvin of the Collegiate Institute presented a report for the month of September which showed that the registration was 388 of which 236 were in the vocational classes and 465 in the collegiate. There were 28 upon the staff and all were doing well. The two new teachers were doing good work.

Cadet Uniforms

Mr. J. W. Howard wrote the board in reference to the board considering the advancing of the sum of $1600.00 for the purchase of approximately 600 uniforms. If these uniforms were of good durable uniform material their life should be 13 to 15 years. Since the Dominion government gives a grant of $5.00 per cadet per year the amount of $4000.00 would be paid back to the Board of Education in 8 or 9 years. The interest on the money during that time be considered a very reasonable cost for guaranteeing a first class cadet corps. He believed that the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School cadet corps should be equipped with new uniforms of a type in which each cadet would feel proud

FIRE BRIGADE DOES NOT FORGET

Today, September 20th., holds special significance for the members of the Belleville Fire Department as it was one year ago that William J. Brown, their chief for many years, met his death while fighting a fire at Springer Lock Factory. Chief Brown was respected and revered by all the members of the department. A beautiful wreath was deposited on his grave in Coleraine Day by the department.

INJURED BY FALL

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 20—Albert Blackburn an employee of the Thomas Irwin & Sons Co., of Hamilton engaged in construction work at the steel plant, is in patient at the General Hospital as the result of a fall of 15 feet. He suffered a broken wrist and was shaken up.

Blame Church Debt Deficit on General Slump in Business World

OSHAWA, Ont., Sept. 20—A deficit of $793,373.71 in the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada was reported to the General Council by Rev. Peter Bryce.

Nearly half of this attributable to the expenses of Church Union, he explained. In 1929, $2,086,- 727.93 was contributed to the fund, only 4 per cent. short of the objective. Had it not been for the business slump of the autumn months, both Dr. Bryce and the Treasurer, Rev. Robert Laird, felt sure the budget would have balanced.

Since 1918, the United Church has spent $40,000,000 on new buildings, asserted Dr. Bryce and the total value of property now held by all congregations is well past the $100,000,000 mark.

If every family in the Church were to contribute 25 cents a week, the Missionary and Maintenance Fund could be easily reached every year, Dr. Bryce. He asked the commissioners to think of the projects in terms of the great good to be done rather than in terms of the deficit itself. As Chairman of the Methodist Alliance Commission some years ago, he had been compelled to give close consideration to the 18,000 needy women under his care, said Dr. Bryce, and similarly he felt sure that Church leaders realized the importance of missionary and maintenance work they could raise the necessary money.

For the Women's Missionary Society Mrs. Annie O. Rutherford of Toronto, Dominion President, reported 170 workers in Canada and 180 abroad. During the last year the society has entered the field of temperance, she added, and is launching a new attack on the liquor traffic.

WHERE GRAY WROTE HIS "ELEGY"

A charming view of the Stoke Poges Church, in Buckinghamshire, England, as it appears through the lych gate at the entrance to the grounds. It was here that Thomas Gray, famous English poet, wrote his immortal "Elegy." The wonderful view that surrounds the church was recently threatened with destruction at the hands of the builder, but, due to the prompt action of the Penn-Gray and other societies, it has been saved.

Highly Colored Autumn Produce Offered In Large Quantities Today

Today saw one of the largest markets that Belleville has seen in some time. Fine weather undoubtedly had a good deal to do with this. Fruits were predominant today. Some fine looking St. Lawrence apples were retailing at fifty cents peck, but McIntosh Reds were few and far between. It is a little early for them yet. Grapes sold today at five cents the berry box this morning and melons ranged in price from ten to twenty cents, depending upon the size. A few blackberries sold at fifteen cents the box and pears were here-there-where at seventy five cents the peck. Plums, blue damsons, sold at thirty-five cents the basket, without the basket.

There was a large display of vegetables too. Carrots sold for five cents the bunch; peppers were fifteen and thirty cents the dozen, tomatoes were seventy-five cents the bushel; green tomatoes sold for twenty cents the peck. Celery was ten and fifteen cents the bunch, egg plants were ten and twenty cents, gherkins were sixty cents the peck, cucumbers were fifteen cents the dozen, cabbages sold for five and ten cents each, corn was fifteen cents the dozen and pumpkins were five and ten cents.

Eggs ranged in price from thirty-two to thirty-five cents the dozen and butter was eighty-five cents for two pound roll. Chickens ranged in price from seventy-five cents each for very large ones up to $1.25 each. Fowers sold at fifteen cents the bunch.

MANIAC BELIEVED GUILTY OF MURDER

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 20—CP—Police continue to check up on the inmates of nearby lodgings in search of the assailant and in hope of bringing the murder of the young child to justice. Whose body was found in the cellar of an educational institution in Montreal suburbs. Police are certain that the guilty man was a maniac. Apart from being stabbed twice he also by force doubled up body of the child when it was thrust into the bag Both legs were broken.

The police today had a man for questioning in the connection with the death of seven year old Simon Cohen. The name of the man was not disclosed.

SHANNONVILLE FAIR

The "World's Fair", Shannonville's annual exhibition, opened this morning, bigger and better than ever. Directors of the Fair reported to the press this morning, that never had there been a larger number of entries or a higher quality noticed. This afternoon some excellent trotting races will be run off, it has been stated.

Bulk of Chaney's $550,000 Estate Left to His Widow

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20. — Lon Chaney (also Mr. Chaney), star, left an estate of $550,000, he bulk of which, including $375,000 in life insurance, $17,000 in real estate and $125,000 in personal property, being bequeathed to his widow, Mrs. Hazel O. Chaney. A bequest of $1 was left to his divorced wife, Cleva C. Bush of Pasadena, the will stating: "I am under no obligation to her whatever, but I am doing this so there may be no contest of my will." Chaney's chauffeur received $5,000.

FIRE DESTROYS GENERAL STORE WITH RESIDENCE

Lamp Explosion in Shop Causes Blaze at Crookston

CLOTHES, MONEY BURN

Grant Coulter Suffers Slight Burns to His Arms

Grant Coulter, Crookston, lost his store and residence by fire about 11 o'clock, when a lamp exploded, setting fire to the building. Mr. Coulter himself was in the shop at the time and managed to make good his escape. The fire spread rapidly and though all the arms he escaped with less severe burns than he would likely have suffered had his sleeves not been rolled. He and Mrs. Coulter and their child managed to make their escape from the building and saved but little of its contents. The loss will be heavy, the insurance only partly covering the damage. Clothes as well as money were burned.

Mr. Coulter has enjoyed a large trade at his general store, in connection with which a barber shop has been conducted. His business was one of the landmarks of the district.

So rapidly did the flames spread that not only the stock in the store but the contents of the house in connection with the store were entirely consumed.

Record Number Students Leave

This year will find more graduates of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School entering the Universities at one time than ever before. On Tuesday those who will begin their freshmen year at Queen's University from Belleville are Margaret Chant, Phyllis Wells, Doris Houston, Ted Lill and Alan Sprague. Toronto University will claim Tom Lozier, while Malcolm Blakely will attend McGill.

Continuing their courses will be Gladys Mannings, Lillian Parsons and Tom Latta, who have completed their first year at Queens'. Douglas Smith and Don Ketchenon also remain in Queens. Miss Beatrice Wellman is leaving shortly for Hamilton to resume studies at McMaster, while Mr. George Faulkner left last week for McGill, where he is in his second year in medicine.

The tendency this year seems to be more toward University education for only a few members of last year's graduating class have entered the Normal School.

No Appointment Commissioner Yet

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 20.—OP — Premier Bennett announced in the House of Commons today that he had up on Canadian ministers at Washington. Parte and Tok o as permanent officials but the Canadian high commissioner in London should represents the views of the administration in office in Canada. No appointment to the latter would be made until he had surveyed the situation in London the premier said.

Accidental Horn Toot Scares Bold Pair of Thieves Who Drop Attempt

TORONTO, Sept. 20—An attempted hold-up of J. L. Wilson, produce merchant, at the rear of his premises was frustrated at 7.30 o'clock last night, was frustrated when Wilson, who was driving his truck out on to a dark lane, disobeyed the command to "stick 'em up" and blew his motor horn instead. The two hold-up men fled.

Mr. Wilson was following his usual Friday night procedure and starting out on a produce-buying trip in Eastern Ontario. He had stored $400 with him and two other young men were seated beside him in the truck cabin. There is a sharp turn from his yard to the lane which gives exit to the street, and just as his truck was making the turn from yard to lane a man whom Mr. Wilson describes as tall and thin, and appearently 28 or 30 years of age, stepped out from behind a barrel, poked something at him through the truck cabin window and commanded "Stick 'em up!" The second hold-up man he describes as short and about 22 years of age.

Mr. Harry Vanorman, formerly of Belleville, is in charge of the delicatessen shop in connection with the Wilson store.

King Suggests Example of N. Z.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP) — With only some few hours left for Parliament to sit if the Prime Minister is to attend the opening of the Imperial Conference, Premier Bennett today reaffirmed his intention of remaining in Canada until the session ends.

When the House opened today Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Opposition, asked if the Prime Minister would not consider following the example of Premier Forbes of New Zealand who left for the Imperial Conference while New Zealand parliament was still in session with a pledge from the Opposition not to upset the government. All the government's legislation was in force, he said, and time left today and Monday was too short to give more than a cursory consideration to changes in the tariff. He thought it most important that the Premier give the House all information concerning the tariff changes, he said.

Thought Suspected Bandits Were On Toronto Bus Approaching City

Police circles were astir late last night, when information was received there was a possibility, that the two armed robbers that held up a pay roll clerk in Toronto, were heading east on the Toronto-Kingston bus. A telegram was sent early in the afternoon from Provincial and local police headquarters in Toronto but was not received at this off ce until after telephone connection had been established late in the evening.

Immediately the city and Provincial Police force with the Traffic Officers were on the move. The bus that the two men were alleged to be on, had left this city twenty minutes before the telephone message had been received and Desoronto was 'phoned to hold the bus Napanee was notified and before the police from this city caught up with the bus, Provincial Constable Berrett of Napanee, had met the bus between Desoronto and Napanee and searched the bus and when the local police arrived another close search was made.

The bus was delayed some ten minutes at the Ontario School for the Deaf on account of spring trouble and it is stated that the get off the bus at the time of the relay and then commenced an active search in the city, after the police had returned. Many of the men to the police office and all were closely checked but no trace of the armed men could be found. It is believed that the two men responsible for the hold-up are desperate criminals, one being Bob Norton, gun man connected with the Merrill Brothers of London.

CHILDREN DASH ACROSS ROADWAY AT LUNCH TIME

Conditions of Traffic are Considered Dangerous on Hills

WEST HILL DANGER

Suggestion Made as to Early Closing and Re-opening of School

"A child or more than one child" said a member of the city council today, "is certainly going to be killed on the Murney street hill one of these days, the way the school kiddies pig out of school at noon, swarm down Isabel Street in droves and rush heedlessly on to Bridge Street."

Somewhat the same condition exists at Queen Alexandra school as that which confronts Queen Mary. Ann Street school is not situated near such a busy artery as Queen Mary, nor is a hill nearby, but the school kiddies rush out on Ann Street and Dundas Street, No. 2 highway, members never looking to right or left to see if any cars are coming. Reporters have been at both schools when the noon hour comes and from personal observation are able to see the danger that faces the children.

It has been estimated that between five minutes to twelve and ten minutes after twelve there are at least one hundred and fifty cars pass up and down Bridge Street Hill. Dundas Street is not quite so crowded at this time, nevertheless tourists, not strictly obeying the city's speed limits go up and down Dundas Street at quite a rate of speed.

It has been suggested that school get out fifteen minutes earlier and resume the afternoon classes fifteen minutes later or one-thirty. This would undoubtedly eliminate the danger of children being caught in traffic of business going home to lunch.

BUTTER UP TWO CENTS

Butter has gone up two cents, Belleville grocers stated today, talking over the tariff effect.

LARGE CROWDS WATCH DRAWING FOR VALUABLES

Gerald Baker Wins Watch Miss Chaplin Wins Neckpiece

LENGTHY HAIR PRIZE

Added features and the drawing for two valuable prizes made the Kiwanis Carnival stand out last night and consequently one of the largest crowds of the week was on hand. Long before the opening of the vaudeville show every seat in front of the stage was taken with the aisles on both sides filled to capacity. The games were better patronized than previously while the dance pavilion was crowded almost to suffocation. The citizens and residents of the district have responded to the call and when the final check-up is made it is believed the "take in" will not be far behind that of last year.

Drawing for Watch

Intelligencer an error occurred in the advertisement of the Marconi Radio whereby the phone number of the Belleville agents, New Ford Dealers, next Queen's Hotel was given incorrectly. The phone number is 929.

RETURNS TO UNIVERSITY.

Dr. Chas. Adams, who has been associated with Dr. J. J. Robertson for the past three months, left today for his home at Trenton, where he will enjoy a short holiday before returning to Queen's University for the Autumn term. Dr. Adams will graduate from Queen's in 1931

THOUSAND DOLLAR BAIL

George Digby arrested last night by Sergt. Booth of the City Police appeared in police court today charged with having liquor in an illegal place. He was not represented by counsel and asked for a remand for one week, which was granted and bail was set at $1,000.00, which was furnished.

CHARGE DISMISSED

Russell Seeley, who has been a patient in Belleville hospital some time convalescing from a serious operation, came to court today, to face a charge of assault preferred by his wife, which was alleged to have taken place before he was stricken with illness. The Crown stated they had no evidence to offer in the case and asked His Worship to dismiss the charge, which request was granted.

ENTERS TORONTO HOSPITAL.

Miss Catherine Robertson will leave tomorrow for Toronto where she will enter Wellesley Hospital as a student nurse. Miss Robertson is quite recovered from injuries received in an auto accident at Bowmanville last Sunday.

RETURN FROM ENGLAND

Ernest Wheatley, A.R.C.O. organist at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Wheatley returned recently from a two months' trip to England. They spent a most delightful time and enjoyed beautiful sailing weather on both voyages. Mr. Wheatley spent a month in the London University taking a course in music while Mrs. Wheatley was at her home in Leicester visiting her mother, Mrs. Lakin. who is ill. Mr. Wheatley will resume his duties at St. Andrew's tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Potter celebrated their golden wedding at Bloomsfield, Pa., on Thursday.

DDD for acne and eczema

An active field that attacks disease germs in the skin, in harmony with the theory of the greatest living skin specialist. It has had many brilliant successes over skin disease.

Ostrom's Drug Store

The drawing for the Bulova Watch donated by McFee's jewelery store, was the magnet for the gathering and when Mayor George A. Reid was breaking the seal a gasp of expectancy could be heard throughout the Armouries. The serial number 607,212 was ascertained by Mr. Smith of the McFee firm and then the judges R. J. Wray and President Joe Imlah with His Worship set about to get the guess nearest that number. It was finally announced that Gerald Baker, 32 Colborne street, was the winner and proving his age to be over 15 years he was handed the valuable timepiece, receiving at the same time a hearty hand clap from the audience.

Neckpiece

Next in order of interest was the drawing for the grey beige fox neckpiece donated by K'wanian Joe Delaney. On account of the intrinsic value the drawing was held from the stage at the Armouries and Miss Minola Chaplin, resident of the city, held the lucky number. Miss Chaplin came to the stage and the fox scarf was placed about her neck by the donor during applause. There is still left the drawing for the hope chest, which will take place tonight and some one will receive an award that will be useful as well as ornamental. There will also be another door prize drawn for the last night.

Long Hair Prize

The long hair contest for the women proved to be popular and one of best contests held during the week. Naturally the men were not in the part as there are few girls today with long tresses. Russell Wotten handled the contest admirably and after all votes taken down it was found Mrs. George Ellis, Everett street, had won with hair measuring 4' 9".

The vaudeville show was a complete change from the previous nights. Ellis and West giving a song and dance number, Louise Burns, a Russian dance, Margie the girl-wonder in contortion feats and toe dancing. "Al" Plunkett and his brother Captain M. V. Plunkett were visitors at the show and although the Clan pre-called upon "Al" to give one of his old numbers used in Plunkett's revues of years gone by he claimed not to be in amusing mood. He however, expressed his surprise at the class of entertainment provided and the splendid merchandise obtainable at the games.

There will be several features tonight the principal being the girl modelling a coat and hat the best by popular choice. The coat was exhibited last night and will become the property of the girl wearing it most gracefully. This is the last night and there no doubt many will be on hand when the curtain is rung down on a successful enterprise.

Radio Fans Corner

In the opinion of those that stayed at home last night and listened in on their sets the reception was noisy. Thunder in the air spoiled things again, that is later on in the evening. It was really splendid about the time for Amos 'n Andy.

Phil Spitalny's music from WEAF at 6.30 E.S.T. tonight. For a real smart band Phil's is just exactly to my liking. At 8.30 E.S.T. the General Electric program with Arthur Pryor's Band and such old friend Fleet Wilbour in his mile-a-minute speech of "Adventures in Science." WEAF also.

B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike orchestra at 9.00 E.S.T. from WEAF and chain and a merry time will be had by all. Lanny Ross is back again on his old program of Saturday evening Troubadour of the Moon. Over WEAF at 10 E.S.T.

Miracle Man Makes Motor Cars to Move

Interesting Phase of Modern Merchandising

THE SALES SPECIALIST

Modern merchandising has many interesting phases and is as much different from the old corner grocery idea of digging in twenty pounds of brown sugar with main strength aided by butcher knives and George Washington hatchets, the days of the free cracker barrel and cheese box as day is from night. Times have changed in all lines of merchandising introducing among many other interesting improvements and innovations the "sales specialist". He it is who takes charge of a stock when it is necessary to turn a large amount of goods into money at short notice and with his own peculiar methods of advertising and salesmanship he generally turns the trick.

The sales specialist has turned his attention to motor car selling and a sale has been conducted by Belleville Motors, Pinnacle street. R. C. Winn, of Toronto, is the "sales specialist" in this instance and he certainly made the cars move from the salesroom floor to the broad highway.

Mr. Willis uses newspaper advertising exclusively in his sales and by the use of well-written advertisements and illustrations sends his stories into the homes and has no difficulty finding customers for his wares.

"Newspaper advertising," says Mr. Willis, "carries a distinction that other mediums never do, and are far ahead of circulars or posters, which at best are only useful as auxiliary advertising. The newspaper goes into the homes, not only carrying the message of the advertiser, but the endorsement of the publisher and all the organization necessary to produce a daily paper"

Personals

Mr. John Quinn of New York City, is visiting at his home on South George street for a short time.

Misses Jessie and Helen Tidey are visiting in Rochester and Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Harris, formerly of this city but now of Bowmanville, are visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Langsbeer and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thompson of Peoria, Ill., and Mrs. H. W. Langsbeer of Belleville, spent Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris of the Fourth Line of Sidney.

Mr and Mrs. E. B. Horton and Miss Ivah Horton, of Corbyville, motored to Peterboro on Monday where Miss Ivah Horton is going to attend Normal School.

Mr. and Mrs. Perce Cole and son of Toronto, and Mr. Russell Cole, of Toronto, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Cole, Coleman street.

Mr and Mrs. Mark Vanner left today to visit friends in Midland.

On Thursday evening the National Maids softball team of which she is a member, gave a shower in honor of Miss Evelyn Cook, whose marriage takes place today. The affair was held at Miss Cook's home, and the ball club presented her with a beautiful Kenwood blanket and other gifts. An enjoyable evening was spent following the presentation.

Miss Helen Praieck and Mrs. Addison Vandervoort were tea hostesses this afternoon at the Belleville Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dyer, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Day, Everett street, for the past week, left today for their home in Pontiac, Mich.

Wind-up of Karnival At Armouries Tonight

Attendance Has Mounted Nightly to Exceed Last Year's

AMATEUR NIGHT

Club Members and Committee Entertained Over Week's Work

Tonight will see the Final Curtain on one of the greatest carnivals ever staged by this service club. The attendance has been mounting each evening until last night there was an increase of over 200 and the increase for the week is now well over 500. The committee has spared no effort to make this final night's performance a fitting climax and a night long to be remembered by the crowds who will attend.

Interest, of course, centres on the Clan Modelling Contest and many girls have already entered for the competition. The coat is a high-class garment and one any girl could be proud to wear, so the competition should be keen.

There is also a smart New Fall Hat to be modelled, with, of course, the winner of the coat barred from enter ing this competition.

The Grand Drawing for the hope chest will take place from the platform and if the winner is in the audience the presentation will take place from the stage.

This will be Amateur Night and valuable prizes will be given for the best amateur acts presented. To make the interest in the door prize more keen, there will be two fire dollar gold pieces to be given to the first two numbers drawn and responded to.

All in all this has been a great week for Kiwanis and a big crowd tonight will round the club off a goodly amount for their charity fund.

CITY WATER SAMPLE IS REPORTED GOOD

Report from the Provincial Board of Health Laboratories at Toronto today brought the infirmation that the last sample of city tap water submitted for analysis was good or "Class A." Samples are taken once a week and there have been several adverse reports in the recent past. The report receive dtoday was the first to show a change.

WEDDINGS

GIBBS — COOK.

The wedding took place quietly at St. Andrew's Church Manse this afternoon when Evelyn Mary, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cook became the bride of Mr. John W. Gibbs of this city. The ceremony was performed at three-thirty by Rev. Dr. Seymour.

The bride was becomingly attired in dark blue georgette with hat and shoes to match and was attended by Miss Gwendolyn Gibbs, sister of the groom, while Mr. Donald Cook, brother of the bride was groomsman. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs will take up their residence in this city.

CHARLES ALBERT WHITE

There passed away yesterday in the Belleville General Hospital an aged and highly respected resident of the 4th concession of Thurlow in the person of Charles Albert White, aged 81 years.

Mr. White was born in Sidney township and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James White. He had resided in Thurlow for the past twenty-three years and had only been ill for a little over a week. He lived in Tyendinaga township before coming to Thurlow.

He leaves to mourn his loss one daughter, Mrs. D. Palmer, Kingston, and three sons, Richard of Belleville; George W. of Thurlow and Newton of Springbrook. The funeral will take place on Monday next.

FATHER PAID FINE.

An accident occurred at the corner of Bridge and Front streets yesterday afternoon causing slight damage to the two cars involved and also bringing one of the participants into court on a charge under a breach of the Highway Traffic Act. A car owned by Phillip Hamilton and driven by his son, John Hamilton, aged 15 years, with a daughter as passenger, was travelling east on Bridge street. Robert Marrath was driving his car north on Front street intending to make a turn at the intersection. The two cars collided. Constable Thomson investigated and the father of the Hamilton boy took full responsibility for the accident and paid all the damages. He was charged in police court with permitting a person to drive his car without an operator's license and was fined $10.00 without costs.

CARDINALS ARE VICTORS AGAIN

By Beating Phillies Increase Lead to 2 1-2 Games

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20 —Taking advantage of a day of idleness on the part of their rival Brooklyn Robins, the St. Louis Cardinals increased their lead over the field in the race for the National League pennant, to 2 1-2 games by defeating the Phillies yesterday, 7 to 5.

Trailing 3-2 at the start of the seventh inning, due to Chuck Klein's two home runs, the high-flying Red Birds put on a five-run rally at the expense of Phil Collins, ace of the Philly hurling staff, and clinched the victory.

George Fisher, batting for Pitcher Jess Haines, grid open the rally with a scratch single. Collins hit Douthit with a pitched ball. He nearly escaped trouble when Adams attempting to sacrifice forced Fisher at third and Frisch filed out to Brickell.

Collins, however, hi another batsman, Bottomley, to fill the bases and Chick Hafey put the Cards in the lead with a double. Pinkey Whitney Philly third sacker, got his hand to the ball but it tore on through.

Watkins followed with a single off Thompson's shins, which scored Bottomley, and Mancuso sent Hafey and Watkins across the plate with the fourth and fifth runs of the inning with a booming double to the centre field wall.

Al Orsbowski aide Claude Willoughby finishing the pitching jobs in good style.

Klein's two homers, his 37th and 38th of the season, were responsible for all the runs for the Phillies and caused a few anxious moments for the league leaders by starting Philadelphia off in the lead.

The slugging right fielder hammered out his first four-bagger in the first inning with Friberg on base. His second round trip was made in the fourth with the bases empty and gave the Phils a 3 to 1 lead.

The Cards got their first run in the fourth on Watkins' triple and Mancuso's sacrifice fly and their second in the sixth when Bottomley and Watkins hit doubles.

NATS. MAKE SURE OF SECOND PLACE

Detroit, Sept. 20—The Washington Senators clinched runner-up position in the league race by taking the first game of the series from the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 4. Alvin Crowder chalked up his 18th win of the season.

The Tigers put two across in the second and two more in the sixth but the general was their master at other times.

The Nats nicked Sorell for six runs in five innings and Hoggett replaced him in the sixth, the Nats counting two more in the eighth.

Red Hargrave, ex-Tiger, took the stick honors with a double, triple and a homer in four trips. Hayes and McManus also connected for the circuit.

OSHAWA READY FOR FOOTBALL

Oshawa, Sept. 31.—Although little has appeared in the press about the local Intermediate O.R.F.U. entry, the General Motors "Blue Devils", a great deal of activity has actually been going on. The "Blue Devils", who are being coached this year by the one and only Dr. "Lin" Walker, are fast rounding into shape.

During the period of their early conditioning they had the services of Sergeant Instructor Jack Barker, who with special and aggressive P. T. methods soon brought the large squad to a point of physical fitness.

Since the first of this week, Coach Walker has been drilling the boys nightly on line work and interference and shortly will be able to cut his squad down and should have a team ready for play before the end of the month. The "Blue Devils" will most certainly be ready to step on the field with which is anticipated will be a team equal or better than either of their two powerful squads of the past two years.

Her Painful Backache Quickly Relieved

Prince Edward Island Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 15 "—(Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Simply put, most of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

GAUZE LODGED IN WIND PIPE

Case a "Surgical Curiosity," Toronto Specialist Tells Coroner's Jury

OWEN SOUND, Sept. 20.—A Coroner's jury absolved every one implicated from blame in connection with the death of Miss Ada Beatrice Thaskston, who died in the hospital here August 8, while undergoing an operation for nasal trouble. The cause of death was the lodging of a piece of gauze used as temporary packing, or tampon, in the windpipe where it branches to both lungs. The gauze was rolled into a wad about 1 3-4 inches by 1-3 inch.

Dr. George S. Burt, who performed the operation, stated that he was at a loss to know how the piece of gauze became lodged in the throat. Dr. Osviller, who administered the anaesthetic, gave evidence to show that the patient's breathing was normal up to the time of death, and that there were no signs of struggling.

The nature of the inquest was the evidence of Dr. Perry Goldsmith of Toronto, Professor of the University of Toronto and Chief Surgeon of the Throat, Nose and Ear Department of the Toronto General Hospital. Dr. Goldsmith's evidence showed that no precaution could have been taken to prevent the accident without endangering the patient in other ways. He stated that although he had known the gauze to slip on many occasions, it was a million chances to one that it would go down the passage to the stomach and not down the windpipe. He called the fact that the piece of gauze lodged in the windpipe, a "surgical curiosity".

COMMUNISM IN OSHAWA, POLICE ARREST LEADERS

Assailed Scout Movement As Tool of Capitalist Class

OSHAWA, Sept. 20.—A Communist demonstration was broken up at Memorial Park last night, when police intervened to arrest two men and a young woman for the distribution of alleged seditious literature. A small crowd had gathered in the park to listen to speeches by several Communists, but the meeting had hardly got started before the police intervened. A number of handbills had been distributed among the spectators and copies were seized by the officers.

Little resistance was offered to the arrests, but there was some jostling and shouting, while a few bolder spirits hurled jeers at the police. The police refused to-night to give the names of those placed in custody, but it was learned from a local sympathizer that they were Harold Risen and Alice Beaderman, both of Toronto, and John Bankey of Drew Street, Oshawa. The trio were removed to the county jail at Whitby, and will probably be brought before Magistrate J. Willis in city police court Saturday morning.

The handbills which were distributed made pointed reference among other things to the jamboree of Boy Scouts being held here this week, and and attacked the scout movement as the tool of the capitalist class, designed to turn the children of work.. ing class parents against a cause which would help their parents.

GIANTS WIN FROM THE CINCINNATI REDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Bill Walker New York Giants southpaw, pitched a splendid ball yesterday, as he shut out the Cincinnati Reds for the second time this season. The score was 7 to 0.

Walker allowed the Reds but two hits, a single by Swanson in the first inning and a double by Cuccinello in the third.

The Giants scored their first run in the third inning, when Reottger singled went to second on Walker's sacrifice and scored when Critz doubled to right

A batting spree in the fourth inning netted the Giants five runs on five hits, including doubles by Critz and O'Farrell.

Melgs Ott's home run in the fifth inning tallied another run for the Giants.

Bill Terry, who is leading hitter in the National League, went hitless in four attempts to bat.

NEWPORT, R.I., Sept. 20.— The future of international yacht racing was believed tonight to rest with a meeting which will be held in New York next Wednesday by the New York Yacht Club, holder of the America's Cup.

Reports were in circulation about Newport today that the British Royal yacht squadron had already lodged a challenge for a race next year for the America's Cup. There was reason to believe that such a challenge was under consideration on by British yachts men, but it was also understood they would await the result of Wednesday's conference before deciding to make an silver bid for the famous cup.

Alcohol and The Gentler Sex

Eighth of Series of Articles by A. H. Lyle, Field Superintendent, Royal Templars of Temperance

"On complaints of a drinking party being held on the mountainside, made by residents of Mountain avenue, Constables Whittaker and Shaver found Jack —— and Alec —— and two girls grouped around a picnic basket with a bottle of whiskey included." (Herald)

"Why are young fellows all rolling around a dance hall with flasks in your pockets"—Question asked by Magistrate Hardiman and reported in The Toronto Star.

"It was explained by Chief Stanley that at a party a girl of sixteen years of age was supplied with enough liquor to make her incapable of getting home, her mother and father having to call for her."—Globe.

"In one section of our country all drinking parties have become popular week end events. These outings are diversified by motorboat excursions. Such parties cannot help but have a devastating effect upon the young athletes' morals, physique, and pocketbook."—Chaser. Paddock in Outlaws for June 14.

"A girl cannot drink and smoke in a motor car on a public highway and then blame her male companion for anything which may happen to her."—Ottawa Citizen.

Fresh Notices

The appearance of press notices such as the above so frequently of late, brings home to the most casual reader the thought that an increasing number of women are becoming addicted to the alcoholic habit. Much has been said and written about the changed environment in which young women find themselves today, as compared with twenty years ago. Mother, when a girl was young, conducted herself in a vastly different manner to the up to date progressive, worldly wise "flapper" of today. In fact the changing conditions are having a decided effect upon those who can no longer be spoken of as being in the flapper class, but who feel they must conform to present day conditions.

On the Slip

One of the customs of today that gives promise of dire results in the future is the drinking habits developing among women. Apparently the practice is becoming wide-spread and a boy with "something on the hip" and the serving of alcoholic beverages at social functions is becoming a common place, that serious thought must be devoted to the problem in an effort to find a remedy.

An "up to date" young woman recently said, "The men take their nip, and why shouldn't we girls do it if we want to?"

Lead the Men

Why do intelligent women feel that it is necessary to adopt the questionable ways of men as the best means of securing happiness? Would it not be better to endeavor to lead the men to adopt a course that past experience has proved to be safer and more likely to produce lasting satisfaction? If the ideals of the past were maintained by highminded women, the men would practice a self-restraint that would perhaps be surprising and a better social condition would develop.

Self-Control Gone

It is a recognized fact that the very nature of alcohol produces a mental effect. Beginning with the finer and most delicate adjustments of the brain, which are sometimes called the "conscience cells" it removes the power of self-criticism so that we are not able to exercise that self-control, which is essential in our relationships with others. The reasoning process is affected before the perceptive process and so the lower emotions those that are elemental and primitive, are released and free rein is given to baser desires and passions.

Stands to Lose

A woman with her brain paralyzed with alcohol stands to lose every time. Even a little alcohol takes the keen edge off our sensibilities and causes us to become a prey to temptations that otherwise would have been avoided.

Society has always reached a higher level when womanhood upheld high standards of mortality and citizenship. Prof. T. N. Carver of Howard points out that "we cannot maintain a high state of civilization without a great deal of interdependence where there is no dependability. Next to lying and stealing, nothing so destroys dependability as alcohol." and the famous surgeon, Dr. Charles Mayo, says, "you can get along with a wooden leg, but you get along with a wooden head. In order that your brain be kept clear you must keep your body fit and well. That cannot be done if one drinks liquor."

Open to Suggestion

When will both men and women recognize that alcohol reduces one's ability to resist suggestion, that it really leaves one open to any suggestion which requires all our skill and self-control to overcome. So, at the dance or other gathering where liquor has been partaken of by young people, what happens? Self-control is lacking, the delicate restraint that would otherwise characterize intercourse is removed and liberties not dreamed of before are taken and given.

More Emotional

Medical men assert that when women become addicts to liquor because of their more sensitive nervous system, they have less control over themselves than men. Women are more emotional than men. Their moods carry them to greater heights and depths. They forget and forgive more quickly than men. What chance has typical women of withstanding the effect of alcohol when men of "iron nerve" sooner or later become its victims?

At a National Health conference held a few years ago, the question of the spread of certain diseases was under discussion, and Dr. Bell, a medical health officer of Manitoba, was asked, "Whether a person who has taken one or two glasses of whiskey is or is not, in regard to transmitting, for the time being, feeble-minded," and Dr. Bell's reply was "For the time being one who has had one or two glasses of liquor is mentally deficient."

Courage Required

Evidence accumulates that the only safe course to obtain from any beverage that contains this narcotic drug. It creates a progressive appetite, although a larger supply is required to satisfy the craving. Its debasing effect is seen on every hand. Perhaps, after all, the question of young women who imbibe is relatively small, and that a large number of these would like to refrain if they but have not the courage to withstand the banter of their associates. But a great moral issue is involved and your determination to say "no" will be encouragement to others to follow your example.

Windsor, Sept. 18 (CP). — Three men, four women and a little child arrived here today from the farm of the Turkish Tobacco Company at Leamington expecting they would be given food and lodging. This could not be arranged, however, as they were not residents of the city. Local fraternal club came to their aid.

It is reported that some of the men boys of the band of tobacco workers have returned to work pending a settlement from the company and they are working for lodging and food only.

Discuss World Temperance Issue

A very successful Parlor Meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Benoit, 30 Everett street, by a group of W. C. T. U. ladies. Mrs. (Dr.) Cronk, the very capable superintendent of this department of W.C.T.U. activities presided and presented an interesting program the following are extracts from the Flip Sheet read as part of the program: When Jesus left this earth. He left behind him no Christian writings that had not been in existence at his birth, but He left His gospel written in the hearts of His disciples, so they went everywhere preaching the gospel. This is the first example of wide-spread Christian propaganda. With a view to counteracting temperance education among the children of the world, the International Wine Office will shortly publish a pamphlet of not more than 30 pages under the title The Truth About Wine. It is designed to be distributed in the schools of as many countries as possible. The issuing of this booklet for school children is only one phase of a vigorous campaign which is being organized to increase wine consumption in France and abroad."

Mr. Farnsworth read some extracts from addresses delivered in the Women's Building at the Canadian National Exhibition two weeks ago. Professor Norman McKenzie of the University of Toronto declared that he had grown pessimistic as to the fate of the League of Nations and International peace generally, but when he found so many women working just as hard as ever in the interests of the League he became more hopeful. He reminded them that in times of pessimism it was always a woman who suggested better and brighter ideals.

Mrs. Louise McKinney, acting president of the Canadian W.C.T.U. said that "World prohibition, world peace and world peace" was the watchword which the World's Christian Temperance Union in 1883 and that that watchword was still standing for an organization of several million members."

At the close of the program social business in connection with the Provincial Convention of the W.C.T.U. which will be held in Belleville in October was taken up, after which delightful refreshments were served and a social period enjoyed.

WILL SEEK RELICS

Field Day of Women Golfers on East Course

Forty-Five Members of Belleville Club Compete

EXCELLENT SCORES

Field Day for women members of the Belleville Golf Club was held yesterday under delightful weather conditions and was a success from every viewpoint. Forty-five members of the club took part and some interesting scores were made. Interest centred in the 18 hole handicap for first and second flight players and the nine hole competitions for third flight golfers. Miss Ivy Dickens and Mrs. Lionel Train tied in the first flight with a score of 71 and will play off the tie next week. Mary Hurley won the second flight with a score of 75 while Mrs. Lorne Green and Mrs. Purdy tied for the third flight with a score of 61.

The competition started before the lunch hour and the competitors after the putting contest on the Clock course repaired to the spacious clubhouse for luncheon. In the afternoon between the rounds of the medal play Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, Mrs. W. C. Mikel and Mrs. Reginald Abrams were in charge of the tea room, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. Tea was served on the verandahs of the club house and the ideal weather made the function a most delightful one. Following is the result of several competitions held:

Driving Competition

1st flight—Mrs. Walter Reeves, total 3 longest drives 468 yds., Mrs. A. I. Bird, Mrs. G. H. Scott and Mrs. C. C. Walker were close seconds with over 450 yds.

2nd Flight—Miss Marion Lyons, total 3 longest drives 456 yds., Mrs. Russell Smith a close second with 450 yds.

3rd Flight—Mrs. "Terry" Dolan, total 3 longest drives 299 yds.

Putting on Clock

1st Flight—Helen Hurley 28.

2nd Flight—Mrs. Bernstein 27.

3rd Flight—Mrs. (Dr.) J. W. Kinnear 26.

Approach and Putting

1st Flight—Mrs. J. A. Kerr, 6 pts.

2nd Flight—Mrs. Lorne McConnell, 7 pts.

3rd Flight—Mrs. Tyrrs, 8 pts.

Approaching—Mrs. Wallace 75 pts.

1st Flight—Mrs. O. H. Scott 30 pts.

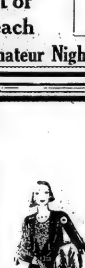
The marriage of Helen Geddes Agnew younger daughter of Mrs. James H. Ross, Winchester, Ontario, and the late Dr. W. E. Agnew, Albany, N.Y., to Dr. John Royden Emery youngest son of Mrs G. F. Emery, Kingston, and the late Dr. Emery, Odessa, took place in the United Church, Winchester at 7.30 o'clock last evening. Rev. John Waddell performed the ceremony and Miss Helen Smith presided at the organ. The church was decorated with quantities of ferns and fall flowers. The guest pews being marked with clusters of pink and white asters tied with white satin bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. James H. Ross and wore her mother's wedding dress of heavy ivory satin, the snugly fitted bodice being trimmed with hand flagotting and the ankle length skirt extending in a long circular train; the antique ivory tulle veil was bound closely to her head with Princess lace and was caught at each side by clusters of orange blossoms worn by her mother on her wedding day. The bride wore ivory crepe shoes and carried a shower bouquet of deep yellow rose buds and lily-of-the-valley. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Donald R. Roughton, Kingston as matron of honour, who wore a sleeveless gown of pastel blue slipper satin with closely fitted bodice and full circular skirt extending in graceful lines to the floor. With this was worn a large "off the face" hat of blue transparent velvet of deeper tone and matching crepe slippers. The bridesmaids, Miss Marion Rankin, Kingston and Miss Marion Smith, Toronto, were gowns of pastel pink slipper satin, the same design as that worn by the matron of honour, large "off the face" hats of ruby toned transparent velvet and matching slippers.

All three attendants carried large arm bouquets of pink snapdragons and blue delphiniums tied with pink and blue tulle.



Dr. J. Kingsley McDonald, White Plains, N.Y., acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Donald R. Roughton, Kingston and Mr. William H. Agnew, brother of the bride.

Mrs. James H. Ross, mother of the bride wore an imported gown of lighter than navy grape Elizabeth, with hat and shoes in matching tones, fox fur and shoulder knot of Ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Emery, mother of the groom, wore black printed chiffon over coral, model hat of black velvet and corsage of talisman roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Following the marriage ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the decorations were carried out in fall flowers. Travelling the bride wore a French imported suit of black and white tweed the knee length coat having a large collar of platinum fox. With this was worn a close fitting black velvet hat, black slip-on shoes and purse. On their return from the Pacific Coast, Dr. and Mrs. Emery will reside in White Plains, New York.

Among the out-of-town guests were: —Mrs. G. P. Emery, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Graham, Misses Barbara and Mary Graham, Master Eric Graham, Miss Ada Birch, Dr. and Mrs. Ross Rose, Miss Marguerite Cavin, and Mr. David Rankin all of Kingston; Mrs. Harry McLeod, Englewood, N.J., Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Putnam and Miss Sally Putnam, Utica, N.Y., Dr. and Mrs. Kingsley MacDonald, White Plains, New York; Misses Mary Dwyer, Nell Merry, Elizabeth Billings, Iva Everson, Erie Grout, Jean MacLaurin of Belleville; Mr. Rolf Emery and Hon. Senator G. D. Robertson and Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. W. B. Campbell and Miss Mary Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. G. H. McKeown, Ottawa.

Twenty Brushes but Only One Pair of Glasses

You wouldn't expect an artist to paint a picture with only one brush. But perhaps you ask your eyes to make millions of pictures on your brain with only one pair of glasses.

Your eyes have numerous difficult jobs to do—read work and distant; in good light and bad. You ask their help in reading and figuring; driving your car at night against the glare of headlights —playing tennis on a sun-drenched court or following the flicker of the movies.

Let us study your eyes in relation to the jobs you ask them to do. We make a specialty of the Occupational Analysis of the eye and prescribe glasses that are right not only for your eyes but also for their activities.

GEN. BROCK CAIRN DEDICATED FRIDAY

PORT DOVER, Sept. 20—Following the arrival of the children, who marched down from the schools, the unveiling of the General Brock Cairn took place here Friday afternoon.

In his introductory remarks from the bandstand following the unveiling Chairman Dr. W. A. McIntosh said that, viewed in the light of modern warfare, General Brock's achievements might seem trivial, but viewed by pioneer standards, they were of paramount importance. In his opinion, no monument stands in a more commanding position than that to Brock on Queenston Heights.

BROWN—In loving memory of my dear husband, W. J. (Chas) Brown, who departed this life Sept. 20th, 1929.

When evening shades are falling,
And I am sitting all alone,
In my heart there comes a longing
For you only cannot know.

Every day my thoughts are wandering
To your grave not far away,
Where they gently laid your body
Just one year ago to-day.

to represent his school.

Mr. Barlow, a member of the collegiate staff and instructor of the cadet corps spoke in support of his communication.

Mr. Barlow: The question is, have we the $4,000 now even if it should be? Is it fair to expect the council?

Mr. Cameron thought the board was not in a position to make the grant asked for.

Mr. Butler: Eventually the money would come back to the board, but the question was what arrangement could be made to secure the uniforms.

Mr. Elliott: While he would be delighted to see the boys have new uniforms, the point of what will the citizens think of the board if it passes this amount. Another thing was that the estimates were made in the estimates for this amount named.

Mr. Cameron: Mr. Howard is doing good work in regard to the training but this matter might be laid over for a month. He suggested that a committee should see the boys' clothing.

Messrs. J. Elliott, A. E. Geen, E. J. Butler, G. F. Ostrom, be appointed to consider the matter and report at the board meeting two months hence.

Mr. Johnes thought that the board should see the way clear to finance this amount this year.

Mr. Schryver in seconding Mr. Cameron's motion spoke in favour of the cadet corps as the boys were proud to wear the uniform of a cadet.

Col. Ponton: The cadet corp owns the board nothing. It was a pride to see the boys in uniform on inspection day. This collegiate is bringing many in the city and the city is reaping a benefit. He believed the board council would respond to the requisition next year.

The motion of Mr. Cameron was unanimously adopted with Mr. Cameron and Mr. Jones added to the committee.

Dr. Mennins addressed the board in reference to the purchasing of Greek and Latin historical pictures. The cost of the Italian collection consisting of 98 small photographic copies, 8 large photographic copies and 4 maps would be $581.

The matter was referred to the school management committee for consideration.

Reports

Reports were presented, from the Sites, Building and Supplies Committee relative to the purchasing of coal for the various schools also the procuring of some desks. The vocational committee also presented a report which was received. Principal MacLaurin be appointed as the presiding official of the night school to be opened in October. The committee also recommended the purchase of several articles, including three new Underwood typewriting machines.

Reports presented were adopted.

The report of the School Management Committee re the ownership of Queen Victoria School and the advisability of sending some of the pupils to another school and an extra teacher be provided was endorsed by the board.

Weeds on School Grounds

A discussion took place in reference to weeds growing on the collegiate and public school grounds.

Mr. Ackerman said the weeds on the collegiate grounds were a disgrace and the caretakers should see to it that the weeds are kept down.

The report of the school attendance officer was referred to the principals of the schools.

Several communications of a minor nature were received to be filed.

Under the head of enquiries Col. Ponton asked the secretary-treasurer how much money the board had passed at the meeting this evening by accounts presented and endorsed.

Mr. Faulkner: $7,000.

Expression of Thanks

Mr. E. J. Butler stated that Rev. Father Killeen, before his demise, had requested him (the speaker) to convey to the Board of Education the thanks of the Separate School Board for the use of rooms for holding classes in the Collegiate owing to the destruction by fire of St. Michael's Academy. In this expression of thanks Monsignor Nicholson heartily joins.

The chairman of the board stated that the manager appreciated the thanks and regretted that the destruction of St. Michael's Academy was the cause of the class rooms being utilized. The board had only done what was right.

Diary of Andree Shows Explorers Missed Pole by Five Hundred Miles

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 20—Salomon-August Andree and his two comrades on their pioneer polar balloon expedition 33 years ago, failed by 500 miles in their attempt to reach the North Pole, and three days after setting out from Dane's Island, Spitsbergen, came down on the Arctic ice wilderness.

Examination of the diary found on Andree's body after Dr. Gunnar Horn's expedition has brought it back to Tromsoe, Norway, has revealed the secret of the party's landing and wanderings until they made the camp on desolate White Island, where they were destined to perish.

After coming down through an unknown cause in latitude 83 north, longitude 30 east, the explorers remained encamped on the ice for a week.

On July 22, 11 days after they first away from Spitsbergen, they abandoned their temporary shelter and set out on the long trek back to civilization.

On Treacherous Terrain

The doomed men, day after day, the diary reveals, struggled on toward safety in a constant battle with treacherous ice and deep pools of fresh water, which they had to cross with their frail canvas boat.

They marched not toward the northern coast of Spitsbergen, whence their balloon had brought them and where food depots had been prepared but in a more easterly direction.

Their course was toward the little-known regions north of Prinstjof Nansen Land (then know as Frans Josef Land.)

Now they reached it is not recorded in this diary. But in addition to the vivid account of the march, the diary settles the fact that all three clung together through the worst and implies that they reached White Island still together.

It was there, in a camp laid bare by melting snows and ice during an unusually warm and damp Arctic summer, that Dr. Gunnar Horn, Norwegian scientist and explorer on August 6 last, solved the riddle of their fate and brought back to the world the record of their sufferings.

Salomon-August Andree, in dying on lonely White Island, apparently the last survivor of his expedition, gave his last thought to the preservation of the record of his wanderings and hardships on the polar flight attempt.

A diary in which virtually every page had been written on wax found inside his clothing when his body and the other relics of his expedition brought back by Dr. Gunnar Horn, were examined at Tromsoe by Swedish and Norwegian experts.

It had been wrapped carefully and securely placed at his back. As his body was found in a reclining position beside the White Island camp, it is assumed that, on feeling the approach of death, he drew upon his precious record and protected it, even in death, with his body.

Keep Your Child's Secrets

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

We all learn as we grow older, that if we cannot keep our own secrets no one else can be depended upon, to keep them. The thing we tell our very friend in confidence hasn't the significance nor importance to him that it has to us and we can generally feel certain that sooner or later, in a weak moment, he will pass the information on to some one else.

It is too bad that children have to learn this and usually learn it while they are yet very young. And a sadder thing, still is that so many of them are disillusioned by their own mothers. It is bad enough to have Mary, next door, tell a grave secret that the two children have shared, but it breaks a very lovely sense of confidence and rearranges the child's whole pattern of life when a mother doesn't keep faith.

There is an air of secrets among children, an age when some of us suspicious grown-folk feel that maybe the secrets aren't quite what they should be aired before parental ears. This attitude, I feel, is one of doubt, as to our own previous training of the child. For a youngster who has been taught wholesomely since babyhood will merely go through the period of having secrets with playmates because he is just discovering what the real "he," the thoughts and realization of the "I" within him, can be kept locked up and hidden from the world at will.

The secret age soon passes, and the secrets are for the most part innocent things that we probably feel aren't important enough to recognize at all.

But aside from this whispering stage between small people, there is, in the normal course of events, confidant in matter. But, don't tell will you?" And Mother, no matter how amusing the secret may be, no matter how much she longs to repeat it to a group of friends just to hear their shouts of laughter, will do well to remember that in breaking faith with her child she is selling the trust just to hold the centre of the stage for a moment before an audience which probably, five years from now will mean little or nothing in her life.

But five years from now the child will have MORE important secrets to tell, things which you would much rather have him tell than to tell a companion of his own age.

Be a storehouse for your child's confidences. Don't be a clearing house! The time will come when your child will be much safer if he knows he can "tell mother everything."

You Cannot Dodge Yourself

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

ONE MIGHT as well realize as soon as possible that one cannot avoid one's own company.

It is impossible, except for the briefest time, to get entirely away from yourself. True and absolutely forgetfulness doesn't exist.

Therefore, make your own company as pleasant and congenial as you can!

And at that it is not so difficult to make it just about what you want it to be.

You can despise yourself.

You can make of yourself a terrific bore.

You can be content and happy with yourself.

Try to get outside yourself and view yourself in an impersonal and disinterested manner.

What faults do you find when you subject yourself to such searching analysis?

Are you selfish and self-seeking?

Are you prompted by the highest of motives?

Are your animal and instinctive reactions well under control?

Are you kind, generous and forgiving?

These are but a few of the questions you might ask yourself should you wish to improve your own company.

And how few do it!

How many really know themselves!

Small wonder, then, that it is rare to see a person sitting alone, in joyful communion with himself!

A person ought to be able to get a lot of fun out of thinking about what he is doing, what he is planning, what he has already accomplished.

We ought never to be ashamed or afraid to probe the innermost recesses of our thoughts and feelings.

If we are, it proves we are not as good company for ourselves as we ought to be and might be.

It is often a simple matter to repair the little faults of character that make all the difference in the world.

None of us is a model, and each of us can improve. And one of the best reasons for desiring improvement is that you may be not as good terms with yourself as you are with your dearest friend.

It would be a good idea for you to begin trying to enhance the value of of your own company right now.

Give up the notion that you must continually be on the go. Jumping from one amusement to another, from one companion to another.

If you do that you can with yourself you really do not need companionship at all.

Not that I am decrying social relationship. We all need it and should have it, thirst for it.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

"Jed Thomas? Sonia you are the limit. You haven't said one word about talking to him before. You never tell me anything Sonia. Get my pincushion. What will your father say? When will you have to go?"

Anna Marsh advised her not to say anything to her father until Dr. Stillwater came. It would be better to let them talk it over together. While they were discussing it here was a tap at the door and Sidney Maine came in. Sonia had neither seen nor talked with her since Sidney's party. Sonia was too proud to make any advances yet she was genuinely glad to see Sidney of her own accord.

"Hello, old thing! Come on in!"

"Hello yourself!" answered Sidney. "What are you doing? Come on, let's take a walk."

Sonia put on her hat and they started down the street toward town.

"Coming to be spread to-night?" Sidney asked.

"No!"

"Why not?"

"I loathe hen parties," Sonia answered coldly, conscious that her kissing episode had made her most unwelcome in any of the girls' homes.

Sidney, not seeing farther than the opaque green eyes, hesitated.

"Well I'm sorry!" she answered, vaguely.

No use being hurt at Sonia. Poor little nobody. But what gorgeous eyes Like jewels in her white face.

Sidney sighed. "One can't have everything," she murmured.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean you have the looks and clothes. And some of the rest of us have other things."

Sonia laughed.

"Fathers with fat bank accounts and such?"

"Yes."

"Looks and clothes aren't all I have, darling," Sonia flung. "I've gone to have adventure, excitement, everything!"

"What are you saying?"

"Going to Chicago," sang Sonia. "Job in a real estate office—Don Stillwater's—Sidney, I'm off!"

Sidney stopped short.

"Oh, you lucky girl! I can just picture you in Chicago. You belong there if ever a girl did. Color, personality . . . I'm so glad."

Her generous pleasure touched Sonia.

"It's sweet of you to say that, Sidney. You know I've always been restless here. Haven't seemed to belong and all that. You don't know what it will mean to me to live in Chicago."

"You'll love it. It's the most wonderful city. I've visited my cousins there lots of times. Perhaps I'll see you there. Wouldn't that be fun?"

"Will you look me up?"

"I sure will. Sonia, this isn't a secret?"

Sonia's first instinct was for silence but the thought of Sidney's telling the girls at the spread that night appealed to her. She would give them something new to talk about.

"Father doesn't know about it yet," she answered. "He won't want me to go. But we're going to have it out with him to-night. Don Stillwater's coming over."

"Don Stillwater!"

Sidney's brown eyes opened wide.

Sonia thought dinner would never end. She pushed her plate away, untouched. A cup of tea, and she was through. She was too excited to eat.

Naturally Sam Marsh noticed it.

"What's the matter to-night, honey? You aren't eating anything."

"Not hungry, dad. That's all."

"What have you been doing today?" he asked suspiciously.

She lifted a serene face.

"I spent the day with Vera. She was not feeling well."

The memory of her day with Vera was already in the dim past. Poor Vera! With her babies and her unappreciative husband! Thank God it was not she!

She could scarcely wait for her father to pick up his paper so that she might start cleaning up. Mrs. Marsh went back to her sewing machine while Sonia cleared the table and washed the dishes. Her mother looked excited too. Two spots of red burned in her sallow cheeks.

By 8 o'clock the living room was in order. Sonia gathered a huge bunch of red roses for the dining table. She changed her gingham dress for a soft green voile. At 8.30 o'clock the telephone rang. It was Joe Carter.

"No, I have another engagement. Why?"

In that thought I'd like to go around there and walk home with you, that's all."

"Well, I'm not going. I'm sorry Joe." There was a pause, then he asked, humbly. "Are you still mad at me, Sonia?"

"Mad!" at him? She had forgotten that Joe Carter existed. Yet she remembered now she had told him she hated him before.

Sonia laughed.

"No, I'm not mad any more."

"Can I come up then some night soon?"

Some night before she went to Chicago!

"Yes, Joe. Call me up again."

The sweetness in her voice dripped like honey through the telephone.

"Oh, I'm delighted, "but I can afford to be sweet now."

Her father looked up from his paper frowning.

"Was that Joe Carter?"

"Yes, father."

"Well, I don't want to see him hang around here any more. He's given people enough to talk about where you're concerned."

"Yes, father."

As if that mattered now!

INSTALLMENT IV

At 9 o'clock Don Stillwater knocked at the Marsh door. Mrs. Marsh dropped her sewing, but picked it up again Sonia her heart in her throat, opened the door. Her father rose, surprised but courteous.

Don wasted no time evading the issue.

"I have only half an hour," he said. "I ran away from guests at home. I came to tell you, Mr. Marsh, that my uncle in Chicago has found a place for Sonia in the bookkeeping department of his real estate office."

Sonia's father gave old before her eyes. The flesh sagged on his cheeks His eyes faded.

He turned to his daughter, reproachfully.

"You've gone ahead with your plans in spite of what I said to you, Sonia?"

A lump rose to her throat at his beaten tone. She could have defied his rage. But his trembling lips were like hands clutching at her heart.

"Oh, dad, it isn't that I don't love you, but I have to get away from this town. I hate it. It's killing me."

"Sonia" Don said, calmly, "suppose you run out in the yard for a while. I'd like to talk this over with your mother and father."

She was only too glad to obey Her eyes were stinging with the tears she was too proud to shed.

What Dr. Stillwater told her parents she never knew. Although from her seat on the back porch steps she could hear fragments of their conversation.

"Small town—critical attitude —too much attention," drifted through the summer night.

Once she heard her father's broken voice.

"This kissing business has hurt me, Don. More than it should, I suppose."

leaving that night for Chicago The days since her father had given his consent had gone by as in a dream, leaving Sonia unconscious of their passing. Mrs. Marsh had dropped all other sewing to work for her daughter. Everything had to be just so. Anna Marsh knew what a girl should have. This one, she said to Sonia's father, Sonia should have the best.

Sonia cried the results of her mother's effort, hanging in the closet.

Two dark dresses for work, severely plain, but with the lines only an artist can give. A black velvet, with tailored cut to match, and for the first time in her life a real French hat. A pink chiffon, the one she had worn to Sidney's party, and another dancing dress, blue-green, with tiny silver roses, completed her new wardrobe.

"They are beautiful" breathed Sonia.

The "inappropriateness of such a wardrobe for a girl bookkeeper did not occur to her. She needed only shoes and a winter coat. Her father had given her a generous check from his savings account, advising her to purchase those things in Chicago. Vera had donated white silk bloomers to "line the nightgowns."

"It's almost like a trousseau," Vera said wistfully.

And only Don Stillwater had offered no gift. Her mother was absorbed in her chores, her father wrapped in grief at the approaching parting, her friend envious or delighted according to temperament. But Sonia would not forget Don's words, spoken at the station. He had offered her the position, nor the promise she had given him.

Don had gone back to his hospital in the east, but before leaving he had come to take Sonia for a farewell ride.

They had gone through the country roads together. Sonia was treading the air that day, scarcely conscious of mortal contact. .

Like all children, "I may come to Chicago to practice when I'm through at the hospital."

Sonia was pleased.

"Will you really? Wouldn't that be fun?"

He smiled.

"Why?"

"Well, I could see you once in a while and get more good advice."

"Advice or medical attention?"

"That would be much more practical. Think how convenient for me to be able to call you up an hour between my professional operations."

"So that is all I mean to you? Sort of a father confessor?"

The gaiety dropped.

"I was given to understand that your interest was purely professional." Don laughed.

"Well, I'll say this: You've learned your lesson well. If you pick everything up as quickly as you have that, you'll be a success."

"Since you're the only man," continued Sonia coolly, "whose interest in me happens to be purely professional, I may as well make the most of it."

"There you go sounding so darned sophisticated. Where do you learn to talk like that? You can't have had much experience. I suppose you read a lot of cheap books?"

Angry, the indignant Don Stillwater, I have had little time for fiction."

"Well, I'm beginning to think you have. Here's a devil in you which I'm going to have to come out."

Sonia shrugged and remained silent.

He said, after a moment of which Sonia was conscious of his intrigue's me. It takes a wire woman to know when to be silent."

Her narrow eyes met his coldly.

"What are you trying to do? Flirt with me?"

The insolence of it took away his breath. He had stopped the car to see the view at the top of the hill. All at once with two warning! he seized her hands and kissed her.

Cold tremors ran through Sonia's whole body She was appalled, angry, humiliated.

"Let me alone—you——" she gasped, furiously. "You're a fine person to give me advice."

Tears stood in her eyes. She had been hurt at his treachery.

"Sonia—I beg your pardon. You're right. I'm a cad. I'm unspeakable."

She cried. then, great sobs breaking in her throat.

"I didn't intend to do that, Sonia—never intended such a thing. I only meant to bring you out for a little ride. Sonia please.... if you knew how sorry I am."

The sincerity of his voice pierced her sobs. She dried her eyes. But the smile she produced was frozen.

"I mean this goes to prove how dangerous you are."

"I wasn't trying to vamp you," she answered brokenly.

"I know you weren't And I had no intention of being vamped either. Shall I take you home?"

Later, when he stopped before her door, he said, Sonia, I'd give anything in the world if this hadn't happened."

She answered quietly "It's all right. Forget it."

"Will you try to do that, too? And remember the nicer things?"

"Yes, Don. I owe you too much to nurse a grudge against you."

But th'nking it over afterward she found it had quite taken the edge from the previous impression he had made.

As she crossed that last morning she relived that exciting moment.

"No, I promised to forget," she said resolutely.

Since there were so many other things to think about today. This day of all days! Her trunk to pack, and the bag she would need overnight on the train. A last trip downtown for pins and powder.

"As if," Sonia chuckled to Sidney, "I could buy those in Chicago."

Sidney was loyal, in spite of her mother's disapproval. Every one seemed anxious to do anything they could for the departing Sonia. Her prospective absence seemed to cover a multitude of sins.

Joe Carter called. Sonia refused to see him. faithful to the promise her father had demanded. But she had been unable to avoid a scene with Tom Underwood.

"I want you to know, Sonia," he said, "that any proposal I may make is all off. I wouldn't consider being engaged if you go to Chicago."

"Don't worry Tom. I never took you seriously. I don't care to marry a man who would ask me to wait for him in Muncie while he has four years to study."

They parted coldly. So quickly do the emotions cool at 17!

But in the afternoon as Sonia was coming home from her last shopping trip, a car stopped before her. It was Joe Carter, in one of his father's cars and he kept the engine running. He opened the door with a determined air, saying

"Get in, I'll take you home."

Sonia was tired and in a hurry. To refuse would be unreasonable, she had nothing against Joe..... The incident of Sidney's party was in the long distant past now So she climbed into the car, with a grateful smile, dropping her bundles around her.

"What right have you, Joe."

"Straight home. nothing! We're going where we can talk."

Sonia sat up, annoyed and angry.

"Listen here, Joe Carter, I have a lot of things to do. If you make me miss my train I'll never forgive you."

"Pretty soon I won't. It won't be you, Sonia? Well, rest easy, you aren't going to miss it so fry as I'm concerned I'll get you there in plenty of time." Sonia and listen to what I have to say."

He drove grimly eyes straight ahead. Sonia's anger cooled into curiosity. She might as well find out what was the matter with Joe.

They were on the outskirts of the city before he offered any information. Then he stopped the car and folded his arms.

Sonia waited, conscious of the added power which lay in her silence. Her eyes were indifferent.

"Sonia would you really go away without telling me good-by?"

"I don't see that my going makes any particular difference to you, Joe."

"You know damned well it makes a difference. And you promised over the telephone a week ago that you would see me soon."

"Well, to tell the truth, father would not stand for having you come to the house again."

"Why? On account of that—at Sidney's?"

Sonia nodded.

"How did he know about it?"

He heard some of the sboys talking about it in the store. And, believe me, he certainly raised the roof when he came home."

"Sonia, I've been sorry a thousand times about the night Honest I have—

"Oh, for heaven's sake," she interrupted impatiently. "Did you bring me out here to tell me that? I have to get home, I tell you. I have a million things to do."

Her face went white.

"Sonia, if you know people are saying your folks are sending you away on account of that affair——"

"They are not. They don't dare say such a thing."

"Well, they are——and that's not all. There's been a lot more added to it. You may be sure the story hasn't lost anything by repetition."

Sonia was shrugged. But behind her indifferent attitude lay intense annoyance. The people should dare to lie about her reason for going away!

"What do you suggest doing about it?" she asked coldly.

"You know.... I suppose you'll refuse but the least I can do is to offer to marry you."

Sonia's laughter rang upon the summer air. It was unfeigned and joyous. And it infuriated the boy at her side.

"Oh, you will laugh at me! But you weren't too proud to kiss me last week."

Holding her with a grip of iron, he kissed her. Lips, cheeks eyes, hair—until suddenly, the girl went limp in his arms.

"Joe," she asked ramily, "do you love me as much as that?"

"Yes. and a whole lot more."

Her arms stole around his neck and her lips met his of their own accord. Sonia neither understood nor questioned her action. It seemed necessary, then, held close in his arms.

Joe's expression was that of one suddenly redeemed from the everlasting fires.

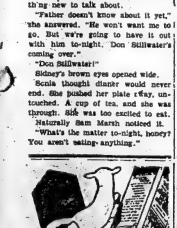
ATTESTED MEDICINE

FOR OVER HALF A CENTURY THIS KNOWN ALL-VEGETABLE MEDICINE HAS BEEN RECOGNIZED AS THE MOST EFFECTIVE RE-QUISITE OF THE LIVER KIDNEYS AND BOWELS

DR. CHASE'S KALPILIS

KALPILIS



For any

BABY

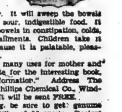
We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any druggtore, and the genuine easily identified by the C. H. Fletcher signature that appears on every wrapper.

Always with Lamb-

What could be nicer than cold lamb with a little H.P.? They're both so temptingly delicious.

HP SAUCE



Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 80 years.

LOSING NO TIME

Contractor and city have lost no time in getting to work at the upper bridge. Their energy must be commended for the work must be rushed to keep ahead of the cold days.

The action of the council in buying a strip of land to improve the approaches of the bridge cannot but meet with the approval of the citizens and especially of those who use the roadways. The land acquired will make possible certain improvements. As the bridge is being built for a generation or two, it was well to look into this matter and do the best by the city.

VISIT THE FAIRS

The season of mists, bright days, and autumn fairs and mellow fruitfulness is here.

Those of the cities who can afford time to visit rural fairs have in prospect a delight which only a fall fair can provide. rural fairs have their own special appeal, provincial exhibitions not being able to capture the spirit of the township or the district fair.

It is one of the delights of autumn to take in these shows. They will leave pleasant memories for the coming winter months when snow falls and wind howls.

WHAT WILL BE THE RESULT?

Will good road systems networked across the country lead to a change of business centres, will villages and towns come into a new life?

One cannot but wonder when one travels over the new highway from Belleville to Peterborough through Marmora. The Marmora-Peterborough road was taken over this week by the Department, the Stirling to Foxboro and Stirling to Marmora roads being already in use. Will there be a second provincial front, additional to that which skirts Lake Ontario, the Bay of Quinte, and the River St. Lawrence?

A highway is going to cut across country through Hastings County about the centre. What will it mean?

Business will follow towards and there may be rapid transformations of the entire central district. One who lives on the Stirling-Marmora Road realizes that developments of some kind are in store for these parts. This road, one of the finest highways, is certain to get a share of the travel of this portion of Ontario. At present this road is one of the most desirable to drive because it is not cluttered with busses, trucking vans which block the vision, and also with the heavy traffic of cars streaming over the highways, along the front. It may lead to a general exodus of city dwellers into the smaller Hastings hamlets and villages and their growth into towns of size.

It spells change, whatever it will be.

HARDLY A CHANCE

Sir Thomas Lipton is used to defeat by this time. This year's races lacked interest because of the supremacy from the start of the defender, as admitted by the knightly skipper and tea king. There must be a fighting chance and four straight heats hardly provided the interest that should develop out of an international event.

Sir Thomas in a statement remarked that he was too old to try again. The Toronto Globe aptly remarks that the man who has struggled to win the America's Cup is too old to learn the ways of the mechanical age, which have been credited with giving to the Enterprise a supremacy over the sailormen on the Shamrock Fifth. Racing in home waters is again the discussion upon the fairness or unfairness of the cup race which forced Lipton to cross the ocean in his craft.

While it is felt that the Enterprise can be justified in proceeding over the course after the mishap in the third race to the British craft, sportsmanship wonders what would the Shamrock have done if the accident had happened to the Enterprise. Most Britishers think the race would not have been a race that day if this had been the case as the Shamrock would doubtless not have gone on without the Enterprise. But that is an element in sport.

Sir Thomas has proven himself the plucky sportsman under heavy odds.

SIDELIGHTS

A SENSITIVE MAN

By Edgar A. Guest

He keenly felt another's stab of pain
Yet never winced at suffering of his own;
No one for help appealed to him in vain
And yet he seldom made his burden known.

To see a stranger hurt upon the street
Would chill his blood and turn him faint and white,
He shared the poor man's agony complete,
But, struck himself, he'd call the injury slight.

He had no nerve in the cold sense that he Could stand a witness to another's woe.
He suffered more a knockout blow to see
Than did the man to whom was dealt the blow.

This sort of man who can unmoved remain
Nor never flinch from hurts the fates may give,
And yet so keenly feels another's pain
Must find life very difficult to live.

THAR'S BARS IN THEM HILLS, by jing, let's go and get 'em, will be a favorite expression from now on after all the publicity Bruin has been getting lately for trying to kidnap a farmer's wife and for breaking the back of a heifer. Belleville hunters are not so keen after bear as they are after duck, and anyway buckshot only makes the bear laugh and seek to embrace the hunter. Back on the concessions, however, the boys are cleaning their rifles and getting ready to give Bruin plenty battle, while Bruin, scenting trouble, is no doubt making tracks for the tall timber and the hideaway.

CHEAP RAIWAY EXCURSIONS are being tried again, the first one being an excursion between Toronto and Belleville and Montreal and return for $10.00. Railway excursions were very numerous and popular at one time but as the railways waxed rich and prosperous they cut out these charming outings to the regret of many. Motor cars, trucks and busses are now cutting into railway earnings and behold back comes the old-time favorite big journey for little money. 'Member the excursions to New York and Washington in the old days $6.00 and $10.00? Seeing the Bowery and Broadway in the same day! Oh the Bowery, the Bowery, they do strange things and they say strange things on the Bowery. I'll never go there any more.

Gas and Oil Cached Among the Spruces Await All-Canada Pioneer

CHAIN OF "SERVICE STATIONS" BRIDGES BIG GAP IN TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY

Current discussion as to the best route for the Trans-Canada Highway through Northern Ontario adds interest to this sketch of the route chosen by Healy Needham in his attempt to pioneer a motor trail from Halifax to Vancouver without going out of Canadian territory. The odds against Mr. Needham in his pioneering effort through the swamps and forest between Hearst and the Manitoba boundary, have been considerably reduced by the caches of gas and oil placed at isolated points to await his coming. These supplies were placed by train and boat, canoe and pack trail, and are spaced over a distance of nearly 1,000 miles. The picture shows Needham, upper right, and on the left a view of the country where the emergency fuel caches have been located by Imperial Oil. The map background gives an idea of the difficult area through which Needham will travel, the caches being indicated by crosses. Below, left, Needham is shown with his eight-cylinder roadster and on the right a sketch of a typical shack in the bush with fuel supplies awaiting the gallant motorist's arrival.

FLORENCE BATEMAN

Melmore, Sept. 18 (by mail) — On Sunday evening Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bateman passed away. The deceased who was 23 years of age, was born in Rawdon township and was a cripple from birth, but until six months ago when her condition became worse, was exceedingly cheerful despite her bodily affliction. The prolonging of her life through the great suffering which has been her lot in the past three months was a matter of astonishment even to the attending physician.

Besides her parents she is survived by two brothers, Harry and George and a half brother and two half sisters, Percy Bateman of Rawdon township; Mrs. W. Bateman of Rawdon township and Mrs. Charles Nobes of Marmora township. Funeral services were conducted at her late residence on Tuesday at 10 a.m. by the Rev. A. B. Caldwell. Interment being made in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

One Good Turn

Jasper B. Sinclair

Pa Jenkins shook the dust off his clothes kicked his feet against the doorstep and entered the kitchen.

"Kind of looks as though Bonny's going to be in lip-top shape for the Country Fair, Ma," he stated with sudden elation.

Ma Jenkins watched him silently while he hung his hat behind the door and drew a chair up to the table.

"I hope so, Tom," she smiled. "It'll be a God-send if she is!"

She was thinking, not of the honor of winning the blue ribbon, but of the prize that accompanied it. Merit, thought Ma Jenkins, may be its own reward, but it does not pay off mortgages.

"Cheer up, Ma," grinned Jenkins, patting her on the shoulder. "You can't start spending that thousand dollars now, if you want. It's as good as in the bank!"

Mrs. Jenkins smiled dubiously. "I hope so, Tom," she repeated. Life was an ruli of disappointments that if was difficult to reconcile herself to the joy of anticipation. She could not bring herself to share Tom's wholehearted enthusiasm in Bonny's possible victory on the following Saturday.

"Now, Ma, don't look so glum. There ain't a chance in the world for a Bonny to lose. I'd back her against any Holstein in the country and guarantee she'd come out the way ahead. When it comes to giving butter fat there ain't a cow in the country can hold a candle to her!"

"I guess you're right, Pa," smiled Ma Jenkins. He was always so sure of himself. Still, she reflected, it didn't always pay to bank on the blue ribbons before you had them in hand.

"Course I am!" declared her husband positively.

"By the way, Ma," he queried, looking up from his plate, "ain't Jimmie home yet?"

His wife shook her head.

"Not yet, Tom. He went over to White's place," said he back at supper time, though. Ought to be here most any minute now, I reckon."

"Humph!" then Jenkins was a trifle put out by his son's inconsiderate neglect of his master's warning.

"Better go there'll be no supper for him!" he grunted.

"Now, Pa, don't be too——" but she broke off quickly, catching the sound of steps outside.

The screen door swung wide and Jimmie crashed into the kitchen.

"Sorry, Ma," he panted, "didn't know it was so late! I was comin' home sooner only——"

"What's that, Jimmie?" demanded Pa Jenkins, turning sideways from the table.

"Dunno what he is, Pa," declared Jimmie. "He didn't seem to have any owner and just followed me home. Thought maybe we could put him up. He looks kinda hungry."

The boy leaned over and patted the scraggly haired dog that had bounded into the kitchen behind him. He had was a dull lustreless brown that might have been sleek and tawny if it were washed and combed out. The gauntness of its body bore mute witness to Jimmie's assertion that it was in need of a good meal.

His father laid down his knife and fork.

"I reckon maybe we can give him a meal," he said, "but you'll have to get rid of him after that, Jimmie."

"Aw, gee, Pa," wailed Jimmie. "I thought maybe I could keep him in my room, and—"

"Not on your life! A house ain't no place for mongrels like that!"

Jimmie's eyes filled and his voice quavered.

"Can't I even keep him out in the barn, Pa? Please!"

"Didn't I say that—"

"Now, Pa interrupted his wife pacifically. "The boy's always wanted a dog. You know that. And I wouldn't do any harm for him to keep this one out in the barn. It would be a pal for him, too!"

Pa Jenkins shrugged his shoulders. He eyed the dog doubtfully. Then his eyes met his wife's, and there was a sign of relenting in them.

"Well, I guess maybe you can, Jimmie," he agreed reluctantly. "But mind, he's got to stay in the barn nights!" And if he turns out to be a nuisance—"

"He won't, Pa," exclaimed Jimmie joyfully. "I'll take good care of him."

Jimmie gave the dog a last affectionate pat as he left the room. And that night and came back into the house to go to bed.

Sport, as the dog was named, was a good dog. Sport, and keep quiet, won't you?" had been his final admonition. And the newly christened Sport wagged his tail as though he understood the need for obedience to his master's warning.

Hour after hour the screeching howls of the dog and its persistent scratching against the screen door awakened the Jenkins' family.

"Dern that cur anyway!" growled Pa Jenkins, roused from a sound sleep. "I knew there'd be trouble with the dog if Jimmie brought him in!"

Still muttering, he started downstairs, his wife close at his heels. When he swung open the door on the light in the kitchen, the dog gave a final yelp and renewed his scratching.

"What's the matter, Pa? Must be something wrong!" It was Jimmie, running into the kitchen clad in his pyjamas.

"There is something wrong!" muttered his father. "But it won't last any longer than it takes to get rid of that dog! I'm sorry, Jimmie, I knew I shouldn't have let you keep him!"

Jimmie looked at his mother and his lips trembled, but he said nothing.

When Pa Jenkins opened the door the dog bounded away, running toward the barn. Halfway across the intervening space it paused, turned around and renewed its yelping.

"Drat that cur!" muttered Jenkins again.

Then the dog ran forward, leaping frantically up at him.

"Get down!" shouted Jenkins. Again the dog was off, running toward the barn. Again it ran back to him, leaping and jumping in a frenzy of excitement. Once more it darted toward the barn.

"Pa, there's something wrong!" exclaimed Jimmie. "He's trying to tell us something! Can't you see?"

"Tonight! Maybe so!" grunted his father. "Reckon we'd better follow him and see!"

The dog's howling turned to sharp, staccato yelps when the trio stopped it into the barn. One sweep of his flashlight and Pa Jenkins stepped back in dismay.

There, lined within the beam of light, was Bonny—his prize cow—on hand caught in the hay-rack, slowly choking to death! Quickly he loosed the cow, tearing apart the slats with strong hands. Prancing around his feet, Jimmie's mongrel barked her joyful approval.

For a full minute Pa Jenkins stared down at the dog, his lips moving silently. Then he turned to Jimmie, wide-eyed and tense.

"I kind of reckon, Jimmie, that tomorrow morning last dog of yours will enjoy the biggest steak the butcher has! And if you want to keep him in your room from now on, why I reckon it'll be O.K. with me," he said slowly.

Health cannot be looked for in the child that is subject to constipation because worms destroy health by creating internal disturbances that retard development and cause serious weakness. Miller's Worm Powders expel worms and are so beneficial in their action that the systems of the little sufferers are restored to healthfulness all the discomforts and dangers of worm infection are removed and satisfactory growth is assured.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Pop and ma are still undecided what to decide about which kind of a automobeel to buy, a Sparrow or a Wimpie, and last nite ma sed, I had a driving lesson today, Willyum, the Sparrow man gave me one and then the Wimpie man gave me one, so now if I can really compare how the 2 cars drive from my own original experients, and I must say I don't think there's much to choose between them because they both drive perfeckly, she sed.

For Pete sake do you meen to say your axually drove 2 cars today and are alive to tell the tale? pop sed and ma sed, Certainy, there's nothing so difficult about it, all you do is simply turn the wheel the way you wunt the car to go, and it goes that way with out the slightest question, even if its around a corner.

But how about the gaz, the xseleerator and all that? pop sed, and ma sed, O, I supose you meen that little thing you push with your foot sed. It was funny about that, I kept confusing it with the brake, although as a matter of fact its gravel effect is the very opposite, and when the Sparrow man called out Brake, in a commanding tone of voice, I felt I had to do something without waisting too much time thinking, and what I did was press down on the little round thing. We dident axually bump into anything, but the 2nd time I did it I got the Sparrow man charge for everything himself except the wheel, and thats how I happen to know ro much about the cars, ma sed.

And after that you still had the courage to try the Wimpie? pop sed, and ma sed as how she dident take any more courage than the other.

And the Wimpie man did the same thing I supose, just let you have the wheel? pop sed, and ma sed, He went even feether, he took persoanl control of everything except the hoo, so all I did for quite a while was steer that, until the sound of it seemed to get on his nerves and he finished the driving lesson and drove me home

2 driving lessons, eye gods, pop sed

And he took out his new cigar lighter to see if it was werkin, which it wasent.

Pale Faces Jaded Nerves

Due to Weak, Watery Blood

Anaemia — impoverished blood — comes so stealthily that it is often well advanced before recognized. Pallour and discomfort the earliest manifestations of the trouble are seldom taken seriously. Soon the face becomes pale the nerves jaded; the heart palpitates violently after the slightest exertion; the appetite becomes fickle, and before you realize it you are in a terrible plight.

At such time, by enriching and purifying the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will build up the nerve cells and correct the run-down condition. Concerning them Miss Margaret Torrey, Toronto, Ont., says:—"I suffered a complete breakdown. My heart would palpitate on the least exertion. Nothing I ate agreed with me. I started taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and by the time I had taken several boxes I was ready for anything; I had gained in weight and every distressing symptom had left me."

You can get these Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MADOC

Madoc, Sept. 18 (by mail) — On Tuesday evening a very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. Homer Tobin, when about one hundred and twenty-five friends and neighbors assembled to present Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tobin with a beautiful set of china dishes.

The following address was read by Miss Jean McGuigen:

Dear Francis and Kathleen:

We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here this evening to welcome the bride that Francis has brought here to live among us.

We have always known Francis. He has always been a good sport but not always as pleasant as he is tonight.

With his wife we are slightly acquainted but we hope to be the very best of friends in the days to come.

We ask you to accept this gift as a token of our friendship and as you use them day by day we hope you have pleasant memories of us.

We wish much happiness in your married life and may your troubles be few and small.

Signed on behalf of your friends:

Willie Latendresse,

Hunter McQuigge,

Wilfred Forestall.

Mr. Tobin on behalf of his wife and himself, expressed their sincere thanks and appreciation for the valuable gift and for the kindness to a real proof of a grand community. He extended to one and all a hearty invitation to accompany them in using them.

A light lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

FOXBORO

Foxboro, Sept. 17 —by mail—On Friday evening a very pleasant time was spent at the home of Miss Isobel Rombough, Foxboro, when the Gleaners S. S. class held their regular monthly meeting. After singing the class songs, Miss Rosie Defoe took charge of the devotional part, the Scripture lesson being read by Miss Marion Denike. The president then had charge of the rest of the programme, which consisted of the Missionary part by Miss Evelyn Cough and the literary part by Miss Isobel Rombough and this was interspersed by music on the gramophone and singing of some familiar hymns. The meeting was closed by repeating the Mispah benediction, after which a very dainty lunch was served consisting of cake ,tarts, ice cream and lemonade.

Some games were played and the evening closed by giving the class yell. During the evening some Chinese handiwork was viewed.

STYLE SHOW

Bringing to a glittering close a week when Fashion has reigned supreme and Belleville femininity has revelled in the styles revealed, the fifth and last Style Revue of the Kiwanis Karnival was held in the Armouries last evening and the costumes displayed were from the Canadian Department Store, with furs from Delaney and costume jewelry from McFee's.

Dame Fashion has shown herself to be nothing if not resourceful this season, for last evening brought into prominence, in the stunning collection of garments, many style ideas and delightful touches that were decidedly new and undeniably interesting if one would judge from the keen appreciation of the audience. Costume after costume of surpassing beauty was exhibited and one felt that the revue was over all too soon, so reluctant was one to see the curtain come down on the evening's entertainment.

Successful creations of important French couturiers were reflected in the garments shown. Hence one saw Patou's favourite shade, Vionnet's approved neckline, Chanel's new shoulder strap treatment for evening dresses and other features that labelled the gowns and wraps as authentically Parisian in style ideas. Fine materials, beautiful colours, the correct cut, all combined to make the C.D.S. costumes outstanding.

Five local girls acted as mannequins throughout the evening. They were Mrs. John Kerr, Miss Madeline Bell, Miss Della Jamieson, Miss Lily Mason and Miss Edith Rainbird, while for the final two members of the Merry Makers modelled costumes.

For Afternoon

Gowns for afternoon, street and semi-formal wear in the ever popular black and glowing autumn colours were shown in many materials, the dull surfaced fabrics being more prominent, as was the case of this kind. A marvella frock with trimmings of crepe shell, interesting pleat arrangement of the skirt and cape shoulder was worn with a coat of Lakfan lamb. An other afternoon model was of black chiffon velvet trimmed with narrow band of white galyak at the waistline and with this a coat of Madiera wine broadcloth was trimmed with fur. A striking cape wrap of black broadcloth has collar and cuffs of silver fox, while a green model in broad cloth showed trimmings of wolf. The pleasing contrast obtained by combining deep brown material with blonde fur was shown in a broadcloth dress with collar and cuffs of broadcloth. The Paquin of grey squirrel adorned a handsome black broadcloth in the new fitted lines.

Double tulle georgette was the medium for a graceful gown of Salvador brown. Tucked bodice, flaring skirt and the Alencon lace that outlined the tucked sleeves were the features of the handsome gown. A particularly striking style for the matron was a gown in chiffon velvet, the shade of which was on the Burgundy tone but is called Morocco. This dress was finished with lace that was hand encrusted to the velvet. Black cation crepe, in a semi-sports model was enhanced with blouse in off-white satin, with scalloped jacket lined with the satin and unusual collar.

A clever little frock was in three piece style in black canton and looked like a suit but when the coat and skirt were removed in place of a blouse there was a whole dress of Josephine blue cation and Alencon lace in tailored style that could do duty as a dance frock. This novel costume is sponsored by Patou.

Evening Modes

For evening the C.D.S. introduced gowns of scintillating charm, gowns that will make the winter social season brilliant displays of loveliness. An evening ensemble of black panne velvet had gown of classic simplicity, with unique scarf back and the wrap with a starting model of real white galyak, lined with shell pink. Rhinestone shoulder straps enhanced the beauty of an eggshell satin evening gown. Also was a wrap of ruby velvet finished with white fox collar.

The new cloud patterned lace imported from Patou, and the frock a copy of one of his models made a beautiful dress which was in Patou's lovely blue tone and had inserts of it. The wrap for this costume was of sky blue panne velvet, with shirred sleeves and longer line emphasized by a flared effect. Belgian Hare made the white fur collar.

C. D. S. Millinery

The hats worn last evening were from the C. D. S. and blended perfectly with the ensembles. Felt and velvet were seen in flattering models that exploited the vogue for tricky brims, the beretta shapes and the new colour tones.

Delaney Furs

Lending distinction to their wearers fur wraps of unusual design and distinguishing again held the eager attention of the audience. The fur neckpieces also from Delaney's were worn throughout the evening and were very beautiful.

McFee's supplied jewelry worn with the costumes and gems that flashed in the rays of the spotlight gave the last touch to evening and afternoon wear that made for perfection. Necklets and bracelets were shown and many were in ensembles in which all three pieces matched.

Library Corner

Additions to the Corby Public Library, this week, include "In the Land of the Lion" by Charles Kassiott. For twenty-five years the author has been roving about in Central Africa: studying and picturing its wild life. He was a pioneer in the modern sport of photographing instead of killing big game animals, and he writes about them with very great interest, knowledge and love. In this book he takes as his special field what he calls the "last and greatest stronghold of the lions" almost the only place he says, in which that animal can be found, now, in great numbers—an area of about 300,000 square miles in Central Africa But he does not confine his writings about this district to lions, he also describes the habits and behavior of elephants, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, buffalos, crocodiles, giraffes, monkeys, leopards, warthogs, forest pigs, birds, hyenas, jackals, antelopes, gazelles, zebras and many smaller animals and insects. A great many photographs illustrate the text.

"Sailing across Europe" by Negley Parson is an account of a cruise from Holland to the Black Sea, by way of Chicagoan and his wife. Having very little money but an insistent urge to see strange lands and strange people they set out on their 3000 mile trip in a little twenty-six foot, clinker-built boat. A result of the venture is this interesting and amusing travel book.

A curious and intriguing little vol ume is "Shadows of the Old Booksellers" by Charles Knight. These shadows concern the lives and trades of the bookseller-publishers of olden times and tell something like a connected story of literary progress in its commercial relations from the reddle of the seventeenth century to the end of the eighteenth. Among the characters which flit across the stage there are Thomas Miller of Basingstoke, "get himself up in the character of grocer and bookseller" and Mrs. Tricy Sowles, the Quaker who was "a bookseller and a bookseller and "understands her trade very well", and John Dunton who said that "of all the hundred books he printed during his career he had only to repent ci seven".

P. Frankfort Moore's "Kitty Clive and Other Plays in One Act" contains beside the title play which is somewhat revised, "A Poor Actress", another one-act play of the London stage in the mid-eighteenth century; "The Jessamy Bride" adopted from Frank Dilnot's romance of Jane Oliver Goldsmith and Dr. Johnson; and "The Sword of Damocles", an original modern Grand Guignol.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bleecker and Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Kerr motored to Montreal excursion of the Railway Ticket Agents' Association. The excursion is to Victoria, B.C., from where the convention will be held. They expect to be away about three weeks.

Mr. James Sweeney of Ottawa, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Cehan.

Mr. Clarence Merau, of Madoc, called on friends in town on Sunday.

Mr. John Finnegan, Jr., of Bancroft, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Finnegan.

Mr and Mrs. B. McGibbon of Montreal, who have been visiting relatives in Marmora and Belleny left on Tuesday to visit the latter's sister, Mrs. A. McPherson, Peterboro.

Among those from Marmora who went on the excursion on Sunday to visit the Canadian Martyrs' Shrine, near Midland, Ont., were — Mr. and Mrs. John Connors, Mrs. Hugh Maloney and daughters Geraldine and Zitha, Mrs. Thos. O'Neill and daughter, Jean, Mrs. John Murray, Miss Clara Sullivan, Mrs. E. Auger, Mrs. James Sheridan, Mrs. George Auger and Mrs. E. Byrnes.

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING

BY

LUCILLE

Dear Readers:

How many things to be done to the house crop up, and force themselves on our attention after we have been away for a time. Didn't you find it so after holidaying this year?

There's fall house cleaning in the offing, but there is plenty of time to plan changes, and innovation, before that strenuous time is on us. Don't you wish you could bring back some summer, and preserve it, the way we keep luscious summer fruits? Since that is impossible, at least you can give your home a summery air by treating the rooms to the brightness of new paint or varnish.

And just now, when the mood is on us, why not hunt up some of the old bits of furniture, treat them to a coat of paint in a smart shade, and make a start towards introducing more brightness to combat the dullness of the long winter days? Then, too, un painted furniture can be had at little expense, and just imagine what can be done in home redecoration with the new sid! Magazine racks, end tables, sewing racks in pretty colours will find a welcome corner which lacks such a touch to complete the room.

As for the shades, there are so many that you can devise an original color scheme for your rooms, or can match almost perfectly the shade of the sofa, the small pieces to that of some one in the decoration of the room in which they are placed. When a whole room is being done, there are a few points that might be well remembered. Blue gives an effect of reserve, cool and dignified, yellow, a shallow colour in light cheery and warm, while green is a cheerful, soothing colour, suggestive of summer's freshness. A room decorated in blue gives the effect of a larger room. Yellow is better for rooms in the north side of the house which gets little natural sunshine.

A room in which red is used extensively in the decortation makes the room look smaller. Walls should be tinted in a neutral shade, otherwise they will mar the general effect of the room, dwarfing the furniture arrangements.

Look around your home, now that you're home, today, and see if you don't find plenty of places where fresh paint would be welcome.

Fashionably yours.

RETURNING THE SOCIAL CALL

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Several weeks ago I met two ladies at a dinner. I invited them to call on me. Two weeks later they called and I wasn't home, so they left a note with their names on it stating that they had called. Is it too late to write? Is it proper to call on them?

F.

Yes, it is proper for you now to return the call, and pay your respects by leaving cards for them. No, it is not too late—people aren't so punctilious about this kind of thing as they used to be. But make this call as soon as you can conveniently.

IF THE ESCORT SENDS FLOWERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. On a ten invitation of any sort, just where are the date and name written?

2. In introducing one's self, it is correct, is it not, to give one's first name, as well as the last?

3. When going to a formal dance with a young man, should he ask the lady's choice of flowers? Would it be correct if she asked him not to send any, so that she get them herself?

If you mean a tea invitation written on a visiting card, do you not? If the name is engraved on the card and the address is engraved in smaller letters in the lower right corner the other information is written above and below the name, to the left. If "R.s.v.p." is to be written on the card (which is usually not done for an "at home" or for a tea) that is written in the lower left corner. Just where that may be written the kind of party it is to be: "At Home," "Dancing," "Bridge," "Music." Above the name may be written the date and the hours.

Friday September the second.

Four to seven o'clock.

2. Yes. "This is Grace Rutherfurd" is correct.

3. It is correct for him, if he wishes to ask the preference of the young lady to the flowers she sends, for if he is a man of sure taste and a pride in his artistic discrimination, he may ask to have what order given him as to wear, and design his floral offering accordingly.

It would indeed now be gracious of her to ask him not to send any flowers. This would be an unkind way of acknowledging his generous thought for her and would certainly not add to his happiness. If the gentleman sends flowers, the young lady should wear them, or carry them at least to show her appreciation. And she should do it's even if she does not like to wear or carry flowers, or even if they do not go with her frock. She must honor the thought, even if it causes her inconvenience and artistic discomfort.

"IF IT'S AT THE BELLE IT MUST BE GOOD!"

MADOC JCT.

Madoc Jct., Sept. 18 (by mail) — The September meeting of Eggleton W.M.S. was held at the home of the treasurer, Mrs. Lawrence Manchee. Meeting opened with hymn "Jesus Shall Reign" and prayer after which the leader, Mrs. Andrews, called for the poster for a talk about his vacation which all enjoyed as he described his visit to scenes of his boyhood days with a touch of sadness as he spoke of his mother's grave.

Scripture lesson was read by the oldest member, Mrs. George Clarke

Mrs. R. Chambers rendered a solo which was much appreciated. The business consisted of plans for attending the sectional meeting in the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, on October 1st.

Several were elected as delegates but as none were sure of attending the corresponding secretary was advise dto send report to Mrs. Stillman Day. One of the missionary quilts was sold with one still for sale. Several members then led in prayer for the world need of Christ and our own work and missionaries.

The leader read clippings from a lecture by William Bayley, director of Temperance Education for Manitoba. "To leave liquor alone is requirement of our tas tnew age." In one generation the world has upsetted up from six miles an hour horsepower to sixty mile an hour cars and two hundred miles an hour aeroplanes. If we could go back to shovels, anvils, wheelbarrows, oxen and horses we might think it safe to drink liquor, but now motormen, auto drivers, railroad engineers and air pilots are required to "leave liquor alone."

After singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" the meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Truscott, the members were delighted to meet in

CANNOT FORCE COURT YOUTH IS TOLD BY CROWN

Cecil George Lawrence, of Stirling, is Sentenced, Not Deported

SUITCASE CLUE

Owner of Motorcycle Had Turned Tap Leading to Gasoline

Cecil George Lawrence, formerly resident of Stirling, was arrested by Provincial Constable Bert Shannon yesterday afternoon at Cobourg and today appeared in police court charged with the theft of a motor cycle, owned by Edward Southwell and taken from a drive shed owned by William Rodgers in Sidney Township on the 17th of this month. He elected summary trial, not being represented by counsel, and pleaded guilty to the offence. Magistrate Mikel sentenced the young man to three-months in the county jail on the suggestion of the Crown Attorney.

R. C. Donnan explained to His Worship, that "the young man before the court wishes to be deported to England whence he came, but this is impossible as he is now married and has not the means to take his wife along." It was also explained, however, he has made up his mind to keep on committing crimes until he is deported. Turning to Lawrence, the crown attorney asked if that was not a statement of fact, and Lawrence replied in the affirmative. "I wish to state to you young man," said Mr. Donnan, you cannot force this court to do anything and if you come back in this jurisdiction for any offence you will not get off as lightly as you have this morning."

Case Followed

On September 17th, a motor cycle was stolen from the drive shed of William Rodgers and owned by Edward Southwell an employee of Rodgers. On the same afternoon the cycle was found down a side road near the Rodgers farm with a suitcase tied on it owned by Lawrence. He was at once suspected as he had returned to the district after being away for some time. Lawrence had tried to get a job with Rodgers some days before and when none was in the offing a few days he decided to get out of the country the quickest possible way. His escape with the motor cycle was frustrated however for the owner of the machine had turned the tap leading

Two Revolvers Stolen from Store Rear Window is Used for Entry

Two valuable revolvers were secured when the electric store of E. D. Finkle, Dundas Front street, was entered some time during last night. The guns were taken from the front window and there is a possibility that this break-in was connected with the one which took place early today at the jewelry store of J. O. B. McCurdy. Entrance was gained by the rear window, a broken piece of car spring being used to force the window. The loss was not discovered until about eight o'clock this morning when Mr. Finkle went to his place of business. He had not been near the store since Saturday at noon. Sergt. Booth and Provincial Constable Evans, who is on that beat, investigated. The constable states all was in order when he made his inspection of the rear of the premises early this morning. The revolvers taken were of twelve gauge and very similar in design although different in make.

There is a supposition in police circles that the guns were taken as a precaution against a possible surprise attack when the other breakin took place.

Jewelry Store Is Robbed of $1000 Worth of Watches

Constables Gow and Thomson Discover Forced Window in Rear

SCREW DRIVER USED

Little Clue Found of Men in Monday Morning Haul

Using a fifteen cent screw driver to force a rear window, the jewelry store of J. O. B. McCurdy was broken into early today by persons yet unknown to the police, securing watches and valuable tie pins to the amount of $1,000.00. Sergt.-Detective Truelich has been assigned to the case but there are few clues to be found in the robbery, as the persons responsible for the theft left no traces excepting the screw driver used to force the window. The loss to Mr. McCurdy will be heavy as the insurance will not cover the full.

Constable John Gow was assigned to number two beat last night and with P. C. Thomson made a visit of the rear entrances of the stores on Front street about 2.30 a.m. Arriving at the McCurdy store, the officers found that the window had been forced and immediately entered the store to find no one in the premises. They found, that the stock had been disturbed, and while one officer stayed in the store another telephoned for the desk sergeant and when he arrived the store was inspected and Mr. McCurdy was called. His inspection found forty-

Fender Said to Have Caught in Passing Car Early Today

A car, owned by George Thompson, Rosmore, driven by the owner and occupied by his father and wife, was overturned in a ditch on the Belleville highway early today and fortunately no one was injured. Traffic Officer W. C. Pond investigated. Mr. Thompson was driving westerly followed by a car driven by George Deline and in to avoid it by Mr. Thompson that Deline in passing cut too quickly catching his rear fender on the front fender of Mr. Thompson car The Thompson car went out of control, into the ditch and turned over breaking a rear wheel. The front fender on the Deline car was only scratched and no other damage was done.

CANADIAN MARTYRS' FEAST ON FRIDAY

For the first time since their canonization in June, the feast of the Canadian Martyrs will be held on Friday of this week. HEAD-ON CRASH BROUGHT FINE

Woman Motorist Applied Brakes and the Car Skidded

Alleged to be driving too fast on a slippery pavement, a car owned by Mrs. Gertrude Rigley, Tremont, Ohio, and driven by her sister, Mrs. Jessie Beinenkamper collided practically head on with a car driven by Mrs. Henry Ballows, Victoria Harbor, on Saturday afternoon at a point just west of the Ontario School for the Deaf. Traffic Officer W. O. Fink investigated the accident and brought the driver of the American car to the police station. She was charged with reckless driving and pleading guilty was fined $10.00 and costs. Mrs. Delenkamheider took full responsibility for the accident and paying the damages caused to the Ballow car, was allowed to proceed on her journey.

Mrs. Delenschneider was driving west on the King's Highway and overtook a horse and wagon. The woman driver was apparently travelling at too fast a rate for the condition of the road and when she applied her brakes to stop as a car was coming from the west, her car skidded directly out in front of the Ballow car. The Ballow car had a bent fender and bent chassis and the Delenschneider car was broken in front. No one was injured in either car excepting a small child in the Ballow car, which sustained a bump on the forehead.

Hebrew New Year Begins at Sundown

Rabbi Gerstel Explains the Significance of Observance

TEN DAY PERIOD

Local Hebrew Colony Will Attend Services in Hebrew

People of the Jewish religion in Belleville enter upon one of the most important observances of the year tonight when at sundown, the New Year season starts. It will extend through Tuesday and Wednesday, a period devoted to the mood and prayers of repentance.

Yew Joyz and certainly no orthodox Jews will work on these two days. Rabbi Gerstel explained to The Ontario Intelligencer that the observance, according to the Jewish belief was the 5,691st anniversary of the creation of Adam and of the judgment passed upon Adam by God and his expulsion from the Garden of Eden. The day is the first of Tishri, the seventh month according to the Jewish calendar. Its observance as a religious feast has its authority in Leviticus "In the seventh month, on the first day of the month shall have a Sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an unholy convocation." The observance is also the occasion when judgment is passed upon men in Heaven, according to Rabbi Gerstel. In the synagogue during the service Rabbi Gerstel will blow the horn of the ram.

It is not however these two days alone which are of special signifi-

FINGER CAUGHT IN MACHINE

Mrs. Edith Woodhouse, 1 Emily St., while employed as the Belleville Canners on Saturday morning had her hand caught in a corn machine and the top of her middle finger was mangled. She was taken to Belleville General Hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the finger at the first joint.

FIND ABANDONED CAR

While City Traffic Officer Bert Frink was patrolling his beat today he found a McLaughlin touring car abandoned near the corner of College and North Front street. The license number NA-165 was looked up and it was ascertained that the car was owned in Picton. Traffic Officer W. O. Frink took the number and will investigate the happening and cause of abandonment.

REPAIRS TO WALKS.

Of late the public works department has repaired bad portions of sidewalks about the city. One very dangerous place yet is on the west side of Charles street south, near Dundas street, where the walk has settled on one side making slippery and treacherous walking in wet and icy times.

CAR TURNED OVER.

A car owned by W. H. Juby of Point Anne, was involved in an accident on the King's Highway east of the city on Saturday afternoon. The car was driven by a daughter of Mr. Juby and she was proceeding toward the city when she applied the brakes and the motor skidded into the ditch and turned partly over. Miss Juby escaped with a scraping up while a companion suffered little injury. The car, a new model, was slightly damaged, some of the glass being shattered while the top was jammed. It was piloted under its own power to Point Anne, it was rainin' at the time and the auto skidded on the wet surface.

WAS GUEST HERE.

"Happy" Dick Diamond, roaming cyclist cavalier, was a guest at the home of Abraham Duncan, Frank St. over the week end. "Happy" Dick left Belleville today enroute for Ottawa where he will remain for a short time. He hopes to interview Premier Bennett and former Premier Mackenzie King at the capital.

Hebrew New Year

cance in the Hebrew faith, October 2nd is the day of atonement and the ten day period between the Jewish New Year and the Day of Atonement is a period of repentance. The Saturday during this period is the most sacred day of the Jewish year, when special sermons will be delivered in the synagogue here.

Jewish New Year is known through out the world as "Rosh-Hashana."

The services will be conducted wholly in Hebrew and the local Hebrew colony, which consists of eighteen persons will attend. They occur at eight in the morning and at 6.30 in the evening.

The explanation of "Rosh-Hashana" is contained in the following paragraph: "The New Year is an unholy convocation and a festival in symbolic as to the issue. By honest confessions, by repentance and by mutual forgiveness the sins thereof doubtless be favourable. All the expectation of such decision is a source of joy."

BELLE INSTALLED VICTOVOICE SCREEN

Bells Theatre has just installed a victovoice screen which makes possible larger pictures. New Roxa lenses for the simplex projection machine have been added to the equipment. The Belle management is determined to have the equipment at this house second to none in the Dominion.

STIRLING

Stirling, Sept. 22.—The September meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. met at the home of the president, Mrs. Jack Parpy, Ridge Road, on Thursday afternoon with a fair attendance. After the opening hymn, "The Glad Tidings," prayer was given by Mrs. James Montgomery and Mrs. R. Hollins read extracts from the 8th, 9th and 10th

CANADIAN DIPLOMAT HONORED

Lieut.-Col. Maurice Alexander, formerly of Montreal, who has been appointed the British Government's representative at the International Court at The Hague.

Chapters of Acts and commented there on. After the roll call, the reports of the secretary, the 2nd, and 3rd Associate committee and others were given. A letter from Mrs. Geo. A. Reid of Belleville, president, was read urging the members to be more earnest in prayer more faithful in attendance and giving. It was decided to ask Mrs. Gould formerly of Formosa to be present at the Thanksgiving meeting on October 13th at which the guild also would convene.

Three verses of The Sands of Time Are Sinking, was sung or a trio, and tempted to be sung in memory of the late beloved Mrs. Henry Reid who was one of the most faithful and energetic the society ever had and the society was deeply moved while singing this hymn.

The topic was divided into two topics, Mrs. Floyd DuCoe taking Korea her subject and Mrs. Thos. Mathews on India, both handled the subject well. After singing a hymn the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

St. Andrew's Guild

A social evening of St. Andrew's Guild met on Monday at which there were a fair number in attendance.

Mrs. Harper Rollins presided. After the opening hymn, "Softly and Tenderly Jesus is Calling", Rev. Reid led in prayer then Mrs. Rollins read the fifth chapter of Galatians, verses "After Thy Loving Kindness Lord". A reading was given by Donald Rodgers. After suggestions had been made for promoting the society, Mrs. Rollins called upon Rev. A. N. Reid to present the slate of officers for 1930-31. The following are the officers for 1930-31.

Hon. Pres.—Mr. Spinks.
President—Mr. Arthur Nathan.
1st Vice-Pres.—Miss Lilias Smith.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Chris Bury.

A reception for the H. S. and P. S. staffs and High school pupils was held on Monday evening in the G. A. room with considerably over one hundred being present. The president, Mr. H. Hulin, presided and after singing two verses of "Onward Christian Soldiers" prayer was offered by Rev. R. W. Brownlee. Miss Retta Bessie Conley sang "Come Out to Greet the Morn" in her usual finished style. Mr Hulin then welcomed the teaching staff and pupils, supported by a few well chosen words by Rev. E. W. Rowland, to which Mr. Shortt, principal of the public school, replied on behalf of the public school. Maurice Bell rendered a banjo solo which was heart ily encored to which he responded. Messrs. Way and W. Jones rendered a fine vocal duet which was much appreciated. Mr. Furnival in a violin solo accompanied by Miss Blanche Hadley showed careful training and talent. Just at this juncture a mandie guessing contest was staged Mrs. Corrigal being the winner of the prize. Community singing was indulged in led by Jerry Clute accompanied by Mrs. Rowland at the piano. A quartette Goodnight, Gentle Folk, Good Night, was sung by Rev. E. W. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Lindenfield and Miss Currie. This was much enjoyed. A play contest followed in which each group of whom there were twelve sang a verse of a certain song suggested them, the judges deciding that number one sang the best.

A chair prize was won by Clarence West. A cafeteria tea brought this enjoyable evening to a close. The president announced that next Monday evening The Globe trotter, Mr. Grenville, will tell some of his experiences in India. The National Anthem was then sung.

MIDNIGHT ENDS WEEK KARNIVAL DRAWING RESULT

Miss E. Ethier Wins Coat for Modelling, Mrs. LaPalm Hope Chest

VARIOUS CONTESTS

When the doors were closed at the armouries on Saturday night another Kiwanis Carnival had passed into history and maintained its record of giving the citizens and residents a maximum of amusement. The Carnival was most successful in every department with the attendance exceeding that of last year but in receipts was down from the same year. This was to be expected, considering the financial situation of the country, but the Club is appreciative of the response from all classes and sufficient money was realized to continue the underprivileged work that has been one of the chief aims of the Kiwanis Club since its inception. Saturday night was given over to frolic. There was no vaudeville nor any Fashion Parade and all, who attended enjoyed the real Karnival spirit and some interesting contests were held that appealed.

Watermelon Contest

The "Sunny Southland" was brought to Belleville for a few minutes on Saturday night, when the stage committee arranged for a watermelon contest. This was the time for the boys to have their fun and real fun it was. More than fifteen young boys entered the competition, which was to eat three slices of watermelon in the least possible time. When it came to eating the sanbbled fruit "Scotty" Wilson of St. Paul Street was right in his element and was easily first against his older opponents, this being content to eat his own he helped out one of the other contestants and still had a margin over the last finishing. The crowd simply howled with laughter as Wilson with a system all his own of disposing of the seeds made the race a walkover.

Miss Coat

Miss Elizabeth Ethier carried off the coat, that was given for the girl modelling it the best with the manequins barred. There were nine contries and Miss Ethier was given the award only after a stiff race in popularity with Miss Irish. This contest was followed by the machining of the hat and Miss Roesti won it all by herself. Out of the entries came some possible mannequins for the future, hence the stage show was closed, the Y.M.C.A. announced the winners of their competition, which had run during the Carnival week. This contest was run in slight repayment for the interest the Kiwanis Club has taken in the "Y" work especially the boys work at Lake Moira. President Joe Imlah made the draw and the winner in each section received a year's membership in the "Y" and the second six months. The winners in each section were girls. Eva Bisker, Corbyville, Dora Bolsteds, Belleville Boys, Thomas Haslip and James Moores, while the seniors to win were George F. Reid, Corbyville and C. W. Bryant of this city.

Of considerable interest was the drawing for the door prize and for the hope chest. Ted Hall was fortunate in having his ticket taken from the box for the door prize and was richer by two five dollar gold pieces. The hope chest draws were made by Mrs. Pearsall of Syracuse, N.Y., with Mrs. Howard LaPalm winning the hope chest. Norman Smith, 140 Burnham St., the set of dishes and Miss Cecilia Manion of Napanee, the bedroom chair. This concluded the contests of the Carnival and the remainder of the evening was spent at the games and in the dance hall. A statement of the receipts and expenditures will be given to the public in due course by the secretary George H. Griffin and the club considers the public has a right to know how much was secured and also the use which is made of the surplus.

CANNOT FORCE COURT YOUTH TO LY

from the gas tank to the carburetor and Lawrence had only ridden as far as the gas, then the car carburetor would take him. After Southwell had reported the theft, a warrant was issued and the provincial Police went in search of the young man.

Chew for Youth

Yesterday afternoon they received information that Lawrence was held in the vicinity of Stirling and they hurried to the scene only to be informed that the young man had left for Trenton earlier in the afternoon. The chase was now on but apparently the young man had received a lift out of Trenton for he was not to be found when the officer arrived. The officers drove up the King's Highway toward Brighton and happening to notice a freight train, which was going west on the Canadian National Railways, Lawrence with a companion sitting comfortably on the back of a gasoline tank car. The officer hurried to Brighton ahead of the train, and being informed that it was a through freight and would not stop until Cobourg was reached, they wired Cobourg authorities to have the two men placed under arrest, which order was carried out. The young man with Lawrence was not held but was brought back to Belleville by the officers and allowed to go to his home near Stirling.

Police Busy

All Night with Asthma. Everyone knows how attacks of asthma often keep their victims awake the whole night long. Morning finds him wholly unfitted for a day of business and yet business must still be carried through. All this night suffering and lack of rest can be avoided by the prompt use of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy which positively does drive away the attacks.

A man was rewarded with a bite in the arm after he had saved a dog from drowning at Egham, and it was necessary for him to receive medical attention.

This is the first break-in of importance, that has happened in the city for some months and the police are spending every effort to find those responsible. It is believed the job was pulled by those, who had knowledge before hand and that it was done by professionals as they would be the only people able to dispose of that class of merchandise. A list of the articles taken will be published as soon as Mr. McCurdy is able to take stock. The police forces along the line have been notified of the break-in and circulars will be issued at once, containing the serial number of the watches and the description of the the pins.

It has also been learned later today from the police, that three suspicious characters were seen in a car, inspecting the part of Front street, where the store is located and that a good description had been obtained.

she wrist and pocket watches taken also twenty tie pins from the show case next the front window, the only case in the store that was touched.

Entrance had been gained by a rear window with a cheap screwdriver with a narrow blade and the inside door dividing the workshop from the front store had also been opened by the same instrument, which was found at the rear of the show case, which had been opened. The screw driver being found by Mr. McCurdy, who claimed he did not own it. Some peculiar attention around the break-in and the police have collected all the information and are working on the angles, that have been presented to them. The night watchman at the Rudtzeier Brewery Company stated to the police that about two o'clock he heard a noise about the McCurdy store but paid no particular attention to the same.

Six Men

George Shorey, who was on duty in the afternoon, told the night watchman, when he came on duty, that during the afternoon six men had tried to get into the Brewery yard from the rear by climbing over the high wall along the river. The work of the Brewery incidentally is directly behind the jewelry store.

Another incident in the break-in is the fact that a man carrying a suit case had inquired about engaging a room at the Crystal Hotel on Sunday but did not take the room and the hotel clerk in view of what transpired thought he acted queer. These two incidents are being thoroughly investigated as the description of the men have been obtained but will not be made public for the time being.

PIERCING DAYS OF RADIO

"The piercing days of radio" as one New York writer speaks of the present age have had one good result. Modern songs are at once known throughout the continent and world. It used to be that the producer of a musical comedy could sit still in New York while the profits came in and when the appeal of the show in the city went threadbare, all he had to do was to send the old songs and the actors out on the road for a money-making expedition.

Today if he steps out of New York he wonders if the lure of his songs and dances is going to last for the people everywhere have heard them over countless broadcasts from New York. The producer is assuredly faced with a problem. "New days, new problems," he can say to himself as he tries to figure out the endurance of the people in "the provinces." Will the songs last till his companies have made the tour?

If his songs are good his chances are much better than if they happened to be but very ordinary productions.

TURNABOUT FOR MOTORISTS

"Turnabout is fair play" runs an old adage. This is what those who are accustomed to using the lower bridge feel now that upper bridge traffic has been detoured over the lower bridge during the time of replacement of the upper bridge.

The closing of the upper bridge has meant considerable traffic to Coleman St. and Moira Street east by the routing of cars over the boundary bridge and the lower bridge.

Conditions however will not become anywhere nearly as marked as with the closing of the lower bridge in the midst of the tourist season, when a constant stream of cars poured over the Coleman Street.

LEVEL RAILWAY CROSSINGS

Motorists will watch with interest any movement made in this county to eliminate level crossings, particularly those on King's Highway No. 2. Throughout the country municipalities are taking steps to bring about the removal of these dangerous places. Municipalities which do not initiate efforts to secure aid in removal of these crossings will find themselves in a few years in the backwash of municipalities. The Department of Highways and the Federal Government are anxious to see the worst of the crossings wiped out first. Their plan is a consistent one which will steadily abolish places where motorists are likely to be run down.

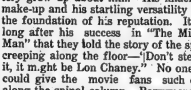
There are other level crossings not on the highways and care will in the long run have to be taken of these likewise for some of those on the sideroads are exceedingly dangerous though the traffic passing over them is light.

A MENACE

Some one placed a package of emery powder and cinders in the oil pump of an airplane at Toronto and it was by good fortune and by the level-headedness of the flier that he came to the ground without mishap.

The normal mind cannot conceive of such diabolism and offers the only explanation that the criminal may be a lunatic. Whoever it was should be locked away from human haunts for he is a menace where he be a maniac or a criminal.

THE CARNIVAL



Kiwanis Club members deserve the congratulation of the people of Belleville for their successful efforts in raising a fund for local philanthropic work and also for providing one week of entertainment. Amusements are not so many that the citizens could "pass up" the carnival which for low price admission and excellence of program ouldid almost anything ever attempted in this line.

The carnival which closed on Saturday evening has been a success. It has meant a great deal of work, those who worked night and day to make the event a success have the satisfaction of knowing that their work has already brought results in providing a good time and in laying up money for philanthropic and other prizes, in which the club is one of the most active organizations in the city.

THE LEGEND OF LON CHANEY

Chaney was not the usual spectacular press agent's firework. He was a resident of Hollywood who worked in motion pictures and made money, plenty of it, and knew what he could do and what was beyond his reach. In his contacts with the neighbors he was so reserved that a mystery grew up about him. His knack for make-up and his startling versatility were the foundation of his reputation. It was long after his success in "The Miracle Man" that they told the story of the spider creeping along the floor—"Don't step on it, it might be Lon Chaney." No one else could give the movie fans such chills along the spinal column. Barrymore was still Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," no matter what horrible grimaces and expressive claws he showed. Chaney was never Chaney in his pictures. He was the "phantom" of the opera, or the hunchback.

JOY

By Aline Michaelis

A shaking branch, and the bird was flown
I only saw a flash of blue,
I only heard a silver tone,
And the bird was gone before I knew.

Before I knew he was perched up high
On a branch of the rose in the arbor here,
He had soared far off into the sky,
The bird I sought that had been so near!

A shaking branch, a flash of wings,
And the bird of joy in the tree of life
On lifted pinions soars and sings
Away from weariness and strife.

How many an hour, how many a day
The bird has fluttered, singing, near
And even when it soars away
It leaves joy's golden echoes here!

BEGGARS ON HORSEBACK

Street begging is a $150,000,000 business in the United States alone, according to William F. McDermott, Chicago newspaper man writing in the September "Rotarian." Add to that the $100,000,000 collected by fake charity organization racketeers and you have a tidy quarter billion dollars that big-hearted American citizens give to charity panhandlers.

When four "legless" cripples in Chicago travelled to their posts by taxi, reports Mr. McDermott, they were arrested by police and found to have nearly $100 in their pockets—a half hour's profits. An Omaha "blind" pencil-seller was found to own a prosperous rooming house. University students have found panhandlers making as high as $200 a day, and a palsied New York subway specialist was discovered to have $40,000 in first mortgages.

Fake charity promoters know religion and "war relief" are sure-fire appeals. They know that few citizens will risk ridicule by checking-up on those who solicit in the name of religion and soldier-welfare.

THE CHERRY AND BEAUTY

Cherry ripe used to be a familiar phrase. Today the juice or oil or the cherry pit is found invaluable in the making of cosmetics.

The cherry was introduced by Lucullus into Europe after his defeat of the ruler Mithradates. Women of ancient Egypt took an interest in the cherry. Today after the discovery of the value of cherry pit oil as an ingredient of cosmetic preparations, modern women will also take an interest in the cherry.

Liquor Charge Is Dismissed by Court

Magistrate Mikel's Ruling in Interesting Storage Case

AS TO OWNERSHIP

The judgment of Magistrate Mikel on Saturday in finding Charles Buker, in charge of a storage plant, not guilty on a charge of illegal possession of liquor was as follows

In the police court of the City of Belleville. Before W. C. Mikel, K.C., Police Magistrate, September 12th, 1930. David Silvester vs. Charles Buker.

Charge—At the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, on the 19th day of June, A.D., 1930, did unlawfully, not having the permission of the Board have liquor, in his possession, other than native wine, not purchased from the Government Vendor, or from a physician, contrary to Section 72, subsection 2, of the Liquor Control Act.

Present—B. C. Donnan for prosecution; C. A. Payne, K.C., for accused.

Charge read to accused, who pleaded "Not Guilty."

JUDGMENT

The evidence in this case showed that the accused was in the employment of Graham's Cold Storage, and looked after the cold storage plant, into which are constructed railway sidings. That railway cars were placed on the siding containing a large number of cases of beer, which, it was stated, were to be transferred from the cars containing this beer into two other railway cars and that the siding was to be permitted to be used for this purpose. The accused stated that he was to be paid $25.00 for permitting this transfer to be made upon the siding.

Instead of the beer being transferred as above a truckman named Smith had the beer transferred into the warehouse of the cold storage plant and a direction issued by the office of the cold storage plant. An unascertained person who appeared to be in charge the beer went to the office of the cold storage plant and there procured a direction from the office to permit one thousand cases, described as canned goods, to be stored in the cold storage and paid the office $100 for this service.

On this order the cases of beer were placed in the cold storage plant by Smith. The accused, himself, did not handle any of the beer, nor was he present at the time the beer was placed there it was about the premises and knew that the beer was being placed therein. The accused knew that it was beer, or at all events, had a strong suspicion that it was beer. The accused did not assist in the unloading or placing the beer in the warehouse and did not have any of it in his possession personally.

I understand that in all cases the railway retains control over sidings. No written or printed rules regulating the placing of goods in the cold storage plant have been produced, but I conclude from the evidence that when a person places goods in the cold storage plant he pays for and occupies exclusively the space upon which the goods are placed, and that no one else can pile goods upon his goods or remove the goods to some other place, and that he has right of ingress and egress to this place and remove goods from time to time as he requires. The position of the depositor of the goods is, therefore, analagous to that of a tenant, although not the same in all respects. The provisions of the Criminal Code as to aiding and abetting do not apply in this case.

It is urged that the accused is guilty of the offence charged, because from what he has done he may be said to "have" liquor. Where an accused has neither touched, tasted nor handled liquor either by himself or an agent, nor has the right to do so, and the liquor is not upon premises of which he is either owner or tenant, he should not be convicted of "having" unless there is a definite enactment or decision of making him liable. The general rule of construction is that words are to be construed in their ordinary meaning. The meaning of "having" should not be stretched by a trial court to include a case where the accused neither tasted, handled nor touched the liquor and it was not in a place of which he was the owner or tenant.

Chief Justice Meredith in Rex vs. Cramer, 46, Ontario Law Reports, at page 23, holds, that a driver of a conveyance, who is driving a person whom he knows to have liquor illegally, would not be guilty of the offence, because the possession of the person actually having liquor in his parcel would not amount, in law, to "having" liquor by the driver of the vehicle. The principle laid down by Chief Justice Meredith appears to be applicable in this case.

"Possession," as to the Criminal Law and offences against Property has been thus defined:

"A movable thing is said to be in the possession of a person when he is so situated with respect to it that he has the power to deal with it as owner, to the exclusion of all other persons, and when the circumstances are such that he may be presumed to intend to do so in case of need." (Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, Vol. 3 (1903) page 1518).

It may be that the accused man permitted his employer to be misled as to the contents of the cases, but, of course, he is not being prosecuted for that act, nor would that fact constitute the offence of "having." He may have been influenced by the thought that he was doing a good stroke of business for his employer in earning for him $100.00.

In view of this general definite pronouncement as to the law, by Chief Justice Meredith, president of the Trial Division of the Supreme Court, I feel that I should find the accused not guilty.

(Sgd.) W. C. MIKEL,
Police Magistrate.

RAJAH MOOTED CUBS' MANAGER

Joe McCarthy May Succeed Shawkey as Yankee Pilot

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Warren Brown sport editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, said in a copyrighted story to-night that Rogers Hornsby was slated to become manager of the Chicago Cubs' baseball team next season.

The Cubs, Brown explained, almost have been eliminated from winning another championship this year under the leadership of Joe McCarthy.

"McCarthy and the other two principal figures in the Cubs' baseball fortunes, Owner William Wrigley, Jr., and President William Veeck, have agreed to disagree, though not one has made as yet, a definite statement to the others," said Brown's article.

"McCarthy's contract, a three-year one, comes to an end with the conclusion of this season. No mention has been made by the Cubs of any renewal of McCarthy's contract. As matters stand at present, both Wrigley and Veeck are ready to declare for Rogers Hornsby as the 1931 manager of the Cubs.

The story explained that although, Hornsby cost the Cubs $150,000 and five ball players, he had been the victim of so many "bad breaks" that his value to the team as a player this season had been "negligible."

"To business men such as the Cubs' directorate happens to be," the article continued, "Hornsby as a manager may still be worth that $130,000 and those five ball players, and his annual salary believed to be $87,500."

Chicago, Sept. 22.—William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, told the United Press to-night that he would wait until the close of the season before thinking about a manager for next year.

"Manager Joe McCarthy has a contract which runs until Jan. 1," he said. "We will not hire a new manager, Rogers Hornsby or anyone else, until we have discussed the situation with McCarthy.

"We do not know whether he wants to come back with us next year, or how much money he wants, but we will make no decision until we talk with him."

"McCarthy has been an excellent manager, there has been no friction between the baseball and the Cubs' management has authorized no statement saying that he will be replaced next year."

Ruppert Surprised

New York, Sept. 22.—Reports that Joe McCarthy, manager of the Chicago Cubs was under consideration as manager of the New York Yankees at the termination of his contract with the National League Club this season were received with surprise by Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, at his home at Garrison, N.Y., tonight.

"I only talked to McCarthy once in my life," said Ruppert, "and that was a long time ago."

Asked if Bob Shawkey would be retained as manager of the Yankees, Ruppert said:

"I haven't made up my mind yet whether I will retain Shawkey or not at the close of the present season."

Ruppert indicated that if McCarthy was free to decline, he might be interested in him if he decided to change the Yanks' manager.

RALLY WON FOR CHICAGO CUBS

Boston, Sept. 22.—The Chicago Cubs came through with a ninth inning rally yesterday afternoon to beat the Boston Braves 4 to 3. Ben Cantwell who pitched well for the Braves held the Cubs runless for the first five innings, allowing them only two hits but in the sixth they scored twice on a triple by Blair and a single by English and Cuyler's double.

During the next two innings they were unable to do anything but in the ninth Hlathcote singled to open the inning and Hartnett smashed out his 34th home run of the season to put them in the lead.

The Braves made one run in the first on singles by Richbourg, Berger and Clark and counted again in the fourth on singles by Sophner and a single by Cantwell. In the ninth Spoh opened up the inning with a long double but the appearance of two pinch hitters were notable to help him beyond third base.

Mack Wilson was unable to strengthen his batting average, let alone collect any more home runs.

SUDDEN DEATH GAME HALTED

Rain Causes Postponement of Match Until Today

The sudden death game between Arahs of Oshawa and C.O.E. of Peterboro scheduled for Port Hope on Sunday afternoon was not played on account of rain. The first innings was nearly concluded, when the slight drizzle that had been falling all the afternoon turned into a downpour. Ken Colling and Walter Gerow of this city who were handling the game called it off and the managers of the two teams met afterwards and decided to play on Monday afternoon at the same hour. When the game was called neither team had scored. Arahs of Oshawa won the toss and took the field first. Ray Rose of the C.O.E. who subdued the Arahs in their game at Peterboro was sent back at the invaders and looked impressive in the innings he worked. The winners of this game will meet Ingersoll in the final, the first game to be played Wednesday in Ingersoll.

BRITTON'S HOMER WON FOR SAINTS

Bell Telephone, Conquerors of Nationals, Lost to Rivals

TORONTO, Ont. September 22. —"Chubs" Britton's home run in the tenth innings gave St. George's the victory 10 to 9. over the Bell Telephone, on Saturday afternoon, at Cowboy Park, in the first of a two game series in the O.B.A.A. semi-finals. One of the largest crowds ever to see a ball game at Cowboy Park was present and was given plenty of thrills before the game was over.

St. George's started off as if they were going to make a runaway, scoring six runs in the first inning and one in the second. Bells kept fighting and tied up the game in the fifth with seven runs. Scott's homer put Bells one up in the seventh—but St. George's tied it up again in the eighth on hits by Levinsky and Britton and Stuart's infield out.

Moffatt Goes DiMaee

Ranson started out for St. George's and went well until the fifth when he had to be relieved by Cook, who pitch ed good ball. Moffatt went the distance for Bells. Britton, besides winning the game with his homer, had two singles, which figured in the scoring. Buchanan was St. George's other good hitter with three singles and Harry Sniderman, Levinsky and Stuart all got two hits each. For Bells, Moffatt was the only batter to get two hits, Batstone had a double which drove in two runs.

The fielding was excellent on both sides with St. George's pulling two double plays and Bells one. Dick Greer was the outstanding fielder with ten chances handled while Stuart, Clark and Scott were prominent with their defensive play.

Radio Fans Corner

Reception last night was nearly perfect wasn't it fans? Yes sir we couldn't ask for anything better than we had last night. The programs were mighty good too and it was a treat to listen to them.

I've been wondering of late whatever became of Billy Hillpot and Scrappy Lambert and last night Graham McNamee answered my question in the columns of a Toronto newspaper. Scrappy and Billy it appears have been playing baseball though it may be temporary but the fact remains they are no longer on the air together to different programs in fact, Scrappy have also changed their names, bound to make a fresh start, weren't they? Scrappy has taken his first name and brought it into the limelight, "Rodney" and is leading an orchestra and Billy now one of the leaders of a big program has changed his last name to Hughes. Don't forget to say "hello" if you run across them after this.

At 7.30 EST from WEAF the A and O Gypsies and at 8.30 EST same station, General Motor's Family Party. This program's orchestra is under the direction of Frank Black so it should be more than good. Don't forget the time and place.

Sign of the Shell from WEAF also tonight starting sharp at 9.30 EST. Wendell Hall, tenor and narrator, is featured and a splendid orchestra. Phil Spitalny and his music comes immediately after from WEAF of course, a program that none of us will miss if we can possibly help it.

Roxy and his Gang from WJZ tonight at 8.30 EST and at 9 EST the Maytag orchestra with Marion Keelser, contralto, as guest artist and then of course the orchestra, Paul Folks following closely and goodness know what they're up to in Cheeseborough tonight, we'll just have to go and see.

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A vermifuge that can be depended on is Mother's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that bewi infants sufeebiner them and endangering their lives.

"Dick Diamond" Rides Over 60,000 Miles All Over World To Health

Shot at by Rebels in Mexico Bicyclist Escapes Scotfree

SCRAPBOOK'S STORY

On Fifth Bicycle Used on Fifth Lap of World Reaches City

"What would you do if you were given six months to live by your doctor?"

That isn't what "Happy" Dick Diamond did. In 1922 he a pasty-faced kid suffering from the dread "White Plague" and lying in a Los Angeles Hospital. How many of us who long to be nomads wandering over the face of the earth, would do as this sixteen year old youngster did. Since that time he has travelled over sixty thousand miles through forty states and eight provinces of Canada, West Indies, Argentina, Brazil, Japan, Panama, France, Belgium, Asia, North Africa and the British Isles. He spent the week end in Belleville where he made a number of new friends. A little young man sun-tanned from many climes he bears no appearances now, that would lead one to believe that he is suffering from tuberculosis. As a matter of fact he is not. He started with a worldly capital consisting of a banjo, a bicycle and fifty cents in cash, in search of health and adventure.

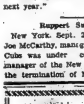
"Happy" Dick Diamond is no world made wise youth, the pampas of Argentina, the winding road and quaint peasants of France and Belgium, seem wonderful to him even in retrospect.

Shot at by rebels in Mexico, surreptitiously sitting in the very chair which George Washington occupied are among the treasured experiences of the young cyclist. His list has been a long one but it has been studded with a few unfortunate experiences, one of which was an accident in the state of Texas when he was a patient in San Antonio Hospital.

"Happy" Dick is not too egotistic concerning his travels. His several scrap books tell a vivid story of his adventures. Pictures portray him making friends with Babe Ruth, a Yanqui Indian Chief in Mexico and Grover Cleveland Alexander the famous base ball pitcher. Among other celebrities who have autographed his book are Lou Gehrig, Bob Mostet, Texas Guinan and the Governors of the different States and the Premiers of Ontario. The scrap book which contains stories from different newspapers all over the world, forms the basis for a book which "Happy" Dick has written, the manuscript of which will be in the hands of the New York Publishers in November of this year.

On his fifth bicycle and his third lap of the world, he pedalled into Belleville on Saturday. Today found him on the road again bound for Ottawa, Montreal, Panama, Australia, and South Africa. He has been on the road eight years and expects to make it twelve before he quits.

"Happy" Dick Diamond is small and slight of form, soft of voice laconic of speech and wary of aspect. His health certainly justifies his nickname. He has been a guest during his life-time of the movie stars at Hollywood where he spent some time watching pictures in the course of preparation for the silver screen.



He wears a helmet dotted with mementoes from every corner of the world, and is clad in a dark khaki outfit. He informed an Ontario Intelligencer scribe that he does most of his travelling at night when he finds he can make much better time. On particularly cloudy or stormy nights he is guided by a carbide lamp. He averages from forty to fifty miles at a stretch but plans his itinerary to stop at the most important cities and towns along the way. He has worn out five bicycles and his record accclaims not a single flaw. He has travelled across the continent twice.

In his quest for health and happiness he meets expenses by lecturing and playing the banjo for radio audiences. He is not slow to accept proffered invitations to dinner and he states that Canadians are among the most hospitable people in the world, in this respect.

Water is the only thing that stops "Happy" Dick Diamond. The space for luggage on the rear of the bike is more or less limited, and he carries only the bare necessities to keep him on the move. He nearly met his fate in the Mojave Desert when he searched frantically for over forty hours for water, after he found one of the cans completely dried up. He has threshed wheat in the West and worked at the lumber trade in British Columbia, but travelling is his favorite occupation and he hopes to stick at it for four more years, when he plans to retire, he knows not where.

He is the only man who has travelled across the country on a bike. He has arranged a contract with the Canada Cycle and Auto Coy to travel from Halifax to Vancouver in 1932. His book may be obtained by writing to "Happy" Dick Diamond, General Delivery, Ottawa, Ontario.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE
REPATRIATIONS

Pursuant to a notice that appeared in the Press, dated the 18th day of November, 1918, asking those of the civil population of Canada, who may have been subjected to loss and peculiar hardship arising from the destruction of life and property during the late war through the illegal warfare of the enemy, to file claims for compensation under this Department.

Public notice is hereby given that by an Order of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, dated the 6th day of September, 1930, the undersigned Commissioner was appointed for the purpose of continuing and completing an enquiry and reporting upon, all such claims, which have not heretofore been disposed of by the report of the previous Reparation Commissioner, dated the 14th day of December, 1927.

Instruction respecting the method of filing and the forms to be furnished may be obtained from the undersigned.

The last day on which claims will be accepted for consideration is the 1st day of December 1930.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

"Sonia," he said presently, "does this mean that you love me, too?"

She withdrew herself from his embrace and lowered gracefully. "I'm afraid not, Joe."

"Well, you're the queerest girl I ever saw. What does it mean, then?"

She said regretfully, "I'm afraid it just meant we shouldn't have been interrupted the night you first kissed me."

It took him only a few moments to take her home after that. Sonia, for the first secret, permitted him to drive her up to her own door, although she fully expected her father to come out and order Joe from the place. But Sam Marsh did not appear, and Joe drove away, his face contorted in a frown of resentment. Sonia was really afraid.

"I don't see why he should insist on taking it seriously," she thought. The memory of her own emotions was not reassuring. She had kissed Joe again, after all that had been said, and all she had promised.

"I'm afraid I'm awfully careful when I get to Chicago," she resolved. "Every thing will be so different there. Joe is just one man I've known all my life. I'll be awfully careful."

As she went through the living room she found her mother putting the last touches on the green chintz that Sonia ventured, "Mother's father? Did he come early? He said he would."

"In 'proxy room strapping 'your cloak," muttered her mother with a mouth full of pins. "Sonia, my pincushion."

"Thank heaven, I'll not hear that any more. I thought Sonia on her knees searching for it.

When she opened her bedroom door she was sure her father crying over an old red hood which had tumbled from a drawer.

"Why, it seems only yesterday you wore it — "

Several hours later, a bus of voices as the train moved out of the station Sonia's father and mother, a last glimpse of those suddenly dear faces, and the beating like a tomtom in Sonia's breast.

INSTALMENT V

The train from Muncie to Chicago carried one passenger who did not close her eyes. Miss the sensations of her first night on a train? Her first night away from home? Her first taste of freedom? Not Sonia, who gloated over each new experience life had to offer. Yet when she came to write next morning the eyes that met hers in the mirror were clear and unwear ied. "I'm 17" she whispered. "All my life's ahead of me."

She was alone. approaching a strange city. Yet, unconscious of loneliness, it was the beauty of life as she saw it, before her which had brought tears.

Joe, she was carried along with the crowd out into the street, impressions ceased to register. She became an automaton, a puppet pulled by strings. Her instructions to go to the Y.W. were not to be ignored. But she took the room they gave her with mental reservations. She had no intention of remaining there for long. "Until you get your bearings," Don had said. Just now she was grateful for the immediate shelter.

At precisely 11 o'clock she was on, tering the offices of the Thomas Real Estate Company, asking in rather subdued voice for "Mr. Thomas, please!"

She was directed to an inner office. After waiting almost an hour she was received.

Jed Thomas was not unkind, but the interview left Sonia chilled. An atmosphere of dignified frigidity was preserved throughout.

Thomas asked a question or two about her mother and father, admitted decorously, the reply he had made to his nephew's request for a position for her: believed there was, indeed, an opening in the bookkeeping department. If Miss Marsh wished to ask any questions, Miss LaRue, who was head of that department, would be glad to answer them.

He pressed a button.

"Miss LaRue, this is Miss Sonia Marsh. You take care of her, will you?"

A forced smile and the interview was at an end.

Sonia, waiting in panic behind her conductor was conscious of cold scrutiny from various eyes, which stared impersonally from desks and typewriters. The atmosphere seemed weighted with ominous forebodings. She would have liked to scream. Instead she followed, stiffly, in Miss LaRue's high, heeled footsteps, behind the typewriters, up the stairs and into a balcony filled ll seemed to Sonia, with girls.

Miss LaRue was ten years older than Sonia, but she was far from showing it. Sonia was tremendously impressed at first by her air of authority, which went so strangely with the knot of blond hair and soft blue eyes. She was told to: Her instructions were firm, but she good-naturedly explained anything that the girls did not understand. Sonia found, in spite of her bashful self, that there was a vast difference between training and practical application. She was annoyed by the curious stares the other girls gave her. But she held her head high and made no bids for any one's friendship.

At 1 o'clock, disdaining to ask for information, she wandered up Dearborn street until she found a restaurant. But her hands trembled as she lifted her glass of milk.

"So th's Chicago. ....." A hard stool in a corner of a crowded lunchcounty with strange girls whose eyes were unkind.

Sonia closed her mouth grimly.

"You wanted to come. This is only the first day. What did you expect? A brass band at the train to welcome you?"

Leaving her sandwich untasted, she paid her check and strolled, aloof to the point of insolence, down Dearborn street, back into the office and back to her place.

By 4 o'clock her head was throbbing. Figures tumbled like clowns in a circus. Sonia had never been told today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

Chronic Bronchitis

is quickly and safely relieved by Templeton's prescription RAZ-MAH. Mr. H. Trimmer, Enrich, Ont., writes: "I used your RAZ-MAH and RAZ-MAH that he bought at $1.00 box, and, as always, under guarantee of relief or money back. Now he always uses RAZ-MAH when he has an attack. Says: "I usually work the attack off in a few days. Then one dose for a year or so without another." RAZ-MAH is also wonderful for Asthma. At your druggist's.

RAZ-MAH

fore the mirror, she smoked without touching the cigarette with her fingers, letting it dangle loosely from her lips.

Ten minutes later she was back on the balcony.

At 5 o'clock, when she put on her hat to fly to the protection of her four walls she had not been addressed by one person except Maxine LaRue.

In bed, without food, an atom in a sea of humanity traffic roaring out, she lay wide awake. Sonia closed her eyes.

Picture scene to her, events of the two weeks since her graduation. Joe's kiss in the dark at Sidney's party. Tom Gilchrist's proposal, which he had retracted the day she came away. The delicate flavor of her conversation with Don Ramsay. Her mother's shaded library. Then the day she had passed working for her sister. Poor Vera, who had insisted that Sonia could not understand marriage. "And may the day never come," murmured Sonia, "when I can understand one like here."

HER PAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village (Special) Sept. 22 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

TWO QUALITIES -- RED LABEL & ORANGE PEKOE

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING

BY

LUCILLE

Dear Readers:

Longer skirts slender fitted lines are the theme song of Fashion for 1930, but this year the styles are more feminine and the woman who dieted last year, will be able to have a holiday this season. The terribly thin figure is passe, and curves are again popular. How the present styles affect the figure and features of miladi are discussed in the following item from New York.

"According to a dispatch from Washington, the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists have decreed that special eyebrows must be worn this year to conform with the new hats. This strikes us as wrong in principle and disastrous in practice, says the New York World. The proper method of protecting beauty, in our opinion, is first to study the characteristics of the lady to be beautified, her hair, her eyes, her complexion, her eyebrows, her figure, etc., and then to select the mode that reveals these to best advantage.

"The ordinary practice, however, is exactly opposite to this: first to select the mode that she must wear and then to alter her characteristics so that they reveal it to best advantage. If her hair is too long, it must be cut; if her eyes are fringed with short lashes, they must be treated with brilliantine; if her complexion is too light, it must be darkened with tan powder; if her eyebrows are too thick they must be plucked and penciled; if her figure is too full, it must be reduced.

"The first result of this is that all women tend to look alike; one observes almost nothing properly describable as individuality in style. The next result of it is to condemn most women to intermittent periods of profound unhappiness. The woman who was created last year because she could wear the slim styles then in vogue is downhearted this year because she looks scrawny in fluffy things; the woman who is delighted with the long skirts this year because they conceal a somewhat dubious pair of legs practically took the veil last year because her legs were on view even above the knees"

Fashionably yours,

LUCILLE.

SCHOLARSHIP AT QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

Miss Margaret Chant, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Chant, has been awarded the Day Memorial Scholarship at Queen's University. It was announced today. Miss Chant is a graduate of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. She leaves today, to begin studies at Queen's.

The Kiwanis Club Thanks You

The 1930 Kiwanis Karnival has passed into history and the Kiwanis Club - wishes to thank most heartily every one who helped in any way to make it the decided success that it was. It takes the united effort of so many people to successfully "put over" an effort of this magnitude that individual "thanks" is impossible, and we simply take this medium of again saying, "Thanks to all for your co-operation and patronage."

Today's Verse

THE ARTIST

The sky at dawn is sullen-gray,
An artist comes to make it gay.
He flings his magic ladders tall
Against the gray and sombre wall.
His one huge eye of flaming light
Knows color that is wondrous bright.
He climbs and climbs and brushes bold
Till all the gray is burnished gold!

WEDDINGS

REPLOGLE—WALLBRIDGE

TORONTO, Ont., September 22. — The marriage of Miss Muriel Miller Wallbridge, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Wallbridge, of Madoc, and granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs Thomas Campbell Wallbridge, of Belleville, to Mr. Lyle Ellis Replogle of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmore Lyle Replogle of Yellow Creek, Pa., took place Saturday afternoon in St. Paul's Anglican Church, with Rev. Canon Cody officiating. The church was decorated with palms and gladioli in pastel shades, and Dr. Crawford played wedding music. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and she wore a gown of white satin, made on long lines, with long tight sleeves. Her bridal veil of Brussels lace net was worn by her great-grandmother, and it was caught at the back of her head by a wreath of orange blossoms which was worn by her grand-mother at her own wedding. Her only ornament was a diamond and pearl brooch, the gift of her mother, and she carried a shower of sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley. Mrs. Portier of Buffalo was matron of honor, wearing a peach rose frock of blush pink georgette, with velvet hat of a soft blue shade, and blue shoes. Her flowers were garden iris roses and blue larkspur. The best man was Mr. Carl Merkel of New York, and the ushers were Mr. Arthur Hall and Mr. Campbell Lewis Wallbridge, brother of the bride. A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. A. H. Chase 5 Admiral Road. White and pink asters were used to decorate the rooms, and the bride's table was centred with a large white cake on which were little clusters of lily-of-the-valley. Tall candles in silverholders lighted the room. Mrs Chase also wore blue, and the bridal party, wore a becoming gown of pale blue lace. with black velvet hat and carried a bouquet of pale pink roses. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Replogle left for their wedding trip, and on their return will live in New York.

IS ART TO HAVE A TYRANT?

IF the Robot can make us music of himself, he can and does arrest the efforts of those who can.

Measure mean nothing to this monstrous offspring of modern industrialism, as the crowds in Times Square and at the theatre bear witness.

Though "canned" music has charms to the unsophisticated, the better ears will hear a haunted wail, as if man's genius is opposed the Robot of Canned Music. Only the theatre going public can do them.

Hence the activities of the Music Defense League in the theatre, and Lyric Theatre, New York.

Every theatre of artistic pretensions, every lover of Art from Schoolmarm to Star, read and the coupon.

OBITUARY

MRS. CARRIE ETTA APPLEBY

Mrs. Carrie Etta Dawkins, wife of William Appleby, London, Ontario, passed away in the Hamilton General Hospital on Sunday, September 21st. The deceased, who had been ill for but a short time was a daughter of Mrs. John Dawkins and the late John Dawkins, of this city.

She is survived by her mother, her husband, Wm. Appleby, London, two sisters, Mrs. James G. Calloway, of this city and Mrs. Ed. Fleming, Wintipeg, and six brothers, John Dawkins, New York; Ernest Dawkins, Toronto; Sidney Dawkins, Belleville; Wallace Dawkins, Minneapolis; Lloyd Dawkins, Los Angeles and Harold Dawkins, of Seattle, Washington.

The late Mrs. Appleby was a member of the United Church. She has been visiting her mother and brother and sisted in Belleville but a short 3 weeks ago. Her passing will be mourned by many friends in both London and Belleville.

She will be laid to rest in Belleville Cemetery.

LATE MRS. SARAH A. PHILP

All that was mortal of the late Mrs. Sarah Anne Philp, widow of the late Joseph Philp was laid to rest on Saturday afternoon in the Belleville cemetery in the family plot. An impressive service was held at the home of her son, Mr. William J. Philp, 45 Herchimer Street by the Rev. A. H. Jones of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, who paid tribute to the life and character of the late Mrs. Philp. He told of her devotion to her family and of her many fine qualities of mind and heart.

Attending the obsequies were many friends to pay the farewell tribute of respect to one who was well and favorably known.

The bearers were Messrs. George Mossman; James Lynch, Walter Symons, J. Canning, Desmond Philp and R. Davis.

JOSEPH CANDON

The funeral of the late Joseph Candon took place from his late residence, Tyendinaga, yesterday, Interment was, ing, to St. Charles Church, Read, where Father McCarthy conducted the services. The funeral was very largely attended and interment was in St. Charles cemetery, Read. The bearers were Dennis Cillory, William Powers, J. Hunt, Dennis Callaghan, Jos. Foresfall and Timothy Murphy.

Tired and Rundown

"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was always feeling tired, weak and rundown and I worried over things. After taking the Compound that feeling has left me. I can work now and feel good to tend to my wash and take care of my house and three children. I eat and sleep better, in fact I feel better in every way. I will answer letters from interested women at any time."—Mrs. H. C. Fletcher, 127 Smith St., Peterboro, Ontario.

Miss Ann Schuster Wins Lazier Cup

Miss Ann Schuster, daughter of W. E. Schuster, of this city, has been most successful in the Bay of Quinte Country Club tournaments this year. Miss Schuster, who is a popular member of the younger social set of this city, carried off the William Lazier cup, one of the most coveted of trophies, by defeating Mrs. A. P. Allen in the final match.

Not only did she win the Lazier cup but she was also first in the ladies' section for the Graham Cup, defeating Mrs. Jack Fisher to win.

CANNIFTON WINS AT SHANNONVILLE

A team from Canniflon lifted the baseball championship from a picked aggregation representing Shannonville at the "World's Fair" on Saturday afternoon. Smallhorn and Bush pitched for the winners, who took the game 16-7. It was due to Bush's stellar hurling that Canniflon won in such a handy fashion. G. Osborne did the twirling for Shannonville. Here is the line-up of the two teams—Canniflon—Pitchers, Smallhorn and Bush; Blaker first; Martin second Williams, Uyrd; Lockets, ss; Sullivan C., right field Smallhorn and Bush (each playing in the field while the other pitched) and left field. White, Catcher Webb.

Shannonville—Catcher Carson Bratston; pitcher, G. Osborne; first H. Osborne; second J. Fitzgerald; ss, K. Juby; third C. Milligan; centre field, B. Fyfe; right field, R. Houston and right field R. Doherty.

Time has Tested It — Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has been on the market for upwards of fifty years and in that time it has proved a blessing to thousands. It is in high favor throughout Canada and in no excellent has carried in fame beyond the seas. If it were double the price it would be a cheap liniment.

Shannonville Exhibition Has Entries From Far and Near

W. F. Ostrom of this City, Carries Off Many Prizes

HORSE RACES

Ball Game and Trotting Races are Stellar Attractions of Afternoon

It is only open for one day, but nevertheless it is, the World's Fair Shannonville was certainly en fete on Saturday last on the occasion of its annual exhibition. For just this one day in the year the hamlet of Shannonville presents a decidedly busy appearance. There was even the beer of a traffic "cop" for the whole afternoon, to direct the traffic to the fair grounds and prevent smash-up.

Shannonville may have only one building in which to display its produce but that building was certainly packed to the doors. There are sixty-seven members of the Shannonville Fair Association and a great majority of those exhibited.

It is pleasing to Belleville people to note that W. F. Ostrom of this city succeeded in carrying off a good share of the prizes, Mr. Ostrom was not satisfied in winning in one division, but took first, seconds, and thirds in grain and seeds, flowers, dairy produce, livestock in fact in every section of the fair.

The races were the greatest drawing card. The free for all was the best race of the day with Mr. Penalty owned in Napanee, winning from Dick Sunday owned by Tom McCracken of Trenton, after five hard heats had been raced. The Trenton horse won the first two heats but Mr. Penalty was always in close attendance. The clip was not fast and when the Sunday horse tired, Mr. Penalty came on to outbrush the chestnut in the third three heats. Frisco May owned in Frankford accounted for the 2.34 class in straight heats, while two-year-old by Joe Vanest of Trenton, was easily the best in the slow class. It was the last racing that Shannonville fair crowds have watched in some years. The summary follows:

Free for all

Pile Sufferers

You can only get quick and permanent relief by removing the cause congestion of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Nothing but an internal medicine can do this —that's why cutting and salves fail. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1000 patients with success in 960 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. Druggists everywhere now sell it, and J. S. McKeown guarantees money-back if HEM-ROID does not end Piles in any form.

FROM MOTHER OF EIGHTEEN

Read How This Medicine Helps Her

Cardston, Alberta—"I am fifty-eight years old and the mother of eighteen living children. We live on a farm and I am a very busy lady. My mother considering that I have such a big family, so I work for. The druggist first told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have depended on it for many years. When I had this pleasant baby, the druggist here was telling me about his whole life. The Vegetable Compound he sent to the drug store and bought her a bottle. "Men love cheerful colours! Your home chorus colors curtains, cushions, slip covers, lampshades, table linens, all are so lovely and fresh in colour as new."

Sample washed 12 times in Lux, fresh, vital—the colour has all the thrill of new.

Sample washed 12 times with ordinary "good" soap—undeniably faded, lacking colour charm.

"Let your surroundings reflect YOU"

HIS wife—his home! How closely bound together, in YOUR HUSBAND'S mind.

Busy . . . making money for his family, his loved ones . . . that man of yours always carries in his mind's eye . . . a PICTURE.

You are the centre of the picture—its frame is YOUR HOME.

Does your home express the charm of your own dainty femininity—does it reflect YOU—to your husband? IT CAN! There is one charm which every home, no matter how simple, can have.

The charm of fresh, vibrant colour!

Men Love Colour

Men LOVE cheerful colour, my dears. Just as you yourself attract when your little house frocks, your dainty blouses, your printed silks, are gaily COLOURFUL, so your home charms when curtains, cushions, slip covers, table linens, spreads, all are lovely and fresh in colour.

But, women ask me, "How can we keep these pretty fabrics lovely looking in spite of frequent washing? So often they fade all too quickly."

It is true that just ordinary "good" soaps do take out some of the colour along with the dirt. But this will not be the case if you wash them always in Lux.

Lux is made especially to keep colours instantly alive, to preserve the soft, dainty tones of sheer fabrics.

And not only for coloured things, but also for the many white linens and bath curtains about your house, is Lux invaluable.

The extra daintiness and freshness that comes from the use of Lux, the loveliness of texture and the saving of white things from unsightly yellowing, are truly remarkable.

Correct Manners

Who Pays for the Bride's Bouquet?

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it a custom for the best man to pay for the bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets? S.

No, indeed, it is not. The position of best man is one of honor, not of "financial responsibility." The groom always sends the bridal bouquet to his bride, and either the bride's parents or the groom sends the bouquets to the bridal attendants.

Table Silver Arrangement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should the arrangement of the forks for a dinner table be such that one starts at the inside, working outward, or vice versa?

Interested.

"Vice versa!" The silver places should be placed on the table in the order in which they are to be used—so that the last one used is the one nearest the plate. "Begin at the outside and work toward the plate" is the usual slogan to remember. That is why the oyster fork is farthest from the plate on the right of the plate, and the soup spoon next, then the entree or fish knife, then the dinner knife or meat knife, nearest the plate. On the left-hand noises or catarrhal deafness, but side of the plate are, first that fork (farthest from the plate) the entree or fish fork, then the dinner fork, and then the salad fork. The utensils for the dessert course (spoon only, or spoon and fork or knife and fork) are usually brought in with the dessert.

A Gift of Friendliness and Welcome

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When the family of the groom to be for the first time, visit the bride to be and her family, do they have to take a gift?

M. T.

No. The only gift they bring is the gift of friendliness and welcome into their family.

Parties Can't Own Carfare

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day I was going down town and my employer's son, who works at the office, also was going. Was it right for me to expect him to pay my carfare? No, it was not correct for you to "expect" that he should pay your fare. Indeed it would have been the best form if you would have taken for granted that you were to pay your own fare. Unless a gift has been invited by a gentleman to accompany him to a certain place or to certain entertainment, she should take it for granted that she pays her own fare.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore if you know of someone who is troubled with full this paragraph and hand it to them, and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer, perhaps from total deafness. This medicine can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist a 1 oz. bottle of Parmint (Double Strength) Take this home, and add to it 1-4 pt. of hot water and a little sugar, stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and this to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective. Every person who has catarrh or anything from should give this preparation a trial.

THREE SERIOUSLY INJURED IN CRASH

Former Belleville Woman Accidentally Killed at Sault Ste. Marie

EXPECT FILTER COMPLETE EARLY AFTER NEW YEAR

City Likely to Take Over Big Plant in January or February

ON SECOND FLOOR

Settling Basin Forms in and Pouring Half Completed

Ideal weather conditions have materially aided the Patterson Construction Company in rushing to completion the new filtration plant and it is expected if no setbacks are encountered the finished work will be turned over to the city shortly after the first of the new year. When complete Belleville will have one of the most up-to-date purification plants on the American Continent and residents will always be assured of pure and clean drinking water. A reporter from The Ontario Intelligencer had the privilege of being shown over the work today by Mr. Harry Perry, superintendent in charge for the construction company and came away marvelling at the intricate work that is being done. On the job are a qualified engineer from the consulting firm of Goss, Wasmith and Sturtis and an inspector, who has charge of the work done by the construction company. Seventy five men, have been employed at this job practically since it started and as the work progresses more help will be required, which will considerably help the unemployment situation in the city during the winter months.

Steam Pile Forms

When the press visited the plant today carpenters were busy completing the forms for the second floor of the reservoir and it is expected that on Thursday or Friday the cement will be poured. This work must be continuous and it is thought at least three days will be required for the pouring. The mixing chamber forms have been erected and the cement will be poured in a few days. The settling basin forms are all in and over one half has been poured. In the reservoir the beams, columns and tubes are practically finished and ready to be poured.

It is useless to try and describe the many courses that the water takes from the time it is pumped into the filtration plant until it is delivered to the consumer. The whole plant being constructed is one huge machine and as it is a general expenditure of the citizens' money, it would be well to pay the new plant a visit.

HORNSBY MANAGES CHICAGO CUBS TEAM

Chicago, Sept. 23—(CP)—The Tribune in a copyright story today said William Wrigley, Jr., had announced Rogers Hornsby would be appointed to manage the Chicago Cubs, National League team, for the season of 1931, and possibly longer. Wrigley had no misunderstanding with Joe McCarthy, present manager.

Mrs. Roy Clarke Shot Dead Accidentally By Child at Soo Today

Wife of Former Provincial Police Sergeant, is Instantly Killed — News Reaches City in Telephone Message from Sault Ste. Marie

Word was received in the city shortly after the lunch hour today that Mrs. Roy Clarke, of Sault Ste. Marie and formerly of Belleville, was accidentally shot dead by one of her children this morning about ten o'clock. She died instantly, the bullet piercing her heart.

The meagre information was contained in a telephone message to Mr. Fred Wiggins, 56 Moira Street west, from William Ireland, of the Soo. Mr. Ireland did not give any particulars, stating that Mrs. Clarke was working about the home when the revolver was discharged.

Many expressions of regret were voiced here today when news of the unfortunate fatality was received. Mrs. Clarke was a resident of Belleville for some years when her husband was Sergeant of the headquarters staff of the Provincial Police. Before her marriage her name was Lou Elliott and she was born in the town of Renfrew where her parents reside. The family afterwards lived in Northern Ontario, coming to Belleville about five years ago. Last year Mr. Clarke severed his connections with the Provincial Police and became partner in a trading business at Sault Ste Marie. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clarke had a legion of friends here. The former was a member of the Y's Men's Club and was prominently connected with sports. Mrs. Clarke's kindly and pleasant disposition won for her many acquaintances. The family attended the United Church. Besides her husband she is survived by six small children, Douglas, Thomas, Patsy, Bruce, Stewart and Tait. The late Mrs. Clarke was thirty-seven years of age.

It is presumed that the revolver was one used by Mr. Clarke and that one of the younger children secured it unknown to the mother. Burial will probably be made at Renfrew, her former home.

How Accident Occurred

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. Sept. 23—(CP)—Mrs. M. H. Clarke, 37 years of age, wife of former Provincial Constable "Roy" Clarke, was almost instantly killed this morning, when she was accidentally shot with a .22 calibre revolver by her three year old son Bruce, at the family home.

The shooting was purely accidental. The child with the other members of the family ranging up to thirteen years of age, was found at the arms and there were several other weapons in the house. On Saturday, Mr. Clirke said following the fatal accident, he had taken Mrs. Clarke out into the country, to give her some instructions in using the small weapon.

Car Sideswipes Three Men are Badly Injured One Expected to Die

Ottawa Iron Works Employees Were Going to Kingston to do Iron Work —Were Passing Another Car at Time at Gananoque.

GANANOQUE, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP)—Three men members of a party of five, driving from Ottawa to Kingston, were seriously injured, one of them possibly fatally when in attempting to pass another car this morning, they sideswiped it and their coupe was forced into the ditch.

Dick Oliver is seriously injured and not expected to live with Max Ballor head of the Ottawa Iron Works and owner of the car and Percy Laughey, are badly injured. Walter Wilkinson and Anton Topp who were driving were uninjured. The injured were rushed to Kingston Hospital.

The party was enroute to Kingston to do some iron work and the accident occurred at the east end of the town on the provincial highway.

REVOLUTION IN CHILE IS QUITE SERIOUS

MENDOZA, Argentina, Sept. 23—(CP)—Hundreds of persons are under arrest in Southern Chile in the government's attempt to suppress entirely the revolutionary movement which developed Sunday, at Concepcion, the third city of the republic. While official advices indicated the situation was well in hand unofficial reports per, sisted the situation was far more serious than represented.

STOCK MARKETS

Market Summary and Quotations by Jamieson Bone and Company.

New York staged substantial rally today, but grain markets were weak, wheat receding a further two points to the lowest price in a generation. The selling looks to be overdone in wheat, but the Russian situation is obscure. The whole trouble with wheat, copper, coffee etc. is the relief from attempts at price stabilization last year. Mines were irregular. Quotations at 2.30 were:

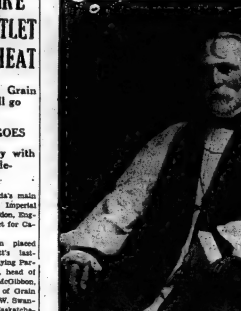
BENNETT WILL ASSIST IN PROBE

Chicago, Sept. 22—Canada and Great Britain have evinced deep concern in the Chicago Board of Trade investigation into charges of attempted manipulation of the grain market by Soviet Russia, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, of the Dominion Government has offered any assistance it could give to the United States Farm Board in its inquiry into the charge that Russian selling has brought about the recent decline in grains.



"LEGS" DIAMOND JUST CAN'T FIND A HOME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23. —Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York gangster, recently deported from Georgia, arrived here yesterday and was ordered by police to leave the city.

BUILD BOARD WALK ACROSS RIVER DAM

Owing to the building of a new upper bridge the old structure is being rapidly demolished. For the convenience of pedestrians a temporary board walk is being constructed across the river just above what is known as Cooper's dam. At this point the water in the river is exceptionally low, thus causing no inconvenience to the workmen engaged in construction work. The action of the City Council in providing this walk is much appreciated by citizens in that section of the city, who desire to reach Front street.

Fifty Men at Work Dismantle Bridge

Reporter Took Look at Old Steel Showing Flaws

100 P. C. LOCAL LABOR

One End of Old Bridge Has Disappeared Already

Favoured with splendid weather which looks as though it might continue for some time, the Holderoft Company is bending every effort on Belleville's new upper bridge in place in record time. There are two shifts working, night and day, Sunday not even having been given employment, thus relieving the local labour situation to some extent.

At noon today the upper bridge was closed to traffic, of all discriptions. Pedestrians will have to either go over the lower bridge or the footbridge to the south of the upper structure is completed. "We will have it open for foot traffic by to-morrow morning I think," William Holderoft, who is in the city today, stated to The Ontario Intelligencer this morning.

What Reporter Saw

"You are not getting a new bridge in here one minute before it is needed" he added, pointing to one of the pieces of steel rusty and with a notice able flaw in it. "That will just weaken this support by one fifth," he claimed.

It is expected that workmen will have dismantled all parts of the bridge, with the exception of the

Theft of Cheese Case Adjourns Today Thurlow Young Man Appears in Court

Charged with the theft of a cheese valued at $13.00 from a truck owned by O. Morgan on September 8th last, Peter O. Murray, a young man, of Thurlow Township appeared before Magistrate Mikel today in police court. The Crown Attorney, who was present in court asked for a remand until Saturday as there was a further investigation to make. The request was granted and bail was set at $200.00, which will be forthcoming for the young man. It is understood Provincial Constable Bert Hammer, who investigated the theft, has received from the accused a statement, which may be produced at the time of trial.

C.P.R. LINER SEEKS SPEED RECORD

LONDON, Sept 23.—CP—An early tussle for the Atlantic speed record between the Germans liner, Europa, and the Germ men Line, and the recently launched Canadian Pacific Empress of Britain is forshadowed by the announcement that the Empress builders are fitting a new type of under tube boiler to bring the vessel within the racing distance of the German record. Empress also plans to have a fast express train meet it at Quebec.

Mr. Duff has been working in Medical Hall store for some time and his many friends in the city wish him the best of luck at college.

EASILY EXTINGUISHED

The Belleville Fire Department answered a call to a stove house near the Ontario School for the Deaf yesterday afternoon. A grass fire had started and had assumed serious proportion. The blaze was put out with little difficulty. The house is owned by Colonel V. N. Ponton.

HOME COOKING SALE

Christ Church rectory, Everett St., was the scene of a charming afternoon tea and sale of home-cooking this afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Branch of the W.A. The ideal autumn day brought crowds of visitors to the affair and the rooms daintily decorated with asters in pink and white, were very inviting. The guests were received by the president, Mrs. A. Conifer, Mrs. J. Hurst and Mrs. Addison Vandecourt. Tea was poured by Mrs. G. B. Smith and members of the W.A. assisted in the serving. A sale of home cooking was very successful and was in charge of Mrs. J. Bowyer and Mrs. H. A. Lennox.

HAD DELIGHTFUL TIME

Mr. J. Wilfred Holmes, City Clerk, and Mrs. Holmes have returned from a delightful trip to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Holmes' original home was in Nova Scotia and this year was his first visit there in sixteen years. They motored through Nova Scotia for two weeks enjoying the very beautiful scenery which that Province offers.

UNIQUE ROOK GARDEN.

Mr. Ma Cave, proprietor of the Rad io Cafe, is talented in more than one sphere. Some time ago he painted two pictures, one of the old tower bridge and one of Front street in wat er colors which attracted attention and which connoisseurs of art hailed their stamp of approval. Joe is exhibiting an unique feature in the window of the cafe now in the form of a landscape scene done with cinders and small pebbles of various colors. It represents a Chinese garden with its tiny decorative effects Several months were required in the building of the "garden" said Mr. Chea, states that it was slow and tedious work.

WILL GIVE HISTORICAL SKETCH.

On today (Tuesday) Monsignor Nicholson, pastor of St. Michael's parish, will deliver a special sermon on the Canadian Martyrs' Shrine. He will give an historical sketch of Ste. Marie at Midland of which he has made a close study. Monsignor Nicholson will doubtless be heard not only by his own parishioners, but those from the surrounding district as well.

ANKLE WAS FRACTURED.

Lester Price, who is employed by the Masterson Construction Co., of the filtration plant, was brought to Dr. Robertson's office yesterday suffering from a broken ankle. The injury was sustained when a heavy piece of metal fell on his leg, while he was at work. Price will be laid up for some time.

DELIGHTFUL SURPRISE PARTY

A surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cooke, West Bridge street, last night proved a most successful affair. The event was staged in honour of Mr. Miles Delong who is leaving the first visit to the city in thirty two years. Many of Mr. Delong's old friends were present and he was given a hearty reception. Various were present from Trenton, Picton and other surrounding points. The evening was devoted to card parties during which a lunch was served at the conclusion. Mr. and Mrs. John Olbb (nee Evelyn Cooke) returned from Hamilton yesterday while the party was at its height, and they were the recipients of a cut-glass dish and a pair of salt and pepper shakers. Forty persons were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Cooke.

WAS NOT GEORGE DELINE

The name of George Deline was used yesterday in a newspaper article in connection with an accident on the Gonnerville Road. When the matter was brought to the attention of the highway traffic officer who made the report, he later stated that the name of George Deline had been given him but that he had since been informed the name of the driver was Christopher Deline.

BOWLING SEASON ALMOST OVER

The lawn bowling season is drawing to a close and this week two district tournaments will practically wind up the schedule. A number of Belleville clubs will take part in the tournament at Deseronto tomorrow while others will take part in the contest at Brighton. Belleville suffered defeat at the hands of Stirling last night in the latter village and the game here on Saturday will practically decide the championship of the Hastings County League. The two rinks representing the Belleville Club last night were: Skip's Scopb. Arthur McCle. W. Emery and Chas. Sulman skip ;H. Holland, L. E. McLean W. A. Wallace and T. J. Hurley skip. They were 18 points down on the night's play.

Better Lighting of City Inaugurated

City Council Will Tonight Witness Lighting of Dundas Street

NEW LIGHTS USED

Plan of Council to Extend System to Other Parts of City

Start of making Belleville one of the best lighted cities in the Province of Ontario will be made tonight on Dundas street, when Chairman of Light Aldermen Harold Armstrong, with members of the city Council and of the Belleville Hydro Commission will witness the turning on of this new series of lamps which will eventually be installed on all the main arteries of travel in and out of the city. Shortly after the city has over the local Hydro plant, the city Council by request of the Chairman of Light appointed a committee to deal with the re-lighting of the city on an up-to-date basis and after visiting many towns and cities the lights to be installed were adopted.

Discard Old Lights

Simultaneously with the cutting in of the new series will be the discarding of the old series which has served for many years. There have been erected on Dundas street from McDonald Avenue to Front St., 30 new poles run up exactly ten feet from the ground and having bulbs of 300 watts. The poles have been erected on the south side of Dundas street, and there will be a light on every pole from Pinnacle street to past George street and on every other pole from there to McDonald Avenue with a light at every intersection in the whole distance. The globes are made of holophane refractors enclosed in diffusing glassware and are slung 22 inches from the pole. These new globes break up the light and there is positively no glare and the light does not go in a beam but rather spreads over the surface of the ground.

It is the intention to place 25 lights on Bridge Avenue and West Bridge street to the top of Murney Hill and this work will be started at once as the recommendation has already been made to the Hydro Commission through the instation of Aldermen Armstrong. Station street, North Front street, Cannifton Road, will be done in turn with a possibility of a different size but on the same principle being used on the cross streets. The lights that will be erected tonight include 14 lamps of 100 candle power and three lights of 50 candle power so it can easily be seen Dundas street will be one of the best lighted streets in the city.

LETTERS to the Editor

Cannifton, September 23, 30.

To the Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

Sir—Would you please give space in your valuable paper for the following:

Concerning noxious weeds in the Township of Thurlow.

After complimenting myself that the weed industry was completed for the fiscal year of 1930, I have received a communication from the Department of Agriculture at Toronto, that such is not the case. So I am endeavoring, on behalf of the electorate of the Township to have printed in your paper some of the important items that were sent me by the Department. I am copying this from the communication or instructions I received.

Perennial Sow Thistle has been seen in Eastern Ontario this year. It has been very difficult to handle, due to the fact that it has been general in every township.

Many acres have been cut green, hay picking and cutting out patches, has been done all over. but plants have gone to seed and are now in bloom and will be distributing seed for spring weather. Millons of seeds will take root and miles of roots will be ready for spring weather to throw up their crop of new plants. These roots are hollow and full of milk which cannot stand a good sun bake. Deep plowing below the roots and left in the sun for two or three weeks will be put out of commission after which cultivate with broad teeth cultivators.

It s the intention of the Department to tighten up more each year in the enforcement of the act.

It is your duty to warn those having infested fields that they must get busy or there will be some content next year. After harvest cultivation is important, ridging up good seed, smooth or crops, clovers hoe crops, short rotation, cutting hay early, perennial hay crops, cutting fields green, cleaning threshing machine mills, cleaning up neglected places where weeds are going to seed, piling up manure containing weed seed, plowing it to heat, burning up chaff and seeds from fanning mills. Low places must be dressed if Sow thistle is to be controlled and try and avoid sowing grain on infested fields.

Please see that all the cemeteries are cleaned up to encourage levelling and haustying. I would suggest you per, sonally advise all threshing machine owners to clean their mills before moving.

Yours truly,

(Signed) Dr. Honeywell, B.V.S.

Weed Inspector.

ANNOUNCES NET FROM CARNIVAL

$1,950 as Against $2,400 of Last Year is Result of Effort

Reports from the various chairmen of the Kiwanis Carnival along with a financial statement from Secretary George Griffin, were given Monday at the weekly luncheon of the members The net receipts will be approximately $1950.00 against $2400.00 of a year ago and the consensus of opinion was that a successful karnival had been held and that the amount secured will be a great help in the carrying on of the philanthropic work set out by the club for the year's programme. The gross receipts taken in this year were given at $6451.00 as against for last year $7112.72. As Secretary Griffin stated in reading the statement not only one member is responsible for the success, but the united effort of the whole club and the karnival is proof of the worth of the club to the community. He also expressed the view that no other form of amusement could net as much money in the same is the karnival and that it would be continued next year on a larger scale with many new features.

President Joe Imlah, who presided thanked the general chairman, Jack Irish, and all his various chairmen, while George Lee, in charge of the games personally thanked those who worked in the different booths. Votes of thanks were extended to all who in any way took part in the carnival and especially the public who by generously supporting the efforts of the club. Kiwanian Art Sills, who has just returned from the District Convention at St. John, New Brunswick, gave an interesting account of a trip and the entertainment provided by the St. John Club.

The club was favored by the presence of Miss Helen Lumsmden, who delighted with a solo and encore with Leo B. Riggs at the piano and Mr. Riggs also gave a piano solo as a request number from one of the members. Charlie Cooper and part of his Bon Ton orchestra was on hand and gave several popular numbers and assisted in the community singing led by James Bunkier. Mr. McIntyre, Toronto Lecturer and Red Woods, Toronto, were introduced as guests and welcomed by the club.

steel work, by the end of this week. "I can't say how long it will be before the bridge is altogether demolished" said Mr. Holdcroft, "because I don't know how long the steel people will take. But everything else will be finished by the end of this week at the latest." Concrete pouring will be started next week, it is estimated.

Some Difficulties

The Holdcroft Company does not expect to run into the same trouble with the coffer dams this time the men was told. There will be three of them built and men were working on the centre dam this morning. The water is extremely shallow and there is a good rock bottom and the dams will be erected and pumped out in no time.

One end of the old bridge has disappeared already. There is a yawning cavity at the west end, with a gang of workmen engaged in deepening it. Other men are ripping up the cement that used to be the roadway. Still others are working on the coffer dam while another gang is building the temporary bridge.

"It is employing one hundred per cent local labour," Mr. Holdcroft said this morning. "With the exception of the superintendents and foreman of the gangs every man comes from the city."

Even to the uninitiated eye, the old bridge looks unsafe. Flaws and holes are perceptible in different parts of the structure and it looks as though a new bridge was going to be built not too soon.

Endorses National Waterways Project

Local Chamber of Commerce Present Resolution for Discussion

CANADA HIGHWAY

Relief Sought From Suburban Board Burdens Now

Belleville, Chamber of Commerce has submitted seven resolutions to the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade which have been accepted for discussion at the annual meeting at Ottawa, October 16-17. The Resolution Committee of the local Chamber was composed of Col. W.W. Fenton, K.C., John Elliott and J. O. Herity. The resolutions are:

(1) That we endorse the great National undertaking of the development of deep waterways on the St. Lawrence River, and the conservation and utilization of industrial power in connection therewith, and respectfully urge that this work of vital moment be proceeded with forthwith, or as soon as International arrangements protecting the rights of Canada and the Provinces can be completed.

(2) That the prestige and progress of Canada and the maintenance of her independent lines of communication are involved in the early completion of the unfinished links in the great Canadian Transcontinental Highway from sea to sea, and this body respectfully urges upon the Federal and Provincial Governments concerned, co-opeative and immediate action.

(3) That so far as possible and practicable all raw material containing the natural resources of the Province should be manufactured into the finished products before exportation in finish products, so that work may be provided for Canadian labour within our borders, and industrial wealth may be developed, and that the Government be requested to act in effecting this object of practical patriotism by such legislation as may be effective in the premises.

(4) Resolved that Cities in Ontario should be relieved from the burden and expense of contributing to the cost and maintenance of that portion of the King's Highways lying outside the limits of the urban municipalities and denominated "the suburban area," these highways being the main general arteries of trade, commerce and pleasure traffic and this charge being discriminatory and working an inequitable injustice against the taxpayers of the cities, and that the Provincial Government be so memorialized.

(5) Resolved that in the opinion of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce the Provincial Government should be respectfully requested to take over the total expense of the maintenance of all public General Hospitals through out the Province and increase and improve the accommodation and equipment thereof.

(6) Resolved that while congratulating the Government of Ontario and the Hydro Electric Power Commission upon the reduction in the service charge made to rural consumers, the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce urge that a still further reduction be made in the service charge so that no further or larger fee may be discriminatingly charged against the agricultural population of Ontario than is charged against city users and consumers of electricity for light and power, and further that the requirement for entering into a twenty-year contract on the part of Rural consumers, which is not required from residents in urban Municipalities should be discontinued.

(7) Resolved that we commend the efforts of the Government of Ontario in its insistence that building stone from this Province should be used in the construction of public buildings. This policy we also believe could well be adopted by the Federal Government and also by Municipalities and thus further the development of one of our great natural resources and go a long way towards the reduction of unemployment.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

This afternoon my sister Gladd's called up on the telefone to tawk to ma, ma saying, O I don't know Gladdis I dont think Id bother to spred a regular lunch for them, why don't you just make a batch of fudge? Your fudge always turns out so well. I should think it would be just what they'd like, she sed,

Me thinking, O, fudge.

And I went around to Gladdises house and she opened the door with a little fancy apron on, saying, Why hello Benny, have you a message from mother?

No. Im just here on a visit, I sed, and she sed, Well, this is quite an honor.

And I went in, saying, How's the baby?

He was all rite 5 minnits ago, I must tim up again and see, Gladdis sed, and I sed, Any new teeth?

Not up to 5 minn'ts ago, Gladdis sed, and I sed, Do you want me to go upstairs for you and get it? he's all rite?

No thanks, you mite not be able to tell. It requires experients, Gladdis sed, and I sed, Well maybe I can help you do something else.

Meaning fudge, and she sed, Its very helpful of you to offer, but I can think of anything. I must hurry back to the kitch'n for a while now, Im very busy lately, she sed.

Whats you doing? I sed, and she sed, Im making about a thousand little fancy sandwiches, more or less, it seems like more.

O, is that all youre making? I sed, and she sed, My stars that enough it seems Ill never get through. But now I cogent think of it, there is something you can do, I have a lot of paper napkins that half to be neetly folded. Im sure you could do that nicely if you took a little panes, she sed, and I sed, Well O, now I come to think of it I got a date with some of the fellows and their probely wonder ing where I am rite now.

And I quick hurry up and went out again feeling like a nazro escape.

Enterprise May Be Taken to England

Switching to the witching waves: the suggestion that Enterprise be sent abroad next season to race Shamrock V in home waters has a sporting sound. Of course, the change in climate doesn't affect a boat the way it affects a racing thoroughbred or travelling automobile, a lawyer or track and field men. But knowledge of local wind and tidal conditions must be worth something in a yacht race, and a series of races on the other side of the Atlantic would give Skipper Heard and Shamrock V a chance to regain something in the way of nautical prestige.

A veteran nautical observer makes the point that Vigilant, the successful defender in 1893, went abroad and raced in British waters the following year. Other American yachts, not cup defenders, have done the same thing. America, the original cup winner, went abroad to compete in a regatta that had nothing to do with the trophy that is now known as the America's Cup.

Over a period of more than thirty years, Sir Thomas Lipton has been racing his Shamrocks in a vain quest for the cup. All the racing was done in American waters. Any suggestion to give Jolly Sir Thomas a chance to race a Shamrock against an American boat in British waters will be greeted with three rousing cheers on both sides of the Atlantic.

Heart-beats and the sound of breathing have been sent from South America to Spain by a new instrument so clearly that doctors in Madrid can diagnose the disease of patients 8750 miles away in Buenos Ayres.

MAY LEARN MUCH FROM ORIENTAL

Grandson of Rev. Dr. Baker, Native of Japan, Enters Toronto Univ.

At the Herchmer Ave. United Church on Sunday Sept. 21st, a splendid address was given by Mr. Ralph Outerbridge, son of Rev. and Mrs. Outerbridge of Kobe, Japan, and grandson of Rev. Dr. Baker of this city.

Mr. Outerbridge was born in Japan; some twenty years ago and is now entering Toronto University to study Medicine.

He said "we are apt to think the Orientals inferior to us in art and culture but we have much to learn from them." He has been greatly impressed by the religious fervor of the native christians, and the earnest work done by the student body, to establish christianity.

Kegawa, the Gandhi of Japan, who was a Noddist is now outstanding man in Japan in many ways. He has inaugurated "the Million souls for Christ" movement, which is unparalelled in history.

Maker's Good Name Is Pledged To Buyer In National Advertising

An Acknowledgment of Obligation to Public to Maintain of Standards —Bond of Integrity Between Maker and Customer.

"Our Special Tea" "Our Best Flour." "Our Creamery Butter"—and so forth . . . most of us can quite easily remember when the grocer by such notices drew attention to his wares, just as we can remember when the well-worn words, "I can recommend it, use it ourselves" were the only argument in favor of unknown and unrecognizable goods.

And most of us can recall the weighty discussions and long deliberations which preceded a sale, the difficulty of ascertaining anything like uniform quality in any line from one week to another and the inevitable percentage of customers who were disappointed or disgruntled when the quality varied.

In those days, the entire responsibility rested with the retailer. It was his business to do all the selling, to furnish all the guarantees, to shoulder all the blame when the quality of the merchandise fell down.

The object is not to paint as black a picture as possible of the good old days. It is simply to bring out some of the changes which the advertising of standardized brands has wrought for the benefit of the retailer.

That advertised brands move faster, sell with less effort on the part of the dealer and have a much readier public acceptance, we are all prepared to admit. But, has it ever occurred to you, as a retailer, that the tremendous sums invested in advertising by our leading manufacturers perform other valuable functions beyond the stimulating of sales?

In the first place, advertised lines on the shelves of a store are letters of introduction to new customers. They recognize, in these familiar packages, old acquaintances tried and proven friends. The old distrust of the unknown is banished. Sales resistance is at a positive minimum. The goods have been sold before ever the customer sets foot in the shop. And, from confidence in the goods themselves to confidence in the dealer's establishment is but a short step indeed.

The manufacturer who advertises his product to the public places himself under a tremendous responsibility . . . a responsibility to live up to his advertising. The moment he fails to do so, his entire investment in advertising is wiped out.

When the manufacturers of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, for example, state in their advertising that these corn flakes are fresh, crisp, flavorful, they accept a definite obligation to see that their product is exactly as advertised . . . not the occasional package, but every package. A cumulative investment of more than $40,000,000 advertising expenditure backs up the statement. The reputation of the product, the good name of the manufacturer are all staked on the quality of each individual package.

Realizing this, the purchaser buys with confidence. There is no doubt, no hesitation. Nobody can afford to advertise an inferior product . . . and the public knows it. Uniform quality is an assured fact.

This knowledge lifts a load from the dealer's shoulders. He knows that the responsibility rests with the manufacturer, not with him. He knows that, in the rare event of his customers becoming dissatisfied, the manufacturer will do all in his power to regain the confidence which he has worked so hard to win. The maintaining of public good-will is no longer a shiftanded gesture on the part of an individual . . . it is a vital business of protecting the manufacturer's investment and, with it, of course, the investment of the dealer.

In this way, advertising becomes more than the manufacturer's touting of his own wares. It becomes his pledge to his public and to his dealer organization. The money he invests in it stands as a bond of integrity between his customer and himself, to protect which every effort is constantly exerted.

NEWLYWEDS OF WELLINGTON ARE WELL-HONORED

Keen Interest Shown in Prince Edward School Fairs

Wellington, Sept. 10 (by mail) — There was a reception held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maxwell, on Saturday evening, September 6th, in honor of the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Glande Maxwell, who were married on Saturday, August 30th and who had just returned from their honeymoon. The rooms were prettily decorated with asters, snapdragon, and other autumn flowers. Among the guests were Miss Violet Bird, Toronto; Miss Rosella Cave, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Weir, Moneymore; Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, Roslin; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crosby, Amelisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cave, Bloomfield; Mr. John Cave, Bloomfield; Mr. and Mrs. H. Weir, Consecon; Mr. Wm. Cave, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Alexander, Mr. Maxwell and Mrs. Delino. Tables were laid in the dining room and a sumptuous dinner served. Among those assisting in the serving were Misses Nellie Watson, Ethel Boldrick and Evelyn Weir. During the evening serenaders arrived on the scene and they were treated to ice cream and cake.

Prince Edward County school fairs started this week, the first one was held at Amelisburg on Tuesday, September 9th. The second one is Hillier school fair and will be held at Hillier on Friday, September 12th. The pupils who are exhibiting are busy indeed and are anxiously looking forward for this day. Some are all intent on gaining the prizes and thus storing up knowledge by making collections and also learning to help themselves while others are anticipating to compete in the various races and enjoy the sports of the day. Persons are urged to show the children on to do all the work in preparing their exhibits without assistance. Encourage them in every way but remember that the work you do for them helps to defeat the object of the school fair, which is to teach the boys and girls to do things for themselves. It is the children's fair; help them to make it a success. Come along and spend the day with the children. Lunch will be served by the Hillier Women's Institute who will have a stand on the grounds.

The scene in Wellington has changed. The town which was well patronized by tourists and was busy with visitors has taken on a different air and is a busy thriving town. Three canning factories are operating and loads of tomatoes and corn pass through the streets on the way to the factory. The season will be short as the crop of tomatoes and corn are lighter than usual on account of the continued dry weather.

70—BUT TAKEN FOR 45

Army Officer's Secret of Perpetual Youth

TAKEN KRUSCHEN FOR 20 YEARS

"Seventy be jiggered, sir! I pass anywhere for 45, and bet—I feel sixteen!" That's the spirit of this Army Officer's letter all right, as you'll agree. If you read between the lines. A seventy-year-old son-of-a-gun who can still act skittish a horse!

"I have used Kruschen Salts for nearly 20 years, and when I say this, being 70, I was taken the other day for 45, that I am strong, my mind fit and enjoy life. I would like you to understand that I attribute the whole of the above really wonderful facts to the virtue of your Kruschen Salts. I took it with me and was supplied with it during the whole of the War. I introduced it to high officials in London, and an Australian Judge adopted it on my recommendation, and writes me from Australia how wonderfully it is has improved him. Some of my friends both at the Bachelors' and Ladies' Clubs, Piccadilly, take enough to cover a shilling and swear by it."—Capt. M.

When you lead a sedentary life with little fresh air, less exercise and hasty, ill-chosen meals, your inside, sooner or later, gets sluggish, and fails to supply your stimulating organs with the tonic mineral salts that they must have to enable them to work properly. Follow the whole host of so-called "minor" ills that undermine your constitution and blunt your happiness and discolour your outlook.

The trouble is obvious enough; it's the lack of those vital salts. Get a bottle of Kruschen and the remedy will be just as plain: for Kruschen is a combination of just those salts your body needs, blended in Nature's own proportions. Now you see why "it's the little daily dose that does it." You can't grow old when every little fibre of you is tingling with "that Kruschen feeling." Get that bottle to-day and begin to get younger to-morrow.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 40c. and 75c. per bottle.

Rotary Night Was Three-in-One Affair

Ladies are Guests and Club Presents Members with Gifts

FINE TALK HEARD

Rotary last night at the Bay of Quinte Country Club was host at a threefold dinner. Three happy occasions were observed. First the wedding of Captain Jim Howard, popular registate teacher and Mrs. Howard was duly noted by the Captain's brother Rotarians when they presented Jim with a beautiful silver tray; secondly, Dr. Van Blaklaze and Mrs Blaklaze were presented with a splendid three-piece silver tea set, in appreciation of the medical services rendered and the time given by Dr. Blaklaze to crippled and underprivileged children under the sheltering wing of Rotary; and lastly but not least, it was ladies' night.

There must have been close to one hundred and fifty who sat down to the sumptuous dinner served in the clubhouse verandah. All the members of the Rotary Club and their wives and sweethearts as well as guests of Rotarians completely filled the large verandah.

Gifts to Newlyweds

The first highlight of the evening arrived when President Ed. Worth-ington presented Rotarian Jim Howard and his bride to please stand up and let the gathering have a look at them. This certainly brushed even more than its wife. Leo Riggs, who presided at the piano, struck up the "Wedding March" and the happy couple walked up to the head table where they were presented with the silver tray on behalf of the Rotary Club by the president.

Blaklaze Honored

The next surprise was unfolded when President Worth announced that C. J. Symons, for years one of the hardest workers of the club on behalf of crippled and underprivileged children had a few words to say. These words turn out to be a paean of praise for Rotarian Dr. Van Blaklaze, one of the most popular medical men in the city and bee who his done more for city and children in a quiet way than will ever be known. "Van", said Rotarian Symons, "has done a wonderful work. He thinks nothing of being called out of his bed at all hours of the morning to comfort and help some poor child. This, too, in his birthday, and it is with pleasure that we make this presentation of a small token of our appreciation." Rotarian "Cap" Walmsley made the presentation. Incidentally, it might be noted that there are no bills rendered for help given to the underprivileged children. As Dr. Blaklaze put it: "In thanking his brother Rotarians for their gift, the work was not work to him but pleasure. He enjoys helping them."

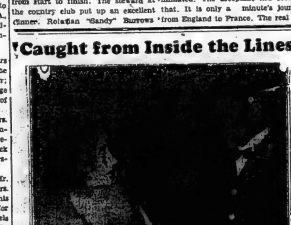
It was a most successful evening from start to finish. The steward at the country club put up an excellent chef dinner. Rotarian "Sandy" Burrows with his most able chorus, was so popular in the singing of "Brown Octobe Ale" that he had to encore with the same piece. It is not known how many times "Sandy" has obliged with this song, but it is still by far the most beloved of songs of Belleville Rotary. A snappy orchestra furnished music for dancing later in the evening. Rotarian Gene Illsley rendered "The Bells of St. Marys" which made a big hit.

Rev. Gordon Sisco

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Gordon Sisco of the Port Hope United Church. Mr. Sisco addressed a ladies' night at the Kiwanis Club some two years ago and he was so well liked then that he was invited back again. He did not prove disappointing last night but showed himself to be one of the most entertaining speakers heard in Belleville in some time.

Grown-ups, the Reverend Sisco told the guests solemnly, should learn to play three games in life. These he said were the game of Pee-Wee golf, overcoming obstacles, that of "I Spy", or keeping out of the way of others and looking at the world, and the game of "Stagecoach", or changing chairs. In other words, take a look at the other fellow's slant on life, try and put ourselves in his place for a little while.

"Pee-Wee golf is a game we should all play," he said. "The people we admire in this life are those who overcome difficulties. We envy the rich man, yet the very rich man is a person who does not get the admiration of society. We look up to intelligent people but we don't admire them. The person from we admire, deep down in our hearts, are those who overcome desperate difficulties. Now, everyone can't be Milton's equal, or Shakespeare's, with her husband everywhere in his earlier days, putting up with the hardships that fall to the part of a self-employed author's problem", continued the speaker, "is how to get something out of this golfer your handicaps. And so the game of handicap is all most play. "Referring to "I Spy", he said, "Nothing more is obligatory in life," said Mr. Sisco, "than to study new things for yourself. You, Rotarians, play this game when you interest yourselves in crippled children's work. It is not just the money that counts in the personal touch that means everything. Don't keep looking in the mirror. If you must look in the mirror you never see anything."



Stagecoach in Life

The final game of "Stagecoach" must be played by the object of this game is to all sit in chairs in a circle and when a signal is given to change chairs with the person opposite. This is to say, must see things from the other fellow's point of view", claimed the speaker. Distance means nothing. The spiritual barriers are still there.

One of the great difficulties in modern industry is the problem of human relationships. There is no more personal touch But there is no excuse for this among nations. Distance is annihilated. The aeroplane has seen to the country club put up an excellent that. It is only a matter of hours from England to France. The real enemy of society to-day is the bigoted reactionary who won't change seats."

The thanks of the club were expressed to the speaker by Rotarian Joe Hunt, the other members on the program that proved to be highly popular were a sketchette, "An Interruption", by the Rotary Players, and a song by Miss Leona Riggs.

SINCLAIR'S

TIME TO BUILD UP DAIRY HERDS

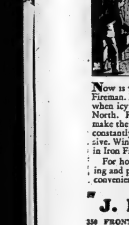
Dominion Cheese Grader Tenders Advice on Cheesemaking

James L. Irwin, Dominion cheese grader, of this city, addressed the members of Campbellford recently at a dinner in that town. Mr. Irwin in the course of his remarks drew attention to some of the trouble such as fruity cheese and discoloring, that was still to be found. He stated that it was found that the source of this trouble, but that by hard work and experience the situation was gradually getting better. This trouble was not confined to the Campbellford district, he told the makers, but was prevalent through all districts.

Mr. Irwin pointed out that it was very difficult to judge cheese, for what seem to be number one's at the factory often turn out to be bad. Three or four days of action often make a great deal of difference. On the other hand other cheese that is graded number two's will by holding, clean up and become number one. He stressed the fact that this trouble was often hard to trace but pointed out that he did not want the cheese to go downs ecause it gave the district a black name.

Of the Belleville meeting the speaker urged that the local association should send any resolution to the convention that they thought was necessary as now was the time.

Mr. Irwin also drew attention to the difficulty that B was not the case between milk producer, the farmer, and the distributor, the large dairies, and pointed out that some of the latter concerns were offering a large price for milk, but when the matter was considered and haulage and other expenses deducted, the price was no better than the cheese factories offered and would not benefit the farmer in any way. He asked that the makers go into this matter with their patrons.



In the speaker's opinion this was the time to increase the dairy herd. Things were flat, he knew, and would be for some months, but cheese was gradually coming back to its old price and the man who had the herd and the milk was the man who would profit in the near future. And as for the cheese itself, as far as the grade is concern ed, the industry n ahead of last year.

Another of Belleville's daughters plans to take up the study of law, Miss Isabel Hinds, who graduated in June from Belleville Collegiate, and was one of its most promising students, leaves today for Toronto, to enter University in the Arts Course. On the completion of her studies there she will enter Osgoode Hall. Miss Hinds is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hinds.

A popular member of the C.G.I.T. of John Street Church, Miss Hinds was honoured by a surprise party on Saturday evening by her group, the Cherokee The girls met at her home on Dundas street, and Miss Helen Price lay, the president, presented Miss Hinds with a smart purse, on behalf of fellow members of the C.G.I.T. A jolly evening was spent, and refreshments were served before the girls left for home.

The Hostess Suggests

Sardine Salad

Remove bones from one dozen sardines. Mix four hard cooked eggs finely chopped, twelve olives finely chopped and three pickles finely chopped. Marinate with a French dressing. Serve sardines on lettuce and dot over them spoonfuls of the egg mixture.

Waldorf Salad

Use equal parts of chopped apple, celery and nuts desired nut kernels serve on lettuce leaf and add either corn oil salad dressing or a cooked dressing, as preferred. An excellent oil, quite as good as olive oil, is much used nowadays for salad dressing and is prepared as is French dressing, all ingredients being very cold. Apples for salad should not stand long after being peeled, as they become dark in color.

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING

BY

LUCILLE

DEAR READER:

The weatherman is being very kind this autumn and September is one of the loveliest in years. Warm days and brilliant sunshine make one want to linger out of doors. Cold finds are crowded with devotees who realize that, all too soon, their games must come to an end, and who are taking advantage of the bright days to get the utmost pleasure from their favourite pastime.

The gay colours of autumn all seem to the foliage that is slowly turning from the summer's green, and fall's tints are being copied in the smart costumes one sees about town. Fashions, as revealed by the Kiwanis Karnival, depend for their chic this year, not only on their cut and design, but on their colour importance. Browns and greens led the way in the costumes presented. This, of course, does not include black, which is always in a class of distinction by itself, well ahead of the show The Parisian woman invariably chooses black, and one here will you find a smarter appearance than the French woman, the world. She not only selects her frock with care but she spends much time in picking just the right accessories to complete her outfit.

When you have decided on your basic costume for winter, too, too, should devote special attention to the wise choice of accessories. This year, when the styles are simple, the garment's charm being gained from its graceful lines, colour harmony in your costume is essential. If your selection as your winter colour, is brown, there are many pretty outfits that you can have. First of all, there is the wool dress, that the business girl will like This should be in a shade to match her coat. A Russian style dress, with a skirt of deep brown, and tunic a lighter beige would be stunning for an afternoon dress, while there are many tailored brown silk frocks that can do duty at the office. For contrast, one of the pretty greens in a felted frock will be in keeping with her colour, for green and browns blend beautifully if you pick the right shades.

In picking your hat and shoes choose a brown that is a bit deeper in tone than your dresses, but be sure that they are of the same tone If you want two hats have one of felt, (and what smart ones there are this season) and the other a dressier affair in velvet, preferably one of those little tooth shapes. You'll never go wrong in costumes if you give their selection a little care. Buying on the impulse of the moment, is a discouraging thing when your allowance is limited. Because a certain dress happens to catch your eye, when you know, in the back of your mind that it won't fit in with your outfit, never pays. Unless you can buy a hat and shoes that match it is well to be stern with yourself. You'll only regret indulging.

To be smart, you don't have to be extravagant The most advantageous effects in dressing are attained by attention to little things, by having no loud or garish notes in your costume, and by being faithful in taking care of your clothes.

Fashionably yours.

LUCILLE.

Fashion Flashes

Be in the pink by wearing one of the new and attractive black and pink frocks. A smart evening frock of black and pink lace has the bodice of the pink lace, while the black lace skirt has pink bands. Bands gives of black with pink combinations on the upper part, are worn with this model.

The coat of a costume should only be determined by the service that the garment will give. Those should be smooth service from a suit of fine black tweed flecked with white that is ideal for day and travel wear. The jacket is lined only from the sides to the front and the white crepe blouse worn tucked inside the skirt, has an embroidered front.

The quill writes its own story of the mode. Many of the newest little hats are jauntily embellished with Quills in various hues. A close fitting hat of black velvet, with its turned-back brim stitched with gold threads has a couple of gold quills placed to one side flat.

As light as a feather is an actual fact with some of the new cloths that are woven of fine wool and cotton strands. Very new is a walking frock of dull blue made of this soft and lovely material. The skirt is flared and it is trimmed at neckline and cuffs with small geometric appliques of the same material in rust, white and blue.

Our material needs are to be met this Winter with all sorts of lovely fabrics. To the vanguard of the mode is canton faille much used for day and afternoon frocks. Ideal for early Fall is a frock of this material in black with a thin diagonal stripe in white. It has a scalloped neckline and tie for white kidskin satin and the lining of the flare of the cuff is also of the white satin.

Dignity is in demand when the director is represented by rich Lyons velvet. One handsome evening frock of this fabric has the top decolletage and the deep sleeves of black net, which adds more life to the gown.

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

1. A lady and gentleman are dining together, a friend of the lady comes in. Is it permissible for the lady to ask her friend to join them, or should this be left to her escort?

2. When a salad is served in a bowl (individual portions) should the salad be conveyed to the plate in small portions by using a fork and large spoon?

3. Please tell me how a club sandwich should be eaten. Is it proper to cut the entire sandwich? This is usually very awkward on account of the thickness of the sandwich. T.

T. It is better form for neither one to ask the friend to join them at dinner It is a "forced" situation and usually in bad taste. However, if there is some reason why the company of the third person is especially desired, the host, the gentleman, must issue the invitation.

3. A club sandwich should be eaten with a knife and fork. Cut through the sandwich with the knife. The layers of the sandwich make a difficult mouthful, take half at a time.

IMPOLITE TO DISREGARD "THANK YOU"

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

When you have given information to anyone and the person afterwards says—"Thank You" is it necessary to respond? Or is it just as polite to say nothing? B.

It is never polite to disregard "thank you." In this case say, "I am glad that I was able to give you the information," or "I am delighted to be of service," or "It was a pleasure," or just "You are very welcome."

PETERBORO WON FROM OSHAWA

Defeat Auto 13-9 and Qualify to Meet Ingersoll in Finals

Port Hope, Sept. 23—Peterboro O.G.I. Intermediates will participate in the final round for the O.B.A.A. intermediate title as a result of their Frank Merrivell win over Oshawa Arabs here yesterday 13 to 9. Both teams won their home games and the sudden death tilt was ordered for Port Hope. The contest was a long drawn, out affair and was witnessed by a capacity crowd. The engagement got away at 3.30 and had to be called at the first of the ninth on account of darkness after nearly three hours of play.

Peterboro spotted Oshawa eight runs in the first three frames and then knocked Duke Dainty from the box and continued the onslaught of Frink and Glover, Merrivell, formerly of the Belleville Nationals, was sent to the showers after hurling two-thirds of an inning for the Peter, and the balance of the game was pitched by the veteran Abbie Rose.

After scoring eight runs in the first three innings the Arabs added only more in the sixth when Bowden doubled and counted on Whitely's two-base blow.

The Petes came to life in the fifth frame by sending in four runs to make it a ball game. Bowels walked and did not beat batter-filed out. Three successive walks forced in a runner, and Shiner Johnson, C.O.B.L. campaigner, cleaned the table with a double. In the sixth the winners added three runs and then went out in the eighth to count six markers on six hits to put up the game. Score.

RUGBY SEASON IS OPEN!

(By K. C. W.)

Saturday will usher in the local rugby season, which, incidentally, promises to be one of the finest in years. There are five teams entered in this group this year instead of the meagre two. Albert and Collegiate, which have fought it out for three years.

On Saturday afternoon Coaches Shiels and Howard will take a spinal scrub fairly-four strong down to Napanee to herd the Seaniors in their lair. A senior and a junior team will make the trip and as the collegiate never looked to strong in it does to the present moment they should put up quite a scrap.

This year things augur well for the collegiate boys and Coach Shiels is an master about seventy per cent of last year's squad to take the field, while Albert is not quite so lucky.

The college has lost the services of three of last year's players that ever donned the moleskins for Albert. We refer to Howard Parchine, Jack Yuill and "Smiley" McNaughton. Yuill even the collegiate players will agree, is by far the best offensive and defensive bet that has been seen around here for the past three years. He fractured his skull last year and still wanted to keep on playing.

R.C.Y.C. on the other hand, should have a real squad this year. The Stars, taking "Victor" Hall, Tennis will be back in uniform and new that he and Yuill can't try to kill each other should prove of real benefit to the collegiate. "Wishart," it cannot be denied, is one of the best the collegiate has—as long as he keeps on the flaming temper in check. He is a double threat, he can smash the line hard and he is a smart tackler.

The collegiate has been woefully weak on the passing end, but this year the matter may be rectified. Both Harold Mott and "Chick" Champagne have been beating the oval nicely in practice. But Champagne, unfortunately, in past seasons, has always been able to peel off a few pounds and look terrible in a game. He has probably improved, like good cheese, with age.

Albert always has one of the smartest players in these parts. We refer to Mel" Thompson, who last year at the age of sixteen could lift the ball nearly the length of the field—not only in practice, either. Thompson is not quite so hot when it comes to broken field running or kicking the like but a punter is an asset to any man's team.

It looks very much as though the red-headed flash from Gananoque was going to be back at Albert again. By "red-headed" Jackson has still some subjects to get, it is understood, and he would prove a stalwart addition to the team indeed. Jackson showed some real flashes of genius last year and is one smart broken field runner.

The collegiate has six stellar players from last year. These include Tommy Byrnes, Jack Graves, Champagne, Harold Mott and Jack Murphy.

While on the subject of Mosie it would not be a bad idea to take a look at Cyril Mott, who is not any relation to Harold, Cyril has been putting on weight the past few years, the right kind of weight, not fat, and just about this time is as well built a looking lad as you will see in a day's outing. Mott should turn out to be a smart lineman and a hard boy to knock over. As well, he is a neat tackler.

While the Collegiate has Shiels and Howard to guide its destiny, Albert is relying on "Ga" Mangwren, of Queen's, to turn out a winning team. Mangwren directed some games here last year and is popular as local sporting centre. Incidentally, he knows rugby.

The Collegiate is going to have a heavy line. Hewsone, Dolan and Chalmers, three candidates for the scrimmage line, tip the scales at two hundred pounds, while Twiddy weighs one hundred and ninety. The rest of the probable line are not lightweights by any means.

Trenton are pretty cocky about their chances this year of knocking off a group championship. Any rugby teams we have seen from Trenton couldn't compare with local teams in past years, but you never can tell. They will have a tough time wresting honors from the Collegiate and Albert.

Nothing has been heard from Picton so far, or from Napanee. Picton generally has a light, fast team. Last year they specialized in the pass, with not much success. Napanee hasn't been seen in some time.

Writing in the Trenton Courier-Advocate, the sport writer says:

"There is plenty and to spare of material for the team and from this wealth of athletic ability the regular squad has not been decided, but it will be a sure thing, that when this question really is decided upon, one of the best gridiron teams in years will represent the Trenton High School. Many of last years players and some better half should be on hand to step the line including such boys as Frank Bowler, Joe Reynolds, Ken Chambers, Frank Langdon, "Doc" Johnson, Tom Atkinson, "Gus" Wermiss, "Mac" Aylworth, Ralph Maybee and Ray Johnson.

Taking it in all, it should be one real rugby season. Whether Ga Albert or the Collegiate, it'll be all right with local folks if either of the teams come cop the honors.

SOCCER LEAGUE SCHEDULE DRAWN

Two Matches Open Season on First Day of October

Following is the schedule of the Public School Soccer League:—

October 1st—St. Michael's at Queen Alexandra; Queen Mary at King George.

October 3rd—Queen Alexandra at Queen Mary; St. Michael's at Queen Victoria.

October 7th — Queen Victoria at Queen Alexandra ;St. Michael's at King George.

October 14th—King George at Queen Victoria; St. Michael's at Queen Mary.

A win counts two points while a tie counts one point. All games in which St. Michael's are scheduled must be played on opponents' grounds.

All pupils of St. Michael's playing in the league must be from the senior fourth class or under. This ruling is necessary owing to the fact that some of the students at St. Michael's Academy are taking high school work and are hence debarred from participation in the league.

Stockholders of Parrgon Refining company will meet September 29, at Cinclinnati, formally to dissolve that company.

CARDS MAINTAIN LEAD IN NATIONAL

Have Two and a Half Game Lead and Need Only Three More

The St. Louis Cardinals moved nearer, the National League pennant yesterday by defeating the Phillies, 15-7 and maintaining their Peter 2 1-2 game lead over the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs also won, beating the Boston Brives 6-5, but did not improve their chance at the pennant because of the Cards' victory. Hack Wilson hit his 43rd home run of the season with Cuyler on base in the first inning off Selbold. St. Louis now needs only three victories in its remaining five games to clinch the pennant even if Chicago wins its remaining five games to clinch the pennant even if Chicago wins its remaining four games. The standing in that event would be.

St. Louis	.....	91	63 .591
Chicago	.....	90	64 .584

The Cardinals can tie for the flag by winning two out of five games, even if the Cubs take their four games.

The New York Giants, who were idle, were eliminated from the race for the pennant yesterday, even if the Cards should lose their remaining five games, and the Giants win their remaining four games. The New York would finish one game behind St. Louis. Brooklyn still has a mathematical chance for the pennant, but one more defeat in the Robin's remaining five games will eliminate them from the pennant if the Cards win only one more game.

QUICK & ROBERTSON

CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

GABBY STREET, MIRACLE MAN

Cardinals' Manager is Responsible for the Great Pitching Done by Hallham, who has Been Big Factor in Club Success

If one were looking for the first chapter of "The Miracle Men of 1930" one would have to go back to a mild-winter's day in a little kitchen in Joplin, Mo. There, smoking his pipe as his wife washed the dishes, sat Old Sarge Street. He was wondering what job he was going to have in baseball in the spring. He was wondering out loud, as words flow incessantly from the old man, so the better half allowed him to keep the flow and answer the phone.

"Yep, this is Gabby Street," he answered when the voice at the other end of the wire announced that it was Sam Breadon, President of all the St. Louis big and little clubs. The next Gabby thought he was going to get a minor league post the way Breadon started off, but, in the midst of the conversation with Breadon, he stopped yelling into the mouthpiece long enough to say to his wife that he had been made manager of the Cards for 1930.

"Well, I'm glad we don't have to move out of Joplin," was the congratulation the old Sarge got from his wife. He was in favor of starting managing the team right then and there, but the better half suggested that he would have troubles enough in the Spring without starting in the Winter.

Scene II finds Gabby at the head of a lot of high-priced baseball stars looking at him, wondering how long he would last and why they had been made managers.

As Street, the coach, they liked the old-timer, who was in baseball before some of them were born. The kids heard all about him catching Walter Johnson and they wanted to work out with him. In the number was Wild Bill Hallahan, so named because he was long on strolls to enemy batters. Hallahan came over and congratulated Street.

"Old Sarge, I'll do my best to help you along," said Wild Bill. "Last season you worked out with me, took a lot of pains trying to cure my lack of control, and, if there is anything in this old left arm, you will get it."

The old Sergeant was touched, but words did not fail him. They never do.

"Bill," he said, "you know you have more stuff than most of the pitchers in the league. I am an old-timer in baseball. I have seen them all. As I look at this managing job, it strikes me that any man can manage a good team. This is a good team, but what I think what you have in that arm of yours I am convinced that you can make me a miracle man. You know you can win that flag for us and they'll say I'm the man who did it."

Hallahan has delivered for Gabby. Such superstars as Frank Frisch are delivering it."

Clashed with Gabby on the field during the spring days.

It seems that Frisch loafed on a hit to first and was thrown out. That irked Gabby. He called Frankie and before he was through with his lecture, Frisch said:

"I will be there when needed. I'll be bad when games count. I will give everything I have if it is vital. Don't worry about me."

Frisch did as he promised. Other fellows who tried to go along with Gabby, the manager, as they did with Bill Terry, found themselves off the team. Street is easy, but in the pinch he is firm.

The first 16 games the Cards played this season they lost 8 by one run. Gabby juggled and juggled the line-up. He made switches until he turned that team around.

Smart men of the Cards, and there are some who have worked under managers who have worked under better minds, say Street is the best leader they have ever worked for. He stamped out petty jealousies and kidded the temperamental lads into playing their heads off.

The Cards are in front, add it is a dime to a doughnut if Street were asked to explain it all he would say:

"It's the boys. They have it and

SIR THOMAS TO RETAIN BOAT

Shamrock Will Not Be Sold In U. S. as Announced

Newport, R. I., Sept. 23—Racing for the America's Cup may be dead, but racing in class J sloops apparently is just beginning.

If plans now being formulated by the representative American and British yachtsmen eventuate, the Shamrock and the Enterprise may meet again before another year is out.

As far as rigging and sail plans go they may not be quite the same boats, but international racing in major yachts now seems to be only on the threshold of a development hitherto unknown.

Upon a meeting of yachtsmen at the New York Yacht club, next Wednesday, the future of class J and Sir Thomas Lipton's racing depends. At that meeting representatives of the New York Yacht club and the British Racing association are to discuss the basis for measuring the larger racing boats. If some agreement is reached satisfactory to both sides an invitation will be extended to American owners of class J sloops to visit England next summer to compete against British boats of the same class.

The Shamrock V unsuccessful challenger for the America's cup, may be their chief opponents and there is also a strong possibility that other boats will be built by British yachtsmen to race against the American Whirlwind, Vanilie, Resolute and others.

Shamrock V, contrary to previous announcement is not going to be sold in this country.

"I guess I'll take her back to England," said Sir Thomas today. "She's an English boat, you see, and I guess she doesn't understand American rules."

SHARKEY LOOKS FOR EASY WIN

Campolo's Record Does Not Impress Takative One

New York, Sept. 23—Jack Sharkey scaling about 197 pounds, is a well conditioned fighter when he goes into the ring against Victorio Campolo at Yankee stadium next Thursday night.

Johnny Buckley, after banking the $100,000 Sharkey is getting for the engagement, expressed the opinion the Boston sailor he nor Jack could see anything in the alternated Argentine to expect anything but a Sharkey win Thursday night.

Buckley cites the trouble Campolo had with Monte Munn and adds that the girl in question didn't seem a particularly intrepid warrior while opposing the noted tumble, Phil Scott.

This afternoon Sharkey resumes training following his day of rest at his Orangeburg camp. He plans to travel five or six rounds with the heavy today, and continue like sessions until the end of training on Tuesday. With four more training sessions until the end of training he will scrix at the 218 mark on the afternoon of his meeting with Sharkey.

On The Sport Trail

"Ga" Mangwran is rounding out a smart rugby team at Albert College and the Collegians expect to be among the gridiron clans this year. Mangwran comes up from Queen's three nights each week to send his squad through their paces. They will make the debut on Saturday afternoon when the Trenton High School will be here. The Belleville Collegiate will play in Napanee on the same afternoon. Keen rivalry exists between the Grey and Gold and Blue of the Collegiate and Mangwran of Albert will use every resource at their command to turn the trick this year.

Saturday was Brampton's Day as far as Lacrosse in Ontario goes. Brampton had three lacrosse teams in action on Saturday afternoon, Excelsiors Jr. B, and Intermediates all playing important fixtures. The Seniors, Mann Cup Champions, once again proved too good for the Toronto Tigers and they swept their old opponents off their feet in the last part of the game to win the series in two straight. The Intermediates played at home, in the second game with Campbellford. They had a three goal lead before the game started and they increased their lead by winning the second game and the round. The Brampton Juniors faced elimination at the hands of the Ferns Thistles but they rose to the occasion and won the game by 8 to 4, to even up the series. It is quite possible that Brampton may capture the three major O.A.L.A. championships for this year.

Hollywood Chief Lowers Cup Record

LEXINGTON, N.Y., Sept. 23.—The 1930 Pall Grand C ruit meeting opened here today under favorable conditions.

Hollywood Chief, driven by Liese, lowered the record for the Walnut Hall Cup to 2.01, and Protector lowered the record for the Kentucky Futurity to 2.03 but gave way the next two heats to champion Protector.

The former record for the Walnut Hall was 2.01 3-4 by Tillie Brooke in 1924, will be the last time in the Kentucky Futurity prior to this afternoon was 2.03 1-4, by Main Mc Elwyn last year.

The Indiana gelding, Orvimo Lad, proved best in the 2.12 pace, but was outsprinted in the final by the favorite the Royal Lady. Cherry, Cincinnati-owned mare, won the 2.20 trot.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA
REPARATIONS

Pursuant to a notice that appeared in the Press dated the 18th day of November, 1929, asking those of the civil population of Canada, who may have been subjected to loss and pecuniary damage arising from the destruction of life and property during the late war through the illegal warfare of the enemy, to file claims for compensation with this Department.

Public notice is hereby given that by an Order in the Executive the Governor General in Council, dated the 4th day of September, 1930, the undersigned Commissioner was appointed for the purpose of considering and completing an enquiry and reporting upon all such claims which have been heretofore been disposed of in the report of the previous Reparations Commissioner after the 14th day of December 1927.

Notice concerning the method of filing and the proof to be furnished may be obtained from the undersigned.

The last day on which claims will be accepted for consideration is the 1st day of November 1930.

IN MEMORIAM

COLLINS—In ever loving memory of a dear husband and father, Reuben Collins who passed away, Sept. 23, 1929.

God is good, He gives us strength,
To bear our cross.
He is the only One who knows,
How bitter is our loss.

We miss him at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way,
For life to us is not the same
Since he has passed away.

It's not at the time that tears are shed
Those ache most in term,
But the passionate tears in after years
And remembrance silently borne.

—Sadly missed by wife and family. s23-1t.

TAKE a tablet of Aspirin, and your suffering from headache ceases. It relieves promptly. It does not depress the heart. No after effects to fear, if you have bought the genuine tablets stamped with Bayer. So there's no use in waiting. Take advantage of it to see if a headache will "stay-on". No use to endure pain when you can have such quick comfort as Aspirin. Any man who must work on, in spite of eyestrain, or fatigue, or a cold; to women who suffer regular systemic pain, Aspirin is a blessing. Take drawings of it. Carry the pocket box. Keep the economical 100-tablet bottle in home and office. Read the proven directions enclosed in the package and learn the various uses.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Singing in the Basement

Ethel Willis Hewitt

It was closing time. Sally Granger threw the cover over the sheet music counter and turned the key in the cash register.

"They're moving the tall blonde dame over here next week," she announced suddenly, glancing at Gertie who was busy gathering up stray shreds of music from the top of a battered looking piano.

"Over here?" Gertie exclaimed. "What's the idea?" Sally shrugged her shoulders.

"Walton says she can play and sings like an angel—he ought to know. Means more money for her, but it means—" she hesitated, glancing at Gertie's dark face. Lately she looked more fagged and worn than usual.

"Sure I know. One of us'll have to go. Guess it'll be me. You need a lot of pep at this counter and the Lord knows, as hard as I try, there are times when I can't put a song over decent." Gertie's voice was flat and lifeless.

She followed Sally down the narrow steps and waited her turn to punch the clock. Walton, the floor walker, loitered near the entrance. Lately he'd been taking the blonde girl home in his little blue roadster.

"I've got to stop at the drug store to get something for Buddy's cough" Gertie said, as they left the store.

"I didn't get an hour's sleep last night."

"Poor kid, ain't he no better?" Sally asked, sympathetically.

"Not much, he don't get the proper food. It takes a lot to keep a kid going, and him being delicate makes it worse." There was a weary note in Gertie's voice.

"But he's all I've got, and he's worth it," she added quickly.

Threading their way through the crowd on ninth Street, they stopped at the drug store for the cough syrup. In front of a shabby looking house, half way down the block, they came to a stand still.

"Come on in a while, it'll cheer Buddy up, and keep me from thinking. Gosh—I guess I need something to keep me from doing all right." Gertie laughed, a rather strained, hopeless little laugh.

Sally hesitated, she was tired—more over she had to help her mother with supper, but something about the forlorn little face made her follow Gertie up the squeaking steps to the third floor front room. Buddy was nowhere in sight. With a look of alarm in her dark eyes, Gertie rushed wildly down stairs, returning in a few minutes, smiling but out of breath and as white as a ghost.

"He's gone with Elva to the park. I wish Mrs. Mullen wouldn't let him go off that way. Gosh, if anything happened to Buddy—it's just about finish me." She sank limply into the big rocker.

Sally looked around the shabby little room. Somehow Gertie always managed to keep it looking decent. There was a picture of Buddy on the table, and one of his father, a pleasant looking young chap, who had died three years ago. It was soon after that Gertie had come to work at the music counter.

"Gosh, I'm sorry about that blonde. Always something to take the joy out of living. God knows the salary ain't so much, but losing it means a lot of tramping around and being looked over 'till you feel like a prize steer at a state fair." Gertie leaned back wearily in her chair.

"It wouldn't be so bad if it wasn't for Buddy—I could get along somehow." she added gloomily.

Sally looked at the drooping little figure. Three years of struggle had taken it out of her, and the struggle wouldn't let up, not with a frail young ster to raise. There seemed no doubt in Gertie's mind as to which of them would go. Sally thought it was pretty certain too, but she smiled across at Gertie.

"Cheer up, kid. You ain't got the only chance of losing out. I better be moving. I'm hoisting up supper at the house. Don't think too much about getting fired. Something might turn up. Walton might marry the blonde or somethin'." She gave Gertie a little hug and hurried down the steps.

But Walton didn't marry the blonde, instead he made it pretty plain that Saturday, one of them would draw a yellow ticket in their envelope. Gertie couldn't hide how she felt about it. Her playing was half hearted and when it came her turn at a song, Sally made some excuse to keep her at the piano.

"You play this better than I do," she'd said, or some other remark that kept her real reason from being too apparent.

Walton sauntered down the isle toward the water cooler. Sally slipped from behind the counter and followed him.

"Does this Miss What's-her-name coming in our department mean one of us must go?" she asked abruptly.

Walton gave her a condescending little smile.

"If you mean Miss Jordon—I'm afraid it does. In all departments there are changes from time to time," he remarked, politely. "I'm sorry," he added.

"You needn't be," she snapped, turning on her heel and making for the general manager's office.

The short man behind the mahogany desk, looked up.

"What can I do for you Miss—"

"Granger," Sally prompted.

"I'm quitting tomorrow. I believe the floor manager has some one to fill my place, so it won't inconvenience you."

The manager glanced at her over his gold rimmed spectacles.

"What's the trouble, Miss—"

"No trouble, just looking for something better than shouting songs across the counter in the basement of a department store the rest of my life." She turned toward the door, leaving the manager staring her in wide eyed amazement.

Back at the counter, Gertie was thundering an already hopeless song. Sally finished it for the customer just as the gong sounded.

"Thanks for helping me out. I'm about all in" Gertie remarked gloomily.

"Well snap out of it. It ain't you time's gettin' tired." Sally watched the tense expression, on Gertie's dark face relax.

"You mean—" she gasped, unable to go on.

"Just so—after tomorrow you fondle the ivory to the crooning of the tall blonde's voice. I hope she knocks 'em' cold." Sally gave a hard little laugh.

They were the last to punch the clock. Walton waited impatiently to lock the door. The tall blonde girl was already in the car. Gertie, her whole listless little figure seeming to take on new life, caught Sally's arm.

"Oh, I'm sorry honey—I never thought it'd be you."

There was genuine distress in the dark eyes.

"I thought something would happen maybe," she added.

"Something did—anyway, shouting a basement full of blues songs six days a week ain't such a sinecure. I'm not going to cry about giving it the go'by. C'mon on," she chortled, glancing knowingly toward Walton, "we're blocking traffic."

Cork, Ireland, is now able to maintain her transatlantic air base.

87% OF MEN ARE "COFFEE CRANKS"

So here's a MAN'S COFFEE ....made for men

You probably have one in your home too. A kind and courtly man perhaps—but very particular about coffee. We call such men "Coffee Cranks," because a recent investigation has revealed that 87% of men are dissatisfied with their coffee.

And so we have blended Blue Ribbon Coffee—not as the experts say it should be blended, but according to the taste of thousands of critical men. It is truly a "man's coffee" with rich, vigorous flavor. A coffee of surpassing quality—that makes the morning smoke taste better, and adds inimitable piquancy to every meal.

Ask your grocer for Blue Ribbon Coffee. It comes in pound and half pound tins —vacuum-sealed to keep its flavor ever-fresh. A rare treat for any man.

WAR MEMORIAL

War memorial ideas have again an opportunity to present themselves at a public meeting called by Mayor Reid. Some months ago the question came up and was disposed of for the time being by the decision that the entrances to the lower bridge should not be made a memorial to the men who fell in the war and to the fame of those who served and survived the struggle of armaments.

Mayor Reid promised at that time that the matter would be taken up later in the year and true to the promise has acted citizens to meet and present their opinions on the form which the local tribute should assume.

LIFE IS SACRED

Lord Moynihan speaking in Toronto, took issue against the idea in the minds of some persons that life should be ended by law where there is intense suffering with no chance of recovery. Humanity shudders at pain and suffering but feels a greater shock at the suggestion that life should be ended after hope is abandoned. Lord Moynihan, an eminent surgeon, has been brought into intimate touch with the physical ills of the world and should be able to express a fair attitude. He is against the ending of life in the event of incurable diseases for he feels that life is so sacred that it ought not to be taken. Human law and public feeling support the doctor in this view. The sanctity of life must ever be upheld.

AVOIDING SIGNS OF AGE

Lloyd George has had his locks shorn. But he will still be the David of his party against the Goliath of whatever party chance he runs into.

Fashions change. Lloyd George is said to have as shapely a head as any girl. But will the public look upon the shorn David (or Samson) as they did upon the paternal locks of the erstwhile Liberal leader?

Sometimes one cannot help but think there is too great an attempt in this age to worship youth. Men become very aged and look like withered youths and pass to the grave without once having become august elders among the people. Is this age losing something by too much devotion to the arts which have one object— to imitate and to make the elders resemble young girls and boys. India and China respect age, but there is hardly any admitted age in this country to respect.

Perhaps it makes little difference whether one tries to look young or august in his later years. The ancient Romans wore smooth faces and cropped hair, while the Greeks of classic times had their locks long and revered and grew beards. Both peoples played a great part in world history, the master-of-fact Roman being the more energetic, the conqueror type such as one might expect from the smooth-faced race, while the Greeks of the beards and lengthy locks taught the world beauty and meditation.

Even in this day there occasionally walks a man from another age with a beard which lends him a venerable appearance. Doubtless this age is losing something in avoiding the signs of age and experience.

LOOKING BACK FROM THE FUTURE

When the distant future looks back upon the present age it will doubtless remark the wide attention given to education and to the training of the young, to the schools and universities which are doing their best to raise the general level of education and to the safeguarding of the public.

Belleville is a sample city. It has a very large school population which is so large that the problem of accommodation is acute. This is a healthy sign that the city is devoting much of its attention to preparing the future generation for the great opportunities which face it. Again, Belleville has perhaps the largest class of students leaving for colleges and universities in the city's history. This means that the work begun in the city lower schools and carried on in the collegiate has borne fruit— it has created a desire for greater knowledge and for the resultant greater opportunity for service of mankind.

Now when Belleville has problems of taxes for school purposes, and tax problems for bridges and other public undertakings, such as the filter, it has the surest sign that the city is alert and growing. If the city could have got along without two new bridges and a new collegiate and a filter, though the bridges were getting into a bad state of disrepair, and the water was not fit to drink at times and though the old high school leaked, and was antiquated) there would have been no increase in taxes. But Belleville met the problems and did what should be done by any city—met them in the proper spirit, not dodged them.

If the city had been content to go without all these benefits, the taxes would have been lower and yet, with all that, the community would have been the poorer. The burdens which education brings are heavy enough but they should arouse the higher spirit of man in that they are the unselfish expression of one generation endeavouring to help the oncoming armies of young children who will some day have their own task to perform in passing on the torch to another generation. What is true in education is largely true in other aspects. Bridges and filters are the signs of the times.

Some declare that after the present year's spending of money there ought to be declared a holiday of building for some years to give the city an opportunity to catch up with the expenses and to allow some of the indebtedness to be paid off. That probably is correct. The expenditures necessary this year really emphasize the need the city has had for new bridges and a water purification plant.

A WIFE'S REQUESTS

By Aline Michaelis

I would have you give me
Lovely, fragile things,
Wreaths of budding roses,
Verses gay as wings.

I would have you utter
Tender words each day
Brimmed with subtle power
To keep fears away;

Words none else counts weighty,
Meant for me alone,
And to me more precious
Than all jewels known.

I would have you bring me
All your hopes and fears,
All your dreams for witness
Of our loyal years.

I would have you keep me
In a realm apart
In the high-walled garden
Of your happy heart.

"BILL" DOWNEY'S HORSE ALSO RAN

Fleur d'Orange III, by Contat out of Reine d'Orange, a two-year-old owned by William H. Downey, formerly of Brockville, ran in the third race at the recent summer racec meet at Pau, France. Although Fleur d'Orange III did not figure in the money, the filly made a promising showing and is expected later to give a good account of herself. Mr. and Mrs. Downey, who have been spending the summer on the continent, expect to sail for America at the end of September.

SCHOOL FAIR AT RAWDON IS HELD

Splendid Exhibits Featured Township Fall Exhibition

Rawdon, Sept. 23 (By Mail)—Rawdon Township held their annual School Fair at Springbrook on Wednesday, Sept. 17, with a large attendance. It wis a lovely warm day and early in the forenoon, cars and trucks wended their way to the scene of activity and the children were busy placing their exhibits.

The livestock was numerous, there being one colt, ten calves, two sheep and a good showing of poultry.

The showing of grain and roots of seed were keenly contested as well as the exhibits of potatoes, roots, vegetables and flowers. Many gorgeous arrays of table bouquets as well as a few blooms each of asters, sweet peas, marigolds, cosmos, salpiglosis, calendula, etc., were in evidence.

This year the only exhibits judged in this section were those grown from seed supplied by the department and for this reason several showings were not allowed to enter. Pupils must show vegetables and flowers according to the seed they choose in the spring.

The apples, tomatoes were real good and the entries were numerous.

There were also school lunches, several plates of bran muffins and mac, aroons, about 15 tempting layer cakes and about 18 boxes of maple cream candy.

The sewing, especially the towels, aprons, wash cloths and darned stockings all showed good skill.

In the farm and home mechanics there was one wooden rule, 3 toy windmills, 4 foot stools 5 bouquets of waxed sweet peas, one rope halter and three relief maps.

There were 3 knot collections, 3 of insects, 4 seed sets, besides nature study and native wood collections.

May exhibits of writing, art and 2 scrap books were shown.

A full list of the prize winners will be given.

At an early date.

The directors are:

S.S. No. 1—Donald Rodgers.
" 2—Harold White.
" 4—Harry McAdam.
" 5—Ronald Brown.
" 6—Blanche McMullen.

PICTON STORE BROKEN OPEN

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, Sept. 23—James Inrig's drug store was broken into and the till rifled of its contents amounting to $20, mostly in silver. It is not yet known if any goods were taken from the shelves. Entrance to the store was gained in an unusual way. A borer was used to make holes in the panel of a rear door so that a section fell out, enabling the thief or thieves to reach in and turn the spring lock. So far no arrests have been made.

Work will begin next week on the new service station to be built on the corner of Main and Bowery Streets. This is being erected by the Cities Service Oil Company in conjunction with Mr. Colin F. Hepburn. About $50,000 will be involved in the deal and the building will give employment to a number of local men who are out of work. This company has also purchased the Ryatt and Hart property on Lake Street where storage tanks will be erected.

A meeting was held at the Hicksite meeting house, Bloomfield, on Sunday 21st, to discuss the question of perpetual care and the upkeep of the Hicksite Burying Ground which is one of the pioneer burying grounds. The meeting was called by Mrs. Elias Cooper of Wellington.

HER PAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 22 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three bottes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

NEW ILLUMINATED FOUNT PLANNED

Raynor Construction Co'Y. Complete Work in Prince Edward County

Picton, Sept. 23 (By Mail)—At the Kiwanis Club meeting on Tuesday evening Professor Fred Waigen suggested an illuminated founta'n similar to that in Peterborough, be erected in Picton. He described the illuminated fountain in a vivid style. The fountain sprays water in the air about twenty-five feet high and by means of an automatic electric illumination, changing color effects are achieved. The speaker described it as one of the most beautiful things he had ever seen, explaining that it was one of the sights of Peterborough. Roland Haddon was booster at this meeting and gave short talk on tea. The club is now meeting at the Globe Hotel.

With the completion of a fine asphalt pavement on Ferguson and Mary Streets, the Raynor Construction brought to a close their work in Picton and Prince Edward County. The machinery is now being loaded on cars at the station to be shipped to Brockville. The crusher and mixer is a huge piece of machinery and it took two steam rollers with block and tackle to haul it. The company employees leave Picton with the satisfaction of a work well done and citizens generally will welcome their return another season.

Belleville B. Y. P. U. were guests of the Picton Union on Tuesday evening. Both Picton and Belleville talent contributed to the program. The Picton B.Y.P.U. gave a welcome song followed by short talks by Rev. H. Jones of Belleville and Rev. H. A. Edwards of Picton, solos by Frank Hitchon, Belleville, recitation by Mr. Perkins of the visiting Union, duet by Misses Frances and Mary Weymark, Picton, and piano solo by Mr. Alex Gordon of Belleville.

Chalet were enjoyed after which lunch was served. This get-together was much enjoyed by all.

Skidding into the ditch about two miles east of Cannonoque, car driven by Capt. Thos. Heffernan, came to grief, smashing one wheel. The accident happened Sunday morning. Capt. and Mrs. Heffernan being enroute to Picton. Neither sustained any injury.

Many Picton people attended at the Kiwanis Karnival at Belleville. The fashion shows were of an especial interest to the ladies.

GUIDE COUNCIL HONOR LEADER

Members of St. Magdalene Held a Corn Roast

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, Sept. 23—The Girl Guide Council and officers met at the Parish House recently in honor of their president Mrs. J. P. French, before she leaves for her new home in Galt. Many regrets were expressed on losing one who had filled the office of President so successfully, and who has worked so faithfully for the uplift of the young girls who formed the company. A beautiful purse was presented to the guest of honor from the council.

Mr. Harold Minaker, Hallowell, whose barn was recently destroyed by fire is building another. It will be of steel. The foundation is already completed.

A partridge flew through the window of Mr. C. H. North's residence on Mary Street. The glass, which was of double thickness, was smashed to atoms and the curtains were torn. The bird landed in the middle of the room and when picked up it was apparently stunned. It was later released.

The members of the choir of St. Mary Magdalene Church held a weiner roast at Bayside Park. After a jolly supper had been partaken of a story telling and singing by chorus whiled away a happy hour with the guests grouped around the camp fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Craigh are visiting friends in Rochester, N.Y.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh McCullough are holidaying in Prince Edward County.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

She paid, and Don Stillwater that, after that first day at the office she same day with news of the letter from his uncle. Lying in the darkness, Sonia imagined she could smell again the fragrance of the roses she had gathered for the dining table, could hear her father's "This will kill me, Sonia," her mother crying in the night.

They had labored, sacrificed, suffered all the misery of separation that she might come to Chicago to this little room; that she might be here longing for the sound of a familiar voice, suppose she returned to Muncie? She could imagine the light brimming up to her father's faded eyes, her mother's question, and those other critical assured glances that would accompany her return.

"No!" said Sonia aloud, swallowing the lump that had risen in her throat. "I wanted to come. Here I am and here I stay!"

Dry eyes she turned to the wall and fell asleep.

The next day it became easier. She realized that most girls would have taken his question as a lead for this friendliness in a big city. But not Sonia. And her ruse worked. Before their dance was over he had whispered, "Lonely or not, I'm coming to carry you off some night."

It was almost midnight when Maxine's bell rang and she admitted a large, handsome man. Sonia had never seen him before, but he seemed to be well known to the rest of the party. He was older than most of them with a distinguished manner, as if he was accustomed to attention.

Maxine introduced him to Sonia as her "daddy," Mac MacGregor. For a moment, Sonia thought he really was her father, then seeing them drink from the same glass and kiss each other, she decided Maxine had meant quite otherwise.

When the party broke up it was Bertie who insisted on seeing Sonia home; Bertie who, in the shadow of her respectable home, squeezed her hand and whispered, "I like you. We are going to see lots of each other."

"Not if I can help it," thought Sonia, evading his coy fingers.

"I know class when I see it," continued the fictious Bertie, warmed by her smile and too much of the wine. "And when I see it, believe me, I go after it."

"That for you, Bertie," Sonia safe in her roof, snapped her fingers, impatiently. . .

Her first party was over. And as a result she found herself wishing for the clean masculinity of Joe Carter. Strangely disappointed, she stepped out of the green chiffon and yawning sought her bed.

Sonia found that the party at Maxine's had completed her initiation.

She was accepted now as one of "the gang." That meant more invitations, within the bookkeeping department, whose whispers and nods carefully excluded any one "outside". It made her days more interesting to be invited to lunch with one or more of the girls, to hear a juicy bit of gossip between cigarettes in the Greeting room. She found the office, stiff with respectability as it apparently was, had its scandals on the inside.

Maxine told her of a salesman who drank periodically, and was away from the office for days at a time. There was one of the officers whose friendliness with his stenographer was a favorite topic for luncheon conversations. The majority of the girls' love affairs, however, were with men out, side the office,

Violet had her "shelk", a college youth, who telephoned her every noon. Jinny's engagements were carried on secretly, much to the annoyance of Frankie and Fern, who spent hours trying to draw her out on where she had been the night before.

Maxine had told Sonia that her evenings were all given to Mac MacGregor. Yet, walking one day toward Michigan avenue, they met Mac and he would have passed them if Maxine had not stopped him.

"Where are you going, Mac?" gruffly, it seemed to Sonia.

"I suppose you couldn't came with us?" Maxine asked, wistfully.

"Sorry, but I have to meet a fellow," Maxine's blue eyes clouded.

"I don't see why you're always too busy to go to lunch with me."

"No can do! See you to-night. Bye-by."

Sonia was amazed.

"I'd kill a man who talked to me like that," she thought, not daring to look at Maxine, she was so embarrassed for her.

Maxine dabbed at her wet eyes and smiled.

"I'm a fool to care, Sonia. But I do. I ought never to give him a date again."

Sonia had been flattered at Maxine's evident preference for her. She was so much younger, younger than any other girl in the department.

"But you don't act young," Maxine said. "You have so much poise. You know in spite of my being head of this department, I go all to pieces sometimes. Things upset me terribly."

The girls had discovered that Sonia could not be tantalized into a rage. The color might rush to her face when they teased her, but she always took refuge in silence.

Ettie kept his promise. Several days after Maxine's party he stopped at her table, touching her hand with a clammy forefinger.

"How about a movie tonight?"

"I'm sorry," she answered sweetly. "I have another engagement."

"You have? Well, tomorrow night then. The week is young and full of evenings. Your acquaintance can't be so heavy yet that they're all taken."

Her persistence and her desire not to offend him, since she worked in the same office, caused her to accept.

She did not want to go. She thought of having a headache, but that would merely put off the evil duty. So that evening she dressed without enthusiasm, determined to have it end as quickly as possible.

He met her in the lobby nodding approvingly.

"You always have good looking shoes. Few girls seem to realize that a sloppy heel ruins the classiest costume."

"Oh, I don't know," Sonia came back indifferently. "So many men have raved on that subject I think most of us are fairly well shod now. Where do we go?"

They were bound, he explained, for the Chez—, sitting in the dark logy Bertie's hand attempted to find hers. But she folded them tightly in her lap. The contact of his gently insistent fingers against hers almost spoiled the picture for her.

"What an old maid I'm getting to be," she thought, amused. "And how Don Stillwater, wasted his good advice. If I stay here a few more months I won't be able to be on a date at all."

INSTALLMENT VI

"What shall we do now?" inquired Bertie as they walked out of the theatre. "Shall we go somewhere and dance?" The thought of dancing with him nauseated Sonia.

"Oh, not to-night. It's almost 11 o'clock. Let's go to Maxine's."

"What's the idea?" raked Bertie. "I'm supposed to be having this date with you."

"Oh, well, let's call it a night then and go home."

"Ah! God, you're a disagreeable little thing to take around. Chicago dames have to pull a different line from that girlie. There are too many girls in town for you to act so uppish."

Sonia had an intense desire to tell him to go and find another one now but her resolution to stand well at the office forced her to smile and say, "Now Bertie, don't be so sensitive. What do you want to do?"

"That's better. And since you're so sweet about it. I'll take you to Maxine's."

There was no answer when they rang at Maxine's apartment. Sonia was genuinely disappointed. The intense night had helped entertain Bertie for the rest of the evening. But as they strolled down the steps the door opened enough to show Maxine's fluff of blond hair.

"Who is it? Oh, hello Sonia and Bertie! Wait until I get something on and you can come in."

She admitted them, clad in a heavy bathrobe.

"It's cold in here. I was just going to bed," she explained.

Even in the dim light Sonia could see she had been crying. She wished then that she had not insisted on Bertie's bring her. But Bertie was already winding the phonograph.

"Let's dance."

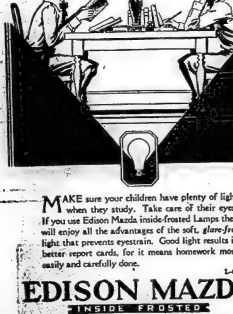
"The machine's broken, Bertie," said Maxine. "I might whistle for you."

Bertie had a better idea.

"Get dressed, Maxine, and we'll go to that place down the street where they hire the orchestra. I have to dance."

Maxine hesitated while Sonia said, urgently, "Oh please do come, Maxine."

"All right. Though I don't know what Bertie will do with both of us. It won't take me a minute to dress."



So Sonia was forced to dance again with Bertie, fingers clenched in his moist hand. The evening had its compensations, however. For sitting at her table in the dim light, while Maxine and Bertie were dancing, Sonia saw a man, also alone. He was young, dark and interesting looking. The glance his blue eyes sent Sonia was full of appreciation. And over the smoke of her cigarette, she returned it, wistfully.

"Why can't I ever meet a man like that?" she was thinking.

It seemed to her that the charm of his personality swept across the room. When Bertie danced with Maxine again Sonia sent a swift glance to that other table. The young man was still there. When he met her glance he came across to her.

"Won't you finish this dance with me?"

Tall Gun-Toter and Tiny Ally Sought by Police of Province

Robbed Taxi Driver, Stole Car After Tying Him to Tree

OTHER ROBBERIES

Highways of Eastern Ontario Combed by Provincial Police

OTTAWA, Sept. 24 (CP) — All highways in Eastern Ontario are under heavy police guard today in an effort to apprehend "Matt and Jeff," who attacked a Hull taxi-driver yesterday, tied him to a tree and drove off in his car after stealing his watch and $9.00. They are believed to be the same who robbed a restaurant at Hawkesbury, Ontario, Monday night and stole a taxicab at Three Rivers last Sunday.

For the second night in succession, city and county police spent last night searching the territory around Ottawa for one of a tall gun-toting bandit and his tiny confederate.

WAR LORD RULES IN OLD PEIPIN

Takes Over Former Pekin from Northern Rebels

Tokio, Sept. 24—Chang Hsueh-liang, Dictator of Manchuria, ruled in Peipin his troops having driven out without fighting the rebels of the Northern China war lords alliance.

Surprising news broke that Chang, 30 years old, would attempt to set up his own government in China's ancient Capital, formerly known as Peking, as his father, Chang Tso-lin, often did in descents from his Capital at Mukden.

Chang struck when Northern rebel and Nationalist Government troops were exhausted by six months of internecine warfare and unable to make marked gains. Although claimed by the Nationalists as their ally since May, he had remained aloof until the time came to become the deciding factor.

7,259 WORKERS OUT OF JOBS IN AUGUST

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 24—A reduction of 7,259 workers to 407,423 was reported in the index of 3,254 firms in Ontario during the month of August, according to the monthly employment returns issued by the Dominion Bureau of statistics. On Sept. 1 the total of 7,335 firms in Canada reported 1,023,623 persons employed as against 1,043,441 in the previous month.

STOLEN CAR CLUE

Cobourg, Sept. 24—The finding of a blue coach, which was reported stolen Friday night, may prove an important clue to the city and provincial police in locating the hit-and-run motorist who struck and almost instantly killed John Farewell, 28 year-old labourer, on the base line road, east of here, last Friday night. A short time after the fatality occurred, W. G. Miller, local real estate agent, reported that his car, had been stolen.

WHEAT AT LOWEST

Winnipeg, Sept. 24—Nervous trading, expressing fear of declining wheat values watched the Winnipeg market ease to lower levels, helpless to stem the downward trend. Uncertainly marked the opening quotations but mid-season witnessed a plunge to the lowest figures in 34 years, the October future falling to 73 1-4 cents per bushel.

"U. S. OF EUROPE" PLAN IS STUDIED

GENEVA, Sept. 24.—CP.—Every country's representative in the League of Nations met to construct themselves as a special committee for the study of Aristide Briand's project for federation of European states. The meeting was behind closed doors and the French Foreign Minister proceeded to outline his plans before the representatives of 27 nations.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 24-(CP)—Proposal for a mutual Canadian United States agreement to strengthen the enforcement of prohibition along seaboards and at the same time eliminate menaces to navigation may be made shortly by the State Department to the Canadian Government as an outcome of the seizures by "U.S." constguards of the Canadian schooner "Pic Light".

HORSEMAN FACES PERJURY CHARGE

Charles Sandrelli of North Bay, is Committed for Trial

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 24.—On information laid by D. H. Saville, Toronto investigator for the Ontario Pire Marshal's Department, Charles Sandrelli, North Bay, today was committed for trial by Magistrate S. Wenger, on charges of perjury, said to have been made on February 28, 1930, and March 12 following the death of the race horse, Ingomar Gratton, in a fire at the Dufferin race track on February 22, 1930, at 3.30 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Sandrelli was represented by Peter White, K.C., Toronto.

Ingomar Gratton, according to the evidence of Dr. F. E. Hopkins, Cookville, and Mrs. Hopkins, was purchased for $1,100 from the veterinary by Mr. Sandrelli, on February 22, 1928. The horse's dispatel was $100 and a note for $1,000 due in six months.

Investigator Saville said that Sandrelli stated under oath at the office of the Chief Engineer on the respective dates that he had purchased the horse for $2,500, paying $1,500 cash and tendering a note for $1,000. Evidence was given by Dr. and Mrs. Hopkins, Investigator Saville, Miss L. Griscombe, court reporter at North Bay and V. Rosatelli, cattle dealer, and C. Chapman, horse dealer at Toronto.

Charles Sandrelli has raced horses in Belleville on many occasions, in fact, Ingomar Gratton performed in the city, when in the barn of Dr. Hopkins Cookville.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—Maxwell Byers, President of the Western Maryland Railroad, was shot and killed and Dudley D. Gray, vice president, seriously wounded in a pistol battle in the company's office.

Season's Crop Totally Destroyed in Blaze

Disastrous Fire Causes Very Heavy Loss at Millbrown

A large frame barn, containing all the season's crop and threshing separating, owned by Percy Reid of Millbrown was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire started in the stack at the back of the barn from an unknown cause, but it is believed to have been caused from a heated stack. The separator was owned by Robert Little, also of Millbrown, and every effort was made to save it, but the fire spread with such rapidity it was impossible to approach the barn within a few hundred feet. Mr. Reid had stored in the barn all his hay for the year and his grain, which he had started to thresh only yesterday morning. He also lost a number of sets of harness and other articles that are generally stored in the barn. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $3,000.00 only partially covered by insurance.

POLICE CALLED TO QUIET STIR

Toronto Tabernacle Scene of Confusion Last Night

TORONTO, Sept. 24—Toronto Gospel Tabernacle, at 42 Gerrard Street East, the setting for an evangelistic campaign which is being conducted by Rev. J. C. Kellogg, "The Cowboy Evangelist," last evening was the scene of excitement, induced not by religious fervor, but by contention and resentment. As Rev. William Fraser, former secretary of Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields, minister of Jarvis Street Baptist Church and now pastor of the Ambassador Baptist Church and now pastor of the Ambassador Baptist Church at Windsor, Ont., attempted to make a communication regarding Rev. Mr. Kellogg he was refused a hearing. Only a few sentences were read by Mr. Fraser, when a voice shouted, "Put that fellow out." The interruption was followed by an effort to eject Mr. Fraser, and bedlam broke loose. Rev. Mr. Fraser declined to leave the Tabernacle and bracing himself by holding to the back of the seat held his post.

When the confusion had subsided a little Mr. Fraser approached Rev. Oswald J. Smith, the pastor of the Toronto Gospel Tabernacle, and handed him the communication. Rev. Mr. Smith perused the document, making, it is said, ambiguous comment which merely "clouded the issue." The police were called in to restore order, and the meeting continued.

Dr. Kellogg was an expert cowboy and heavyweight wrestler before his conversion and was known as the 19 hundred heavyweight champion of the world. For three years he was associated with Dr. Mark Matthews, pastor of the largest Presbyterian church in the world. He has given much study to prophetic, industrial, social and religious problems. He deals with modern problems and reason in the light of the Scriptures.

SIR BRIAN MAHON DIES AGED 67 YEARS

DUBLIN, Sept. 24.— CP — General Sir Brian Mahon, for a year commander of the British troops in Ireland died today in his 68th year He led the famous flying column which came to the relief of Marking in May 1900 lifting the siege of Col. Robert Baden Powell and the small force which had held out against the Boers for 217 days.

CLOSE SEASON FOR GILL NET FISHING

Close season in gill net fishing in the Bay of Quinte this year will be from October 25th to Nov. 9th, according to information received by Mr. L. J. Lyons, Warden. There has been some doubt in the minds of fishermen, which this announcement will set at rest.

The fire broke out shortly after one o'clock in the straw stack, when the threshers had begun the afternoon work. The threshing was being done by a tractor and when the blaze was noticed, the tractor was used to try and pull the separator off the barn floor. The machine was nearly new and Mr. Little will suffer a heavy loss.

Rear-End Collision Occurred

Car Owned by E. T. Hinchcliffe Struck by Labatt Truck

TWO IN HOSPITAL

Freight Train Stopped by Prompt Action — Car Damaged

Four persons miraculously escaped serious injury or perhaps death, about three o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a heavy Labatt's beer truck crashed into the rear of a car owned and driven by Mr. E. T. Hinchcliffe, Sidney township, knocking the Hinchcliffe car some feet and clutching the truck.

Mrs. Hinchcliffe, who was accompanied by his wife, had driven his daughter to Kingston, where she will attend Queen's University, and was returning to Sidney. Believing that he came to the Deseronto crossing of the Canadian National Railways. He stopped in order to see if the track was clear, a freight train happened to be running in the direction of Belleville.

At this moment the Labatt's truck, driven by H. Nichols, of London, Ontario, who was accompanied by J. Taylor, of the same city, crashed into the rear of the Hinchcliffe car, knocking it completely over the crossing. The front end of the truck was ditched. A bystander assured he feared that speeding gathered run up the track and succeeded in flagging the freight train and stopping it before it crashed into the rear end of the Page truck, which was directly across the tracks.

Nichols and Taylor are today lying in the Belleville General hospital suffering from a severe shaking up. Taylor has his leg broken. The two men are under the competent care and direction of Dr. Gerald S. Stobie. "Neither man is seriously injured," the doctor stated to the Ontario Intelligencer this morning.

Outside of the shock and a slight shaking up neither Mr. or Mrs. Hinch cliffe were injured at all. The car suffered considerable damage, however All the fenders and running boards were either stripped off or badly smashed, the left front wheel was broken off and the spokes in one of the back wheels were broken. Some of the witnesses of the accident finally succeeded in driving the truck off the crossing and the freight train was held help up for any great length of time.

Radium Cancer Institute In Ontario is Planned, Premier Says

QUEBEC, Sept. 24 — Establishment of a great radium institute in Toronto for the cure of cancer is in contemplation, Premier Ferguson announced before sailing for Quebec yesterday. Coupled with the opening of the Ontario Building in London on a date to be fixed, this object is one of the purposes of the visit of the Ontario Premier to the Old Country. From the contemplated institute, in connection with which consultation of a hospital is in veiw, radium would be distributed to various parts of the Province. Mr. Ferguson said he would see several London specialists regarding the proposal, and declared an important announcement would likely be made by him in the matter on his return to Toronto in November.

"There is tremendous concern in the cancer scourge," Premier Ferguson declared, "and people interested professionally and otherwise are prepared to contribute in a large way toward such an institute if the Ontario Government will endow it with sufficient radium."

The proposal, Mr. Ferguson said, was for the parties interested to turn over property worth about $500,000 if the Government would contribute a similar amount in the purchase of radium. The scheme of operation in mind was one of co-operative organization as between the medical profession and the Province.

"It is just another evidence," Premier Ferguson declared, "of the public-spirited character of the people of Ontario."

West-siders Find New Bridge a Convenience

City Engineer Mott Says Structure Will be Lighted

The temporary footbridge, used by pedestrians as the old upper bridge is being torn down and a new one built, will be well lighted, C. A. Mott, the city engineer stated to the press this morning. The bridge itself will be lighted, as will the passage at Elvins Store. This is necessary for the safety of passengers on the structure.

Although the foot-brid.. is sound quite low, there will be no trouble from high waters. "I think," said Mr. Mott this morning, "that the new bridge will be sufficiently completed by November 1st so that pedestrians can use it. Of course, vehicular traffic will not be permitted.

"The river rarely figures before this first of November and by that time we won't have to worry."

Mr. Mott said that the water in the Moira does not rise until about the 1st of August and was of the opinion that Autumn rains would not affect the height appreciably. "We figure that they will be well started on their concrete pouring in about two weeks," he said today.

Love's Young Dream Is Blasted by the Police

Minor Tyron Enticed Young School Girl Away from Home

Securing information as to the whereabouts of the eloping couple, Provincial Constables Bert Hammer and Campbell journeyed to Point Anne, early today and brought Minor Tyron, aged 15, and Miss Pake of Pievna, in Lennox Addington County to headquarters, where they were detained for Provincial Constable Barrett of Napanee, who had a warrant for the arrest of Tyron on a charge of abduction. It is alleged that Tyron, induced Miss Pake, who it is understood, is attending school at Pievna, to leave her home with him. The father of the girl swore out the warrant for Tyron's arrest and Provincial Constable Barrett immediately started a search for the young couple. Yesterday it was learned, that Tyron had relatives in Point Anne and this information being conveyed from Napanee. Inspector Loughead through his officers, instituted an investigation with the above results.

Constable Barrett will arrive in the city today and take the young couple back to the eastern town, the girl to return to her home and Tyron to stand trial on a charge of alleged abduction.

MINOR MOTOR ACCIDENT

A minor accident occured on Front Street this morning when a car owned by Percy Alexander was damaged when it collided with the rear end of a truck owned by Egbert Cline and driven by Ray Cline of Frankford. The truck was backed near Kellaway's store where the cargo of melons was being taken off, and Mr. Alexander swinging around from Bridge Street, did not notice the vehicle in time to avoid an accident. The head-lights and fenders of the Alexander car were damaged. Police Constable Fred Isard investigated.

ACCIDENT REPORTED

Frank Shipley who resides near Stirling reported to Highway Traffic Officer W. O. Prink that he collided with a number of horses wandering on the highway at three o'clock this morning near the village. He stated that the animals were the property of gypsies camping in the vicinity who are said to have allowed the equines at large with their front feet tied to prevent their escape. The car was damaged to some extent in the accident.

THROWN FROM TRUCK

Phyllis Hall the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hall, LL.B., is thrown from a truck ahd the pavement at the intersection of Front and Bridge Street yesterday afternoon, when the door on the side he was sitting over open as the turn about the dummy was made. The child was not seriously hurt and was able to proceed to her home with the father. Constable Isard investigated and found no blame attached to the driver. Mr. Hall was going south on Front Street intending to turn east on Bridge street east and in swinging around the dummy policeman, the door flew open and young Phyllis was thrown to the pavement.

Elevator Unofficially Opened at Cataraqui

800,000 Bushels of Grain Unloaded in One Day

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 24—(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)— The new eastern terminal for the grain traffic of the Great Lakes come into operation here today when H. R. Vanderslay of the Canada S. S. Lines came alongside the company's own elevator which has just been completed at Little Cataraqui Bay. The unloading of 80,000 bushels of rye was not the official opening of the elevator which will be held next spring when the six hundred foot ships from the Upper Lakes come through the new Welland Canal to Kingston. Yet it was a significant event in lake shipping, as it means that the largest of the freighters will bring their grain cargoes 186 miles nearer to Montreal with unbroken bulk. This two and a half million bushel elevator is operated by the Canada S. S. lines through a subsidiary, the Kingston Elevator Coy. The selection of Kingston as the site of the terminal was made in the midst of keen controversies between various lake and river ports. Since the Kingston Elevator Co's construction commenced, a second company has completed plans for grain storage equipment. The elevator which commenced work today is a long, narrow structure with loading facilities on one side and unloading facilities on the other. Two travelling marine towers, each having a capacity of 35,000 bushels per hour on the dip comprise the unloading machinery. Two piers are provided for the loading of canal boats at rate of 800,000 bushels per day. The largest upper lake ships will be accommodated at an unloading dock 700 feet by 300 feet wide. Lower lake canallers can load from two berths in a six hundred foot dock. Car loading facilities are located at the outer end of the elevator. A separate building houses the electrical substation administration offices and millwright shop.

Lightning Struck Schooner, 10 Lost

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., Sept. 24— Worn by three days and nights of vanishing hope, their bodies stung by 70 hours of harsh wind and salt spray six men told how ten of their fellows went down at sea, in a minute's space. They were survivors of the Newfoundland schooner Carranna. Trapped below decks with eight others when lightning literally split the schooner asunder on Thursday night, they alone were able to struggle clear of submerged cabin and tangled rigging.

When the schooner dipped her smashed bows into the welter of sea and went to the bottom, they had barely gone over the windward side in the leaky dory in which they survived three days without food, water or oars. Their last sight of the ship took in the figures of two men on deck struggling to clear themselves of the wreckage. After that they were powerless to help.

The lights themselves are expensive but the citizens of Belleville will never notice their cost. They were bought by the Ontario Hydro Commission for the price of $22,500, installed, the installation bringing the price up to about $25.00.

The cost of the lamps will be charged back on a unit cost basis, spread over a period of years, to the city, as Harold Armstrong, chairman of Light in the council, stated to the press this morning that the lights on Dundas Street are so placed that they can be added to.

Eventually it is hoped that Front Street may be lighted by the same system, but instead of their being only one light there wouldb e a cluster of them. This will not be done in the near future, but when it is Belleville will be one of the best lighted cities in the province.

New Lighting System "Cut In"
Citizens Pleased with Improvements

Dundas St. East became a pleasure driveway last night, many of the motorists of the city taking their families over this piece of pavement to inspect the new lighting system that was "cut in" last night and many compliments were heard of the innovation. The street was nearly as bright as day with the number plates of the houses of the north side of the street easily discernible, while driving on the south side of the thoroughfare.

The lights have no glare the light being broken up and diffused over the face of the pavement. A light has been placed on every pole from Pinnacle Street to George Street and on every other pole from George Street to Maitland Avenue. There is a light at every intersection and accidents should be reduced to a minimum with the new system. Work will be started immediately in placing the same style of lighting on West Bridge St. to the top of Murney Hill and on Highland Avenue to the city limit. The lights cost $22.50 each and with the cost of installation added.

Raydon

RAWDON, September 19.—St. Matthew's Sunday was an ideal day for Bethel anniversary. Nature was lavish with her fall colours and the weather was clear and cool. The church was beautifully decorated with banks of potted foliages and vases of cut flowers. A large number were in attendance at the services when Rev. E. B. Cooke of Tweed gave two impressive sermons. In the morning he chose Isaiah 55.13—"Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Choosing as his subject "Our Relationship to God", the speaker dealt with the worthwhileness of life and the responsibility of individuals in building up the community and in each one making a name for themselves. "There are yet many tasks unfinished so let us humbly say "Count on me Lord to carry on Thy Work. The musical part of the services was exceptionally good under the capable direction of the organist Miss Mildred Elliott, who also played suitable preludes, offertories and music. An item by them "In the Bright Land" with the Misses Annie Elliott and Lellah Johnston also a duet by Mrs. Cooke and Mrs. Jane Allen "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" with Mrs. (Rev.) Johnston in the solo were all rendered effectively in the morning.

In the evening Mr. Cooke spoke on "The Value of a Christian Character in the Community". He gave a glowing picture of the dynamic or driving power in the church and the part it played in the whole life of the community, education, social activities, etc. He then contrasted with a description of this old world, filty scene here if all the churches were closed in 1930. Very few man unbelievers would care to live in a community if it did not possess a Christian church. Even the churches do need money for upkeep but it is nothing compared to the financial amounts for luxuries and pleasure. The choir with Mr. C. M. Sine taking the solo part sang "The King of Love My Shepherd is" Mrs. Lellah Allen at the organ. Miss Orchard and a beautiful duett "Life's Lullaby. And an Anthem "Come Thou Weary One" were all delightful. One hundred and seven dollars was placed on the plates at the morning service.

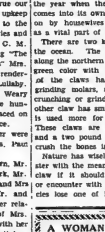
Season for Lordly Crustacean Here



BOSTON — This is the season of the year when the kingly crustacean comes into its own and is looked upon by housewives and restaurateurs as a vital part of the daily diet.

There are two kinds of lobsters in the ocean. The ones most familiar among the northern coast are of a very green color with large claws. One of the claws has large teeth like grinding molars, and is used for crunching or grinding the food. The other claw has small sharp teeth and is used more for holding the food. These claws are extremely powerful and a two pound lobster could easily crush the bones in a man's hand.

Nature has wisely provided the lobster with the means of growing a new claw if it should by some accident, become separated with another of the species lose one of its original pincers.

This accounts for the wide variance of size of the claws sometimes found in species used for domestic supply.

The other variety of lobster comes from the south and is known as the crayfish, crawfish or spiney lobster. It is of a yellow gray color and has no large claws. The meats of the two varieties have about the same taste and are equally popular.

Lobsters reach the market in four general forms: alive, boiled, lobster meat and canned. Some people have the idea that a lobster should be quite active when on exhibition, in fact they believe that he should cavort around much like a race horse. This is distinctly against Mr. Lobster's nature and for this reason many perfectly good specimens are boiled by the dealers and sold as cold boiled lobster.

Some people object to taking the meat out of the shells and this has led to the marketing of lobster meat. It takes from three to five pounds of lobster to make one pound of meat and this is considered the cheapest way to buy lobster. Canned lobster is thoroughly processed and will keep the same as any other canned commodity.

Discussing this industry, which develops into large proportions at this season as the price is low and supply ample, E. H. Cooley of the Massachusetts Fisheries Association says, "Lobsters are packed in cans to prevent the discoloration or darkening of canned lobster meat." Investigation by leading food experts has shown that it is practically impossible to keep crab or lobster meat from darkening. There is, however, no deterioration in flavor and the food value remain the same, the only effect being to cause the housewife to dislike the appearance."

In speaking of the most edible parts of the lobster, Mr. Cooley said, "As a matter of fact will usually be found in the body. Do not throw this away as it is one of the most tasty parts of the lobster."

WEDDINGS

MACELWEE—HAGERMAN

Yesterday at one o'clock a quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's uncle, M.C. Potter, of "Willow Cove" when Grace Sernice Hagerman, eldest daughter of Mrs. Leslie Potter of Toco British Columbia, was united in marriage by Rev. J. A. Seymour of St. Andrew's Church, Belleville to Elden Ramsey Macelwee, second son of James C. Macelwee, of Moulestown, New Brunswick. The attendants were Miss Marie Hagerman sister of the bride and Mr. Frank Freed. Descercato, a friend of the groom.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a model dress of Spanish lace chiffon velvet with hat and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia rose and maiden's hair fern, the gift of the groom, a pearl necklace.

The bridesmaid who was becomingly attired in beige georgette with hat and shoes to match carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and also wore, the gift of the groom a gold bracelet.

Mrs Margaret Rushbrook of Toronto played Lohengrin's wedding march and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Weber sang "I Love You Truly". After the ceremony dinner was served to a few intimate friends and relatives.

The newly-wed couple last night showers of confetti as a motor trip to Montreal and Quebec. the bride travelling in a brown ensemble, with tan and fur to match. On their return they will reside in Kingston. Their friends wish them a long and happy wedded life.

PUBLIC MEETING FRIDAY

Mayor George A. Ketcheson has called a public meeting will be held in the City Hall on Friday night next to discuss a new memorial for the city. The question has been uppermost in the minds of citizens for some time and it is expected that a large and representative crowd will be on hand for the gathering.

LOST IN BUSH

Despatches from Kenora today state that Alfred Wardle was found seven days through dense bush with only berries to ward off starvation. Paul R. Brey, manager of the Bank of Rockcut, vocalist, both of Montreal, finally landed safe in civilization at Kenora. It will be remembered that the two musicians left on a canoe trip visit to Belleville en route to Hollywood via the hitch-hiking route. Crossing Lake of the Woods, the hikers were precipitated into the waters when a raging storm swept across the lake and overturned their canoe. However, provisions sank from sight and the travelers only succeeded in reaching the shore after a hard struggle with the waves, in their story.

FRANKFORD PAID TRIBUTE TO THE R.C. ARCHBISHOP

Mrs W. C. Lyons Given a Surprise Party by Friends

Frankford, Sept. 24 (By Mail)—On Tuesday, September 16th, His Grace the Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Archbishop of Kingston, paid his first official visit to St. Francis Assisi Catholic Church and administered the Sacraments of Confirmation to a number of children of the parish.

An address of welcome on behalf of the congregation was read and presented by C. R. Turley. His Grace thanked the people for the welcome which was accorded him and congratulated them on the appearance of the church and cemetery, after which he explained what confirmation is and counselled the people to be strong and sincere in their faith.

Confirmation was given to the following children: Mary Lalon, Betty Lalon, Jack Lalon, Vincent Maccauley, Gordon Bruyea, Owen Jordan and Edward Jordan. Very Rev. Monsignor J. F. Hoolens of Belleville. Rev. Fr. Burns, Kingston, Rev. Fr. J. O. Sullivan of Wooler and the pastor Rev. Fr. M. J. Farrell were present during the ceremony. Following is a copy of the address which was presented: His Grace The Most Reverend M. J. O'Brien D.D. Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston.

May it please Your Grace:—

The members of St. Francis of Assisi Church of the village of Frankford extend to you a most hearty welcome on your first official visit, and express their sincere congratulations on your appointment to the high office you so fittingly occupy.

We are aware of your success as Bishop of Peterborough and we feel confident that your government of the Archdiocese of Kingston will prove equally brilliant and pleasing to your people, and that much may be will ever be our earnest prayer.

We are happy to tell your Grace, our people in this part of the parish are prosperous and contented and we express our grateful thanks to our Rev. pastor, Rev. Fr. Farrell, for his manful work amongst us and his kindly interest in our welfare.

That Your Grace may have a long, happy and successful career in the discharge of your onerous duties is our sincere hope and prayer.

On behalf of the congregation C. F. Rose Jr., E. Murphy, P. O. Brien, Wm. McMahon, Jas. Mulvihill, T. F. Sweetman, R. F. Turley, J. J. Macauley, Jas. Maccauley, and C. R. Turley.

The Star of a Thousand Faces Becomes a Star of Five Different Voices

Lon Chaney, termed the Man of a Thousand Faces, has been for years the most popular of all screen players. From "The Blackbird", to "West of Zanzibar", you've loved his amazing portrayals. In "The Unholy Three", a smashing mystery melodrama at Belle Theatre, Thursday and Friday Matinee Daily, he uses five different voices, changing his voice as he changes his disguises.

Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Wilson Celebrate Their Golden Wedding Anniversary

Rednesrville Scene of Happy Event on Monday, Sept. 22.

FRIENDS GATHER

Half Century of Wedded Life Featured by Family

Half a century of wedded life featured by family and community events. Fifty years of connubial joys were the week celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Wilson, Rednersville, Prince Edward County. On September 22, 1880, Letty, daughter of Capt. Wm. and Phoebe Babcock, of Rednersville, was united in marriage to Nathaniel, son of N. M. and Isabella Wilson. Rev. McCannon, Rednersville, performed the ceremony. Baptist Wilson was groomsman and Letty Parliament, bridesmaid. September 22nd found both bride and groom enjoying life to a wide degree.

On Monday evening a large number of neighbors and friends gathered to offer them congratulations of their golden wedding. A pleasing feature was a presentation by the family of an anniversary clock. On behalf of the family the following address was read.—

Dear Father and Mother, Brother and Sister:—To-day is the golden anniversary of your wedding day may it be a memorable one. We bring congratulations and affectionate good will to you. As a family we have both pride and thankfulness that you have been spared to enjoy this evening with us. Throughout these fifty-years you doubtless can recall many eventful days which have brought you many joys and we wish this occasion to be the best in bringing happiness to you. We can recall many times when we have been helped and inspired by your kindness, patience, and consideration of us. All of which we now realize must have meant for you much person al sacrifice. Your combined efforts have filled us to cope with life in its changes and has given us much happiness and joy. As an appreciation of your unfailing patience, kindness and helpfulness shown us throughout our child hood years and to the present time we take pleasure as a family in presenting to you this anniversary clock with the hope that as it ticks off the years you may be spared to enjoy health and happiness.

(Signed)—Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Mr. Thomas Wilson, Mr. J. A. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mr. and Mrs W D Elliott. Mr Earle W Elliott, Mr. Borden Elliott, Mr. Mackey Elliott.

Hanover's Bertha Won the Futurity

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 24— Success of the Hanover Farm Stable continued yesterday at the Lexington Meet- over's Bertha not only won the $14,- 000 Kentucky Futurity for 3-year-old trotters but lowered the stake record to 2.00.

This mile was the fastest mile ever trotted in a regularly programed race. The second heat in 2.01 1-4 was also faster than any previous mile ever trotted in the race. By this mile Hanover's Bertha became the first 2.00 3-year-old filly. Legality, the champion half-mile track 3-year-old trotter, was second, finishing second in one heat and third in the other.

Hanover's Bertha was separately timed in 1.59 and Legality in 1.59 1-2 from where they got off. Lastspray was the early pacemaker in each heat.

TARRED, FEATHERED, BECAUSE OF HIS COMMUNIST FAITH

Miami, Fla., Sept. 24 (CP)—Tarred, feathered, bound, gagged, beaten and wrapped in a white hooded garment, David Weinberg, 44, was hurled from a motor car in the downtown district, last midnight. Police attributed the attack to David's Communistic beliefs.

GRADUATE OF COLLEGE DIES

Matthew M. Brown, K.C., of Brockville, Went to School Here

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 24.—Matthew Munsell Brown, K.C., County Crown Attorney, passed away Tuesday afternoon in St. Vincent De Paul Hospital following a brief illness. Born in the township of Elizabethtown near Lyn Sept. 29, 1858, deceased resided all his life in this district. He was a son of Benjamin C. Brown, and his grandfather, Matthew Munsell Howard, at one time represented Leeds in Parliament. He matriculated from Albert College, Belleville, in 1874 and took a gold medal in modern languages when graduating as a Bachelor of Arts in 1879. The following year he commenced the study of law in the office of Eugene McMahon at Bellefille and re, mained there for two years, finishing his professional studies in Toronto. In 1884 he was admitted to the bar and immediately commenced practice here. He was appointed county crown attorney in 1894 and two years ago he was created King's Counsel. He was president of the Leeds and Grenville Law Association, Fro. member of the board of health for many years and vice-president of the Brockville Historical Society. He was married on November 4, 1896, to Alice Maud, eldest daughter of the late John Dowsley, who survives with two sons and two daughters.

Radio Fans Corner

Reception to my mind last night was as close to perfecting as it has been in many moons. It is a treat to have it that way occasionally isn't it? So often it is but the other way. So well it can't be perfect all the time.

We've missed Uncle Abe and David this week haven't we, fans? I guess they are only going to be on the air every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, that. However they are on tonight at the usual hour 5.45 EST and again at 10.15 and over station WEAF.

WEAF presents a smart program tonight at 8.15 EST none other than the Five Radio Lumberjacks, Nelsons Lewis, contralto, Andy Sannella, instrumentalist, Breen and de Rose, novelty duo and Sam Herman, xylophonist. I heard Sam Herman Saturday night and I'm telling you well in advance, he's good.

Still with WEAF at 7.30 EST for the Mobiloil Concert, that means Nat Shilkret's orchestra, the Lucky Strike program immediately after this with the Old Councillor and the Chicago Little Symphony orchestra.

Palmolive Hour at 8.30 EST and boasts of numbers with Olive Palmer who used to be known as Virginia Rea but even that wasn't her real name she was baptized Virginia Earle Murphy. Why, she went to the stage she took her brother's first name for her last. Do you follow me?

Coco Cola program from WEAF at 9.30 EST and Granland Rice is featured in a sports interview with Director Cayford soloist. Leonard Joy and his string orchestra will also be on the program so don't miss it. Vincent Lopez for fifteen minutes of music starting at 10 EST and over WEAF.

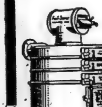
Die-a-Do continues at fifteen minutes after 10 EST and over WJZ at 6.45 EST tonight and later at 8.30 the Camel Pleasure hour. Royal York orchestra at 11 EST and that means Fred Culley, 'nuff said.

EXPECT NO RISE IN GAS PRICES

CALGARY, Sept. 24 (CP) — Reports to the press here that the wholesale price of gasoline had been raised 2 1-2 cents to certain western co-operative buying organizations as a result of the new Bennett tariff, Floyd J. Huff, general manager of the Regal Refineries Limited, stated the price had not been boosted and there was no indication it would be.

The expression of general opinion was that although the tariff rise might not bring an advance in price to the consumer, co-operative purchasers were forced to pay extra money.

RELIEF OF MINERS



HALIFAX, Sept. 24 (CP) — Distribution of relief to mine workers and their families affected by unemployment will be started immediately. The cost to be borne by Dominion and Provincial governments and municipalities concerned.

House Always Comfortable

Pease BOILER

MOGUL

Heat is obtained at exceptionally low cost from the Pease "Mogul", so great is its efficiency. Read how this achievement impressed W. J. Sheppard, Jr., Colchester, Ontario:

"Our Pease Mogul Boiler is doing its work satisfactorily. I am firing with coke and although the weather has been very severe this winter up here, my house has been comfortable at all times."

One reason Pease Boilers heat with such marked satisfaction is that the corrugated fire-pot presents a fire heating surface 1-3 larger than a plain surface and permits ample air draft up the sides of the fire. Ask us for literature describing the many other features of this boiler.

THUG DROPS HIS ADDRESS AFTER MAKING A HAUL

Throws Card and Note Papers With Which to Deceive Pursuers

TRACE HIM

Arrest Follows Thirty Minutes After the Hold-up

Toronto, Sept. 24—Thirty minutes from the time Joseph Powler, clerk in the United Cigar store, Bay at Dundas Street, was held up and robbed of $125 last night with a toy automatic, Joseph Randel, aged 23 years, of Bridgeburgh, Ont., was under arrest by Detectives Fred Skinner and Fred Storm, charged with robbery while armed.

The thug ran north to Edward Street, Powler called twice out the door: "Stop that man!" Frank Mullen, 64 Simpson Avenue, a taxi driver ran after the fugitive. Rudolph Vermeith working in a shoe shine parlor also joined in the chase, while John Borsley, 420 Crawford Street, followed in his car. Cutting across the bus stand over to the north side of Edward Street, the thief ran west to Elizabeth Street where he turned north to Elm Street. Here he sailed a fence into the House of Industry grounds. Apparently deciding to throw out what he thought might be mistaken by his pursuers for money, the man dropped papers and a bus timetable. Instead of throwing his followers off the trail the same threw away a piece of paper giving his address as 39 Charles Street West. He was seen in some bushes and a brick was hurled at him by Vermeiti. Jumping the fence, the thief made his way on to Chesnut Street, where those chasing him lost sight of him.

Detectives Skinner and Storm had been informed by Mullen of the piece of paper being found with the address. Jumping in a police car, they drove to the Charles Street house. Skinner and Storm made their way up the steps. The front door was unfastened and the house in darkness.

Detective Skinner opened the first door he came to. As he did he claims to have found Randel leaning over the bed counting a roll of bills. Grasping hold of him, Skinner snatched the money and held his man, while Detective Storm put on the lights. On looking on top of a clothes closet in the room Storm found a black toy automatic.

Taken out to a police car, Randel is alleged by police to have said: "Well you got me cold." Taken to headquarters, he denied admitting the charge. Four persons who had seen the robbery were paraded before the prisoner in the "show-up," and are reported to have identified him. Randel said he came to Toronto from Bridgeburg a few weeks ago.

CAPTAIN AND COOK SINK WITH SHIP

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., Sept. 24 —CP—Eight passengers and two members of the crew of Newfoundland schooner, Carasca, which left here last Thursday for Burin, Newfoundland were lost at night when the vessel sank after being split in two by lightning twenty miles off the eastern coast of Cape Breton. The news of the disaster was brought here today when the six survivors, picked up 7 miles west of St. Pierre, Sunday night, arrived on board the schooner Vignette. An Indian, aged 25, was among those drowned, Capt. I. Matthews 53, of Grand Banks went down with his ship as well as the 22_year old cook, John Bobbett.

HISTORIC RELICS

Louisburg, N.S. — Workmen engaged in restoring parts of the old fortress walls have almost completely demolished it, 163 years after the British troops had left it. Many historic relics have been found, including those of the old military hospital which prove it to have been a larger institution than any now existing on Cape Breton Island. Crumbling casements and parapets have been reinforced with concrete and the old wall is being opened up and lined with original stone.

Part of the Town Clock, surgical instruments, old muskets, a human jawbone and many other reminders of the early days have been discovered.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE REPARATIONS

Pursuant to a notice that appeared in the Press Gazette on the 15th day of November, 1918, asking those of the civil population in Canada, who may have been subjected to loss and pecuniary damage arising from the destruction of their property during the late war through the illegal warfare of the enemy, to file claims for compensation with this Department.

Public notice is hereby given that by an Order of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, dated the 6th day of September, 1930, the undersigned Commissioner was appointed for the purpose of considering and completing an enquiry and reporting upon all such claims, which have not heretofore been disposed of in the report of the previous Reparation Commissioner dater the 14th day of December 1922.

Instructions regarding the method of filing and the proof to be furnished may be obtained from the undersigned.

The last day on which claims will be accepted for consideration is the 1st day of November, 1930.

DETENTION REFORM IS URGED BY BENCH

BRANTFORD, Sept. 24.—Addressing the Kiwanis Club, Hon. Mr. Justice Wright, who is presiding at the Fall Assizes here, stressed the need for reform in the method of detention of accused prisoners during the period before trial. It was not creditable to the laws of the country that a prisoner awaiting trial should be housed th e prison, restricted in his freedom, his food and exercise, perhaps for months.

U. S. Coastguard 140 Years Old

BOSTON —The United States Coast Guard Service is 140 years old this month.

In 1790 the comparatively new United States Government was suffering heavy revenue losses through the activities of smugglers. The Government needed money badly at this time so Alexander Hamilton, then Secretary of the Treasury, asked Congress for ten cutters to assist in stopping "leaks" that was depriving the United States of a sizeable and legitimate income.

This was the original function of the service but with the steady growth of the nation, additional minor duties were scheduled in order to cope with the ever increasing demands of the maritime interests.

The United States Coast Guard service as it is today was created by an act of Congress and approved January 28, 1915, combining the revenue service and the life saving service. The life saving service was not the creation of a single legislative act, but the result of a series of enactments back in 1848, which had in view the saving of life and property from shipwreck on the coast.

In 1871 a definite life-saving service was inaugurated and administered in conjunction with the revenue cutter service until 1878 when Congress established the life saving service as a separate organization. The two services of a necessarily co-operate until they were combined into one large organization in 1915.

Few, if any, realize the scope of the Coast Guard activities. Many a fisherman, both Canadian and American, storm tossed on the broad North Atlantic, their vessel disabled, has welcomed the sight of these speedy grey cruisers rushing to their aid in response to a hurried S. O. S. call. Too, when misfortune overtakes some member of a fishing vessel and a human life depends on the prompt arrival of medical supplies, the Coast Guard is always available with trained doctors and the necessary medicine. If the injured man needs further medical care he is rushed to the nearest hospital and Davy Jones, ever ready to clasp to his bosom these men who daily brave the perils of an angry sea, is cheated out of another victim.

Wrecks and derelicts, those ever present menaces to all commercial navigation, must be located and disposed of. These and many other tasks are the part of the daily routine of the coast guardsman.

Last, but not least of the duties that fall to the lot of the coast guard is the maintenance of the International Ice Patrol.

Early in the spring of each year two vessels are dispatched from the Charlestown Navy Yard to patrol the steamer lanes in the vicinity of the Grand Banks off Newfoundland. The icebergs must all be charted and their drift followed. Daily reports are sent out by the boats on patrol in order that all sea going vessels will be safe from collision with one of these monsters.

OBITUARY

LATE MARY ISABEL HOPE

The funeral of the late Miss Mary Isabel Hope, of Hamilton, Ont., who died in the Belleville General Hospital on September 20th, took place to Belleville cemetery from the Belleville Burial Company's parlors on Tuesday, the Rev. A. L. Geen officiating. Miss Hope was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hope of Hamilton.

DIED

DONALDSON—In Belleville General Hospital, Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1930, Frederick Arthur, dearly beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. James Donaldson, in his 12th year.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his parents, 22 Pinnacle Road, on Thursday, Sept. 25, 1930. Service at the home at 2 p.m. Interment in Wesley Union Cemetery at 2.30 p.m. Interment White's Cemetery. Front of Sidney. s24-1t

ADVOCATES GOVT. AID IN MARKETING

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP).—Dominion government assistance in marketing of wheat crop was advocated today by Hon. James O. Gardiner, leader of the Liberal opposition in Saskatchewan. The wheat problem was being a difficult time because marketing be tween 60 cent per bushel advance by proof to farmers and a selling price of wheat was so slow. Mr. Gardiner criticized the new prices of farm implements.

PUPILS VACCINATED

Kingston, Sept. 24.—Compulsory vaccination of school children, which came into effect a week ago, has been complied with generally. Announcement was made that of the 2,711 children in the public schools only 134 are out of school through not being vaccinated. In the separate schools, out of a total enrolment of 726 pupils, only seven are out of school because they have not been vaccinated.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

Wouldn't Bertie be furious? But wouldn't it be worth it? Sonia smiled and was carried off in his arms.

Dim lights, haunting, heart-breaking music, blue eyes smiling—smiling into hers.....Sonia had danced many dances with many different men but never did music so intrigue her as do this night. It crept under her skin. It sent delicious, prickly sensations up and down her spine.

When it was over she sighed. She resented the cruel fate which pushed her back into Bertie's colorless sphere. Also she realized that some sort of explanation was going to be necessary. But she was mistaken, for when her partner had escorted her to her own table he said: "Hello, Bertie. Don't you know better than to leave this girl sitting all alone?"

Bertie's pale eyes gleamed. But he answered in a coldly correct voice: "Good evening Franklin. I didn't know you were acquainted with Sonia yet. She came into the office while you were away."

"We are old friends. Any one could tell that who watched us dance together."

Sonia was bewildered, but, as usual, waited in silence for her cue.

"Where did you get back from your vacation, Mr. Crane?" asked Maxine.

More curious than ever, Sonia met his eyes. The smile he sent back was a delicious mixture of delight at her confusion and admiration of playing the game. He asked Maxine for the next dance, but from over Bertie's shoulder Sonia's eyes met his constantly. Wrapped in a glamorous sense of adventure she forgot her fiancee of Bertie. She even permitted him to squeeze her hand.

"What does it matter what Bertie does?" she talked herself. "I'm not dancing with him. I'm still over there with Franklin Crane."

When that dance was over Crane left, his eyes sending her mysterious promises as he said 'good-night'.

And now Sonia was treading air again. She saw the city wrapped in white magic. Romance peeped from each passing taxi. Adventure lurked behind each drawn window shade. She was gay and light as a feather. She felt that the wide world have blown her to the top of the highest building.

"Stay all night with me, won't you?" begged Maxine.

She accepted joyously and was almost gracious to the prostrate Bertie.

"I've had a wonderful evening," she said softly.

When he had gone she faced Maxine, starry-eyed, hungry for information about Franklin Crane. But she was reluctant to ask for it, and Maxine did not seem to understand. She took down her heavy hair and discussed her own affairs.

"I quarrelled with Mac to-night, Sonia. I told him if he couldn't take me out occasionally he need not come up here again. I'm tired of cooking for him all the time."

"Can you cook up here?"

"Surely. I have a gas plate behind the screen."

She showed Sonia the mysteries of the tiny cupboard.

"It's a little place. And the reason I got it was so I could have Mac here.

"It's beautifully furnished. Where did you get all those things?"

"Oh, I rent it furnished. It's really much for me to pay, too. Now that Mac and I have quarreled I might as well give it up."

She eyed her companion tentatively.

"Unless, Sonia—would you care to live with me?"

"I couldn't afford it."

"Yes, you could. You can pay and whatever your room has been costing you. And we'll go fifty-fifty on the food."

"I'd love to if that would be fair."

"Sure it's fair! I make more than you do and your rent would help me out just that much. There's plenty of room for two."

Sonia was delighted. She would move Sunday, it was darling of Maxine.

Not until she had crawled into bed did she find courage to ask: "Who was that Franklin Crane we danced with to-night?"

"Oh' you know. He's the salesman I told you about who gets drunks and stays away for days at a time."

Sonia's sensations on hearing this were confusing.

"He don't be very dissipated" she told Maxine. "He is entirely too healthy looking."

Maxine replied yawning, that he wasn't very old yet, and she wished she knew what Mac was doing.

Clearly she was not interested in a discussion of Franklin Crane. So Sonia said good-night and lay quiet, pussying it out for herself. Although she had known him only three hours she was already defending him. Perhaps the things the girls said about him were untrue. How did they know that he was doing when he wasn't at the office?

She had good reason to believe from her own experience in Muncie, that gossip was like a giant, snowball, grew the bigger as it rolled off the mountain of tongues. Probably half of it was not true. Some one might have seen him drinking some time and put two and two together and made about ten thousand. At any rate, she would not believe anything against him until she knew it herself. Which was admitting a great deal, had Sonia realized it. But she reasoned that she was being broad minded and as close to Table as she would have liked people to be to her.

Closing her eyes, she heard again the lilting music to which they had danced together. She snuggled again beneath his chin, wrapped in the glamour of his blue eyes and dazzling thus fell asleep.

It was glorious to wake the next morning to Maxine's bright draperies instead of the dingy walls of her own room to smell the coffee that her friend was already preparing and best of all to feel that Franklin Crane be longed in that same office where she had worked for a month. It gave the touch of glamour she had been missing. How fortunate she was to be here with a loyal friend like Maxine and a regular job in a big office that held such possibilities for adventure. Thank heaven she had not gone home that first week. Even the thought Muncie depressed her now. The letters from her father and mother, full of detail concerning town affairs and gossip they thought might interest her, were skimmed through hurriedly.

"Hey, there, lazy bones," called Maxine. "Get up and into your clothes."

Sonia looked for him as she went through the office. There was his desk, "Mr. Crane". Funny she hadn't noticed it first. But he was not there. Many of the salesmen were not down yet, however. She gave Bertie a friendly smile Count on Bertie's being there! She went on into the dressing room, hoping that some one would mention his return.

But the bookkeeping department had other things on its mind that morning. Frankie and Fern had seen Jimmy dancing the night before with Mac MacGregor.

"What's the idea?" they chortled to Jinny "Don't you know when Maxine finds it out your name will be mud?"

Jinny was noncommittal.

"I don't have to ask Maxine when I want to step out And neither does Mac"

Maxine heard of it of course. She was clever enough to show no resentment in Jinny Instead she suggested that they lunch together.

"I'm sorry," Jinny said, a trifle too regretfully. "But I have an engagement."

"She only said that to make me jealous," Maxine explained to Sonia over their sandwiches. "I'll bet she eats in the dressing room while we're out. And if she only knew it, that's the reason Mac took her out last night. He knew I'd hear about it. He was with me until 9 o'clock. He must have called her after then."

Sonia admitted the probability of this. Yet Maxine's eyes were darting anxiously up and down Dearborn street as they returned. And when they went to the balcony Jinny was not there.

"Oh well," Maxine shrugged.

Her intuition showed, however in her irritibility.

On their way through the office Sonia caught a glimpse of a sleek dark head bent over some papers at Franklin Crane's desk. Her heart skipped a beat at sight of him. He was a very virile looking, an essentially masculine. She told herself, that he made all others in the office seem weak in contrast. All afternoon she expected to look up and see him standing close to her. She felt she could not have been mistaken in the promise of his eyes the night before. But the hours passed and he did not come. Maxine's sharp voice discouraged conversation. When Sonia left the office, he was not in.

She was disappointed. She told herself over her tasteless dinner that she must put him out of her mind.

"Perhaps," she thought, a trifle bitterly, "he doesn't care to play around with a girl from the book-keeping department."

Her position in Muncie had made her sensitive to social inequalities. Franklin Crane seemed a man of much better breeding than Bertie. although Bertie was recognized as one of the company's best salesmen.

She found a letter from Sidney in her box when she got to the Y.W. It was full of the plans of the girls in Sonia's class. Most of them were going to college. Sidney wrote that she was going to Purdue, adding that Tom Davenport was going there too. Sonia had a fleeting memory of Tom's proposal to her.

Sonia did not envy them. College would seem too tame after her taste of freedom. Her birthday was next week and she would be 18. She could not afford to waste any time in college. Her room seemed smaller than ever and Maxine's apartment. How would be glad to move Sunday. But she did hope this quarrel with Mac was not going to affect Maxine's disposition.

"Not that I blame her," thought Sonia, loyally. "Jinny certainly was smart about it."

She went through the wardrobe, preparing to pack. She reread Sidney's letter. She attempted to smoke a cigarette and threw it away.

"What in the world is the matter WITH ME? I'm restless as a cat. Oh, I wish I had never met the man. If he's going to make me feel like this."

In the midst of her musing she was called to the telephone. She raced through the hall. Her heartbeats sounded in her ears as she cooed."Yes this is Sonia Marsh."

"Oh hello, Sonia! Just wondered what you were doing.'.

It was Bertie. Cold with disappointment, she made short work of the conversation.

Tears were in her eyes as she slowly re-entered the room she had swept out of a moment before.

"You little fool!" she said to herself disgustedly.

But the next morning before she had had time to expect him, she looked up to see Franklin Crane.

"The top of the morning to you," he exclaimed joyfully.

In spite of her leaping heart, she managed to remain demure.

"Good morning, Mr. Crane."

"How are you, Sonia? And, by the way, where did you pick up such a gorgeous name.'

"My mother gave me that."

"Well, mother must be some picked. Did you miss me yesterday?"

"Miss you? Why should I?"

"Because you know I intended to come straight to you yesterday morning. But I found a customer waiting for me at the office and it was just one thing after another all day."

Sonia's heart swelled to think she had not misunderstood his signal. But she said nothing. She was dear, mined to be more than usually careful to leave all advances to him.

He continued "Wasn't that a wonderful dance we had?"

"I enjoyed it a lot", she admitted.

"Will you go dancing with me again, Sonia? To-night at the College Inn?" Even then her voice did not tremble. "That will be awfully nice," she replied.

But all his departing smile, rosy clouds enveloped the balcony. Music burst from all the tipperlores. The buzzing of the girls' voices was like the murmur of a summer breeze.

"Will you go dancing again with me tonight, Sonia?" Would she go? Would her silver slippers trip to the music of the gods again! Would she fly with him on gauzy wings of pink chiffon! Would she! Oh.....

True to her inborn reserve, she said nothing about it to any one. The girls had seen him step at her table, but they had not heard what he had said.

So to Violet's "Come on, old thing! Let's have it. Would did he want with you?" she responded, quietly:

"Don't get excited. Just a contract he wants me to look up. That's all."

"Oh, I'm so sorry."

Sonia shrugged and went back to her bookkeeping.

When he came for her that night she kept h'm waiting ten minutes by her own alarm clock!

"I will not!" she told herself, passionately. "let him know how I feel."

Her nod of greeting was cooly impersonal. She permitted him to do most of the talking, apparently unconscious of his caressing eyes.—But after he had given their order for dinner, and they rose to dance again, a pretense left her.

She had lived all her life just to come this moment into his arms. To be held, lightly but possessively, close to his heart. Green eyes half closed she danced with him again and again. had spoken. The music and starry eyes. It would never end. They would dance on forever. And he, no longer smiling was silent as she.

Sonia, girl, how you can dance!" he said once.

Her gaze met his, faltered, failed. Then recovering, "let him see that it was because she had been a part of him—long years before the world began. She could only smile and go on dancing.

Dinner was a dark table, dotted, during some ambrosial mixture that was deliciously cold and satisfying. he thought, a drink of true he had taken. A year ago he had been in China with his mother.

"Mother is an invalid," he explained to Sonia, "and will enough to go in for society or club work of any kind, but she does enjoy traveling."

So he had been home in Winnetka. Evidently his mother was wealthy. He had come for her in magnificent closed car. But neither his wealth nor his position in the snobbish set—on could spoil Sonia's happiness that night.

Sitting beside him on the way back to the Y.W. she was conscious of nothing but the warmth of his hand over hers. He made no other advances. Did not offer to kiss him.

"I'll see you again soon. Sonia. May I?"

"I'm moving to Maxine's tomorrow," she said.

"You are "Well, that will be fine. Good-night."

She lay with the hand she had held pressed against her cheek until she fell asleep.

INSTALLMENT VII

Sonia was up early on Sunday eager to get away to her new home. The thought of being able to live in that atmosphere of color was delightful to her beauty-loving soul. She felt mordinately grateful to Maxine. Stopping at a florist's she bought a bunch of yellow roses to take as a token of her appreciation.

Maxine was heavy eyed.

"I'm glad you've come," she said, dully. "I'd go crazy with many more weeks like this."

Sonia was arranging her dresses on hangers in the closet.

"Have you heard anything more from Mac?"

"Not a word. And, believe me, if he calls me now he can go to, He makes me tired."

"I don't blame you one bit," sympathized Sonia. "There are too many men in the world to stand for being treated badly by any of one of them."

The reason for the quarrel was a little vague to her, but she knew it was connected with his refusal to take Maxine to lunch.

"What are we going to do to-day?" asked Sonia.

"Anything you like. I don't know and don't care."

Secretly Sonia hoped Franklin Crane would call and suggest another engagement, but 12 o'clock came and the telephone was still silent. She imagined Maxine was listening for it, too, straining every nerve.

"Look here," said Sonia, sensibly. "Let's go to Lincoln Park and have our lunch. Then we can walk or sit in the sand."

Maxine cast a stealthy glance at the telephone.

"Well, I sort of wanted to stick around a while ..... ."

"Oh, come on! Snap out of it, darling."

So they went to the park and had lunch at a little table overlooking the lake. Sky and water were bright in the sun. Sonia hked to walk at the edge of wet sand, taking deep breaths of the delicious air.

"This just suits me," she cried, tossing her head back against the wind.

"Well, it doesn't me," complained Maxine. "There's sand in my shoes, and the wind messes up my hair, Let's find a place where we can sit down."

They found a spot that was rather protected by overhanging dunes. Sonia sat the sand they lay, each absorbed in her own thoughts.

"A girl is a fool to care about any man," Maxine said daffily. "So long as you don't give a damn you're sitting pretty but once you let any sentiment slip into it you're gone."

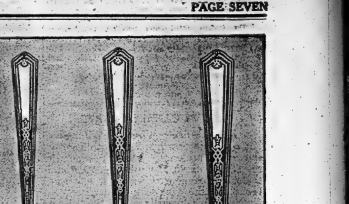
HER PAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 22 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well-known resident of this place, "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old fashioned kidney remedy.



Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or disordered kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

Canada's First Electric Tug

The first electrically-driven tug to be built in Canada was launched at Lauzon, Que., recently, when the "Prescott", Diesel-electric tug for the Canadian Pacific Car and Passenger Transfer Company's service between Prescott, Ont., and Ogdensburg, N.Y., slipped gracefully into the waters of the St. Lawrence after the traditional bottle of champagne had been broken over her bows by Mrs. Duff, wife of M. McD. Duff, manager of the Canadian Pacific Great Lakes Steamship Service. As a pioneer feature in Canadian shipping, the Diesel-electric engines with which the new vessel is equipped, are the special interest to marine engineers. Each of 600 H.P., they are directly connected to twin generators capable of delivering 350 kilowatts, each at 250 volts, when operated at 245 revolutions per minute.

In operation, a car barge with three tracks for its hundred-ton cars, will be lashed to the starboard counter of the tug which in turn will be possible to control either from its own wheel-house or from the bridge of the car barge.

HELPS CANADIAN ARTS

His Excellency Viscount Willingdon has again demonstrated his patronage of the arts by presenting prizes to encourage the arts of music, literature, painting and sculpture. Some excellent work has been brought forth by the competitions.

This is just what Canada has been wanting. The sense of victory added to the intrinsic value of the gift means much to the artist. It means a great deal to have such a patron of the arts as the governor-general.

Canada some day will take a foremost rank among the nations by her art. It may not come at once and doubtless will develop quite slowly but the fostering care lent by such men as Viscount Willingdon will tend to stimulate what development there are to the free expression of a national sense. Canadian art when it reaches its stride will not be imitative except in the sense that there are traces of origins in the greatest art. Canadian art will be an art which will be a real contribution to world art wealth. Any other contribution Canada makes will not at least be art.

THE TEST BEGINS

A record session of Parliament has been held at Ottawa and legislative machinery put in force in the effort to bring about those changes which the new regime feels should assist in bringing about a return to normalcy in business and in employment. Hon. Mr. Bennett has put the machinery to the test and the test is beginning. He is confident that the means and methods he uses will bring about the ideal which he has had in mind.

MOTHER-LOVE

The deplorable death of Mrs. Roy Clarke at Sault Ste. Marie on Tuesday came as a great shock to her many friends here. The tragedy is the more poignant in that she was trying to take a loaded revolver from her three year old child, who she evidently feared might do himself injury, with the gun which he had found on the mantel and thinking not of herself, she tried to get it from him with fatal result. It is another case of mother love thinking not of the cost to herself but mindful of her child. Mrs. Clarke was well known here and the numerous friends of the family in Belleville will sympathize with the bereft husband and children.

FLIES AND DUST GONE

Flies and dust, the bane of life in the summer, have almost disappeared in city and country. Motoring and the development of roads have wiped out the dust menace largely, while the fly has all it can do to survive in very small numbers because of garbage collection and sanitary measures. One has but to look back for a few years to remember how flies swarmed in the cities and towns in the old days, where every back yard was a breeding ground for them. Today the once ugly back yards are either gardens or lawns, streets are clean of any filth which will give the fly a resting place. The disappearance of the stable in town and city has meant much for cleanliness. The fly meant disease and illhealth, it was the bearer of plague and pestilence.

Cities have largely eliminated the dust nuisance thanks to good roads and oiling. In the country the fly does not have the chance it has had in the cities because of congestion in crowded areas. Changes are seen in the country, and the fly has not as many places to rest as it used to have. Highways have removed the dust menace on many roads, oiling has cleared other township "lines," but there yet remain a number of roads which are clouded in dust as motors pass. However these are more and more disappearing as the roads and highway development proceeds. Today there is missing the old type road, a real bed of dust in dry weather, a mudpuddle in wet days. It is gone never to return.

These two changes of the past decade have made life in city and country more enjoyable and motoring is not the ordeal it once was, today it is perfectly pleasure.

SIDELIGHTS

THE PEONIES

Someone had set a bowl of peonies
On the white table where they caught the light;
And as he roused from slumber, more at ease
Their dusky crimson flashed upon his sight.

Lying in the languor on his snowy bed,
Islanded in that vast austere white room,
The little crystal bowl of living red
Brimmed his age-wasted heart with summer bloom

And drowsing now his body seemed to glow
Again with raptures of long-spent desires,
Peonies, bursting from deep drifts of snow
Flame upon flame, flashed their exuberant fires.

Through his closed eyelids; bloom on burning bloom,
Blazed his starved senses to an ecstasy
Of clear red life, until the unseen room
Burned all about him, one vast peony—

One flower of fire! Nay, but the very world,
Petal on petal flushed to sheer blood-red,
A globe of living flame about him furled
Within whose furnace-heart he now lay dead.

TWENTY POUNDS OF SUGAR for One Dollar used to be a slogan of cheapness that seemed to represent the rockbottom point of cheapness — when you and I were young Maggie. Since then the price of sugar has climbed like other commodities and reached and passed the ten-cent mark, in fact during the war sugar was hard to get at any price at times. Now, see what's happened, sugar has returned to the five cent level and even lower, other commodities are away down too, in food, clothing and other things—a mighty good time to buy says I before the price thermometer begins to show higher temperatures.

IN THE BEST JOKE OF THE WEEK series the following has been submitted by Sidelight reader as worthy of a premier place:

The Irish emigrant just landed in New York was making his way into the city when he was halted at a busy crossing. Incidentally he watched the traffic policeman.

Every now and again the latter would hold up the traffic and call out "Pedestrians," but the successive rushes across the street always left the Irishman behind.

Once more the policeman shifted his position and shouted "Pedestrians."

"If that doesn't beat everything!" muttered Murphy. "Hey, mister!" he yelled to the policeman, "when are ye goin' to let some Catholics across?"

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—What does an acceptance to an invitation indicate?

A.—That sooner or ltaer you expect to include this friend in your social life, to share your pleasures. A social favor must be accepted unless it is to be returned.

Q.—Is it proper to take the last helping of any dish which may be passed to one?

A.—Yes; to decline the last helping gives the impression that one doubts the supply.

Judith's Light

Guy Swaringen

Mrs. Henry Stanley billowed into the office where Old Doc Blair pored pucker-browed over a new treatise on modern medicine. . .

"Mornin', Doc! She's eased her bilt onto a chair, panting. "Lan' o' Goshen, this ere's sartin' life children to school and helpin' Timmy at the store is wearin' me to a frazzl Doctor, I stopped in to speak to you about Judith Mary. If Henry don't get some help I'll—"

"What about Judith?" Old Doc interrupted rather firmly.

"I guess Jim Hines' leavin' had somethin' to do with——"

"Shucks!" Doc hid interest behind skepticism. "Jim's been gone as least four years!"

"Yes. And it wasn't known for certain that him and Judith was engaged before Jim's friends both died inside of two weeks. Then he was left all that money, and he went away, and—Don't tell me she hasn't grieved!"

Doc nodded amusingly. "Jim Hines owned a little more than a mule and a home. Simply lucked up the house and left it."

"And I bet it's been hard on Judith, livin' next door to that big old lonesome house. Now I don't believe in ghosts, Doctor—but there was times in that house last night! Noises too!"

"Get out!" Old Doc chuckled; then said, "Why?"

"I know a light when I see it! I got up after midnight for a drink of water, and I woke Henry up first to see. Judith must have seen or heard somethin' too. I stopped in to see her this mornin', and she was pale and kind of nervous-like. Didn't have much to say."

"She's wearing herself out sewing for the public."

"All right, laugh! But go and see her. If anybody can make her take better care of herself it's you. Well, I must get on to the store."

Doc watched her waddle out. Then he rose, deciding to walk the three blocks to Judith's. He'd call on her to vision Judith Mary getting flighty. The town's most sensible old maid. Not that she was particularly, at that. Nerves, probably. Um!....

Doc regarded the Hines home, one of the fine houses of the town, now shedding paint in flakes. An old landed family, the Hines had sold their plantation years ago and moved to town. This was what remained of their wealth, unless Jim—And Jim was in Europe, or somewhere, and might never come back. Lucky bum! Doc tramp hunting shelter and a place to sleep.

Behind was Judith Mary's tiny cottage. Here Doc knocked loudly and his shrewd old eyes searched Judith's face when she came to the door.

"Morning, Judith." He noted gray in her brown hair, and lines in the pink and white contours of her face. Her blue eyes, the color of eyes that had no business being there.

She stared at him inquiringly, "Why, no, Doctor. Nothing is the way into her living room, fitted with a table for cutting and a sewing machine. And that took Doc's quick inquiry; and absence of her usual cheery smile.

"Mother told me to stop and ask when she can get a fitting." Doc fumbled over his improvised excuse, and then Judith smiled.

"Well!" he said bluntly. "what's wrong?"

She hesitated; then picked up a newspaper in front of paper.

"I found this yesterday, packed around an attachment I'd ordered for my machine. A piece of a New York paper, over a month old."

Doc took the paper. What she pointed out was only a small item. It said that an American living in London, named James Hines, had disappeared. A body found in the Thames was believed to be his, and had been buried as such.

Doc said sharply: "Why didn't you

DO YOU SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION?

Countless remedies are advertised for constipation, relief is the moment but they are habit forming and must be continued. Others contain calomel and dangerous mineral drugs, which salivate the system, settle in the joints and cause aches and pains. Then there are purgatives which cramp and gripe and irritate the delicate bowel lining.

Avoid fabricating oils which only grease the intestines and encourage nature's machinery to become lazy.

A purely vegetable laxative such as Carter's Little Liver Pills, gently soothes the liver, bile starts to flow, the bowels move gently, the intestines are thoroughly cleansed and constipation poisons pass away. The stomach, liver and bowels are now active and the system enjoys a real tonic effect. All druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

and Jim marry?"

"Well, somehow, we hadn't quite got around to being engaged. Then both Jim's parents took sick and died, and Jim was all upset. He begged me to marry him at once and go away somewhere. But it all happened so suddenly that I refused." Her voice sank very low: "I failed him when he needed me most!"

"Here, now!" Doc considered. "I'm going to give you a nerve tonic."

"Then last night there was a light in his house, and footsteps!"

"Some tramp sleeping there," Doc said grimly.

She nodded wearily. "Yes, likely—But it all comes back so!"

"I'll go and see about that, and speak to the police."

So Doc went out, pulling forth the big bunch of keys he habitually carried. It was not surprising that he found one to fit the lock of the Hines door.

In the musty hall he paused to listen. Climbed the wide stairs. A bedroom was there the master of the house, Jim Hines used to sleep. Doc went thither cautiously, having little confidence in tramps.

Then stopped in the door, goggling amasedly at the bed.

"Jim!" he shouted at last. "Jim Hines!"

A long sigh before the man on the bed stirred and sat up. His thin face was pale and tired behind a two days' growth of dark beard; his eyes still heavy with sleep.

"Hello! Oh, you, Doctor Blair? Wish you hadn't woke me up!"

"So you've come home!" said Old Doc Blair.

"Eh? Oh, not to stay. Goin' to sell this place; then I'll be off. Got a situation in Australia, I think."

"Sell this place?" Doc regarded him thoughtfully. "Why?"

"I'm broke"—wearily. "not that it matters. I'm jolly well fed up on lonlin' around empitin' houses like such. Be glad to get to work again."

"Why haven't you come back long ago and married Judith Mary?"

Jim Hines winced. "Didn't get any answer to the letters I wrote her. Maybe they were lost. But, anyhow, she'd turned me down once. Didn't think she'd want me to keep pesterin' her."

"Umph spent a lot of time thinking that English secrets, haven't you! You need breakfast. Get dressed and come along."

"Oh, I say! Don't bother about me I'll make out——"

"Get on your clothes!" growled Doc in his professional voice.

"He led the way to Judith Mary's and opened the door, calling "Judith!"

But Doc might have been in Cities, for all the two saw of Jim then.

"Jim!" cried Judith, as she ran forward. "Jim!"

"M-my dear!" stammered Jim Hines, gripping her hands. "My dear! My dear!"

Old Doc quietly closed the door, blew his nose explosively, and trudged back to his office. Where he glared absently at his bride-to-be's telegram. "Modern Medicine, hey?" he sniffed. "I know a trick that beats that!

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Pop and ma are going to buy a Sparrow car instead of a Wimple cn account of it being ma's lover, and today pop came home saying, Well its all settled, the paper is signed and the ink is blotted. We own a Sparrow, he sed.

How exciting, when are they going to bring it up, tomorrow morning? ma sed.

Well, hardly, pop sed. In fact they dont exactly bring it up, it has to come from the factory. Delivery will be made in 3 weeks he sed.

Then we have to wait a outrageous ma sed. Why ony this morning I stopped in at Hookbinders grocery department and ordered a whole list of things varying from A to Z, and the whole order reached the house before I got home myself. And yet these people claim they need 3 weeks to deliver one thing that goes by itself anyway and practically delivers itself, she sed.

But for Peet sake theyre got to send it from the factory 500 miles away and there are thousands of orders ahead of ours, pop sed. And besides we have'nt even got driving permits yet, besidont want the house cluttered up with an automobeel with nobody to drive it, he sed.

Yes, we do if ony for the principel of the thing, ma sed, I think we aint to stand up for our rites weather we need them or not, she sed. I want you to stop in again and speak to those people, she sed, and pop sed. O all rite, yes gode, Ill speek to them.

Proberly meaning he'll just say How do you do.

ONTARIO W.C.T.U. MEETS HERE IN EARLY OCTOBER

Extension Program Arranged for Annual Convention Oct. 6-10

LOCAL PLANS MADE

This year, for the first time in over twenty-five years, the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold its annual convention in Belleville. The first third annual meeting begins on October 6th in Bridge Street Church and continues until October 10th. Over two hundred and fifty delegates will be billeted in the city.

An extensive programme has been arranged, the feature of which is the Thursday evening entertainment when the convention will be addressed by Hon. Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labour, and Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, D.D., of Washington, general secretary of the World's League Against Alcoholism.

Tuesday will be devoted to reports of the growth, development and opportunity in the following groups:—Evangelistic, Patriotic, Educational, Publicity, Philanthropic and Prevenative. In the first group, Mrs. Silliwell, the provincial president of this city while her husband, Mr. A. L. Silliwell was head of the mathematics department at Albert College. Miss Hall will give the report on Sabbath Observance.

On Tuesday evening the Belleville Union will entertain the convention at a dinner at which it is expected that the Minister of Labour, Hon. G. Robertson will give the address of the evening.

On Wednesday evening, after a very busy session during the daytime, there will be a presenting of prizes and the various contests and a programme arranged by the Young Women's Christian Association.

The election of officers will be held on Thursday. The present officials of the Ontario W.C.T.U. are:—

Honorary Secretary—Mrs. S. O. E. McKee. North Bay, Mrs. E. A. Stevens, Toronto.

Players of the Game

Connie Mack—Manager of Pennant Winners.

So far as his sheet biographers ever have been able to determine, there is only one reason why Connie Mack, seemingly the conqueror of all the worlds that can be conquered in baseball, declines ever to entertain any serious thoughts of retiring to loaf as his health and his alert mental faculties remain intact.

And there are ever so many reasons why he might, including the fact that he is 67—he will be 68 two days before next Christmas; he has just come into his eighth American League pennant; he has soared to the heights, plumbed the depths during the many years his teams persisted in remaining in the cellar after he had dismantled his great array of 1914, and reunited the top to stand once more as a Colossus astride the baseball diamond.

Figuratively and literally, this tall Philadelphian, as one critic once remarked, "stands with his feet on the ground and his head away up in the heavens where he can see far beyond the vision of ordinary men."

Have him any of the other remaining veteran pilots of the game, he stands as the great connecting link between the days of baseball's dark ages and the modern era.

In Baseball Since 1886

He has survived all of the thirty campaigns of the American League and several years before that circuit came into being he had passed out of the National, a veteran catcher and manager of ten years' service.

He had caught his first game for Washington, then in the National circuit, in 1886, and had been signed by the merry life of a baseball outlaw when he jumped to the Buffalo club in the rebellious Players League of 1890.

Why then doesn't he retire to spend his declining years in ease and comfort, well removed from the turmoil of the playing fields.

Simply because Connie Mack refuses to believe he has any declining years and the hardest months of the year for him are those during the Winter when he can't get near a ball park. From the time his players report for Spring training until the last world's series game is recorded, Mack is scarcely ever away from a ball park.

Even on days when his Athletes have an open date, he invariably can be found sitting in a stand in some out-of-the-way town taking in a minor league or even sand-lot game, making notes. He is always making notes.

Has Inherited Love of Game

It is this inherent love of the game that he has followed for two-score years, combined with so many other singular traits. that beyond doubt has contributed so tremendously to his success. He has as many sides to his nature as a centipede has legs.

He can be ill-domineering and austere as the mightiest of rulers when he sits on the bench and wiggles his famous score card. That may be why that his fast ball pitcher is about to lose some of his speed and the fielders, therefore, are to veer slightly to the left, and the fielders—whose respect for Mack's sagacity touches the sublime and profound—move as if jabbed with a pin.

Then again he can become extremely unobtrusive as often happens during the early days of a training season when he prefers to keep himself in the background and leave his lieutenants to break in the rookies and his presence might tend to make them a bit self-conscious and handicap their trial.

The story is told by Ira Thomas, his chief scout, now a rookie, who had been in the A's camp in Montgomery some five or six days had asked Thomas what he was doing there and he was he wanted to write a letter home.

Memory is Prodigious

"Sure," cried Ira, "you've been here nearly a week and don't know the name of this town? Don't let Mack hear about this."

"And who is Mack?" asked the rookie.

His memory is prodigious. Back in 1918, Mack Zachary began to harbor ambitions toward becoming a major league pitcher, but then came the war and Zachary was called. While waiting to be sent abroad from an embarkation camp near Philadelphia, Tom would slip over to watch the A's perform.

Then after Jones had emerged the victor by a single stroke over George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, who finished in two-day 36-hole test, with 73 70—143; after Johnston had been eliminated by a single shot, despite a gallant comeback, as he scored 83 72—155, which was less than 1 stroke with scores of 153, had started but failed to complete a playoff battle for the eight places remaining on the list of 32 qualifiers for match play, starting today.

Johnston's tragic failure to earn the right to defend his crown at match play marked the second time in the 34-year history of the national amateur tournament that a champion has not qualified. Robert A. (Bob) Gardner, of Chicago, after capturing the national championship in 1908, was not among the qualifiers for the defence of his crown in 1910, when Warren C. Downes, of Pittsburg was the winner.

Seventeen years ago Jerome T. Travers was forced to play off to enter the match-play struggle and he went on to win the title but Johnston just missed even this opportunity as he finished tucked like a sardine and was passed by an eleventh hour outburst of low scoring among a flock of unheralded competitors.

How They Stand

St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Chicago Cubs 10-1, 6-10, 10-6, and need only two victories in their remaining four games to clinch the National League pennant even if the Chicago Cubs win their remaining four games. If the Cubs lose one game, the Cardinals will have to win only one game out of four to clinch the pennant. If the Cubs win all their games, the Cardinals can tie for the pennant by winning one game. The Cubs were idle yesterday, and the Cardinals increased their lead to three games. Brooklyn was definitely eliminated from the pennant race when the Robins bowed to the New York Giants 8-2. It was Brooklyn's sixth straight defeat and left the Robins only one percentage point ahead of the Giants. The standing games behind, and games left to play for the leaders after today's results follow:

	Won	Lost	Pct.	G.B.	P
St. Louis	89	61	.593	..	4
Chicago	86	64	.573	3	4
Brooklyn	84	66	.560	5	4
New York	82	67	.550	5	3

JONES LEADS ALL IN QUALIFYING

Shot 142 in Two Rounds to Tie Old Mark —Could Have Broken Record

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 24—Continuing his unbroken march of triumph for the year, Bobby Jones yesterday captured the qualifying medal in the thirty-sixth national golf championship with a record-equalling score of 69-72—142 in a battle that witnessed the downfall of the defending champion, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, of St. Paul and produced unprecedented carnage among other favorites.

Which defeat finally overtook and halted the hectic struggle over the historic east course of the Merion Cricket Club after Jones had emerged the victor by a single stroke over George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, who finished in two-day 36-hole test, with 73 70—143; after Johnston had been eliminated by a single shot, despite a gallant comeback, as he scored 83 72—155, which was less than 1 stroke with scores of 153, had started but failed to complete a playoff battle for the eight places remaining on the list of 32 qualifiers for match play, starting today.

On The Sport Trail

HOW'S THIS ONE.

SHORT OF MATERIAL

The Intercollegiate football race will be only so-so this year. The Blues and White squad of Varsity is being rebuilt, while McGill will have practically a new team this year. The mentor of the Tri-color should shoot lead his team into the sunshine of a championship but it will not be the squad that captured three Dominion championships. There is a hope that the Hamilton Tigers will be drifted back into a position of prominence for we, there does not appear a team able to even warm up the collection of Tigers that Bobby Kerr had on the paying through the Canadian West with. The games will only bring about more cohesion in the component parts and they will be short of the other entries in the matter of condition. It takes the games to put the plays into perfect operation.

THINK IT OVER

Can there not be an agitation started to enter at least one series of the Ontario Lacrosse Union next summer. At one time Belleville pinned a swell Tavoulis team but the present season appears to have left the sidelines. This is Canada's National game and one that brings out all the enthusiasm of spectators. The Board of Deseronto could be induced to come back into the pastime there is no reason why a good league could not be formed and the game put on its proper status in this district. Come on Harry help hear from you on the subject.

WANTED, ANOTHER FLAG

Baseball did not enjoy a successful season in Belleville this year but that does not say the game is dead. At present there is perfect baseball weather with no teams in the running and the ardent fan is quite dead. There is no doubt there will be four teams in the league next year, Peterboro, Belleville, Oshawa and Kingston are the Bay of Quinte City entrant cannot hope to cop the banting with the players now at the disposal of Walter Ellis but with sufficient support of the team. He has performed miracles with team representing Belleville in the past but next year must be included in certain positions if the team is to remain to function.

Lets have a ball team that can at least make a show of obtaining before becoming a cropper.

FORMER TWEED RESIDENT DIED

Bishop Seager Paid His Official Visit to Village —Students Depart

Tweed, Sept. 24 (By Mail)—It was with profound regret that the citizens of Tweed and Suphide learned on Tuesday night of the death of Mr. Frank H. Cotton. The deceased was for many years a valued employee of the Nichols Chemical Co. at Suphide. After leaving there he took up his residence in Tweed and about two years ago he took a position in the Dominion Bank at Bancroft for Sudbury. He was taken ill in November last and came to Peterborough where Mrs. Cotton was living. It was hoped that his illness would only be temporary but despite the best medical treatment and care, nothing could apparently be done for him and he passed away Tuesday evening. He is survived by a widow and one son, also two brothers and one sister, Mr. W. Gil Cotton and Mrs. ff. J. Cordy of Suphide, Mrs. Webb, Mr. Fred Cotton and Mr. Wm. Cotton of Guelph and Mrs. Cottrington, Verona, Que. The funeral took place under the Masonic auspices from the residence of Mr. A. J. Cordy on Friday at 2.30 p.m. to St. James' Church.

Mrs. E. Barkus

The death took place of Winnipeg on Monday night, of Mrs. E. Backus, daughter of Mrs. John Stout sr., of Tweed. The deceased spent a couple of months here this summer with her mother and left for her home on September 4th. She was only ill about a week and the news of her death was a great shock to her many friends in Tweed. Much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved mother who is protracted with grief. The remains were brought home on the noon train Friday. The funeral took place on Saturday at 2 p.m. The remains were taken to the Union Cemetery where services were held. Interment was made at White Lake.

Messrs. Franklin Trudeau, Clayton Ledlege, Jos. Collins and Leonard Hudswell left for St. Augustine Seminary at Toronto on Tuesday morning. On the occasion of their departure they were given a farewell party by the Columbia Club of which they were members, in the club rooms. A musical programme was rendered by some of the members of the club after which supper was served. The club regret at losing such valuable members.

Rev. Mr. Smart of Portsmouth spent a few days visiting friends in town.

Miss Bessie Donnelly, spent the week end with relatives in Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kerr and Mr. A. C. Barnett motored to Kingston accompanied by Arthur Kerr and Miss Ruby Cordy of Suphide who are entering Queen's University.

Mrs. Roxboro of Toronto is visiting her mother Mrs. Mary Morton.

Mrs. Beatrice Morton is visiting relatives in Thomasburg.

Jas. Wilder returned from Kingston General Hospital much improved in health.

Miss Millicent Moffat gave a bridge party in honor of Miss Ruby Cordy, who is to attend Queen's this term, on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. Jno. Elliott of Toronto is visiting at his home.

Mr. Wilfred Rashotte of Montreal is visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Jos Rashotte.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Trudeau and children returned home after spending a week with the latter's mother in Stanbourn, Que.

The Forty Hour Devotions will be at St. Carthagh's Convent on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

Confirmation will be held on Sunday, Sept. 28th at St. Carthagh's Church.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Seager of Kingston visited St. James Church on Sunday, Sept. 21st. Confirmation service was held in the morning when eight candidates were presented. In the evening the annual Harvest Thanksgiving service was held. The Bishop preached at both services. In the afternoon he visited Hungerford and Actinolite where Harvest Thanksgiving services were also held.

Braves Better Ball Club in Offing

A few lines over the wires the other day carried the news that the Boston Braves had sold $60,000 for Worthington and Wilson. Boston is not going crazy spending money, but the Braves made such a good showing this season under Bill McKechnie that Judge Fuchs owner of the team said that McKechnie was the best manager the team had ever had and that he would spend money to put a winner in at Braves' field.

The Braves are not going to stop there. They have scouts who are looking over desirable talent, but their strong point is the Card string. Brendon and Rickey of the St. Louis team, not forgetting that Boston let Barleigh Grimes go to the St. Louis in time to make that team a pennant contender, are grateful.

The Braves have been supported by Boston fans. They like a winner in this town, but what appealed to them was the fact that McKechnie had the boys playing baseball with Wallenberger their star and the greatest attraction at the Hub since Babe Ruth left there for New York.

In the great prosperity that has engulfed the National league this season, the Braves have been very fortunate. They have had one of the biggest possessors ever known there. New players will be bought wherever possible. Some of the stars of other clubs will be on the market this winter and Boston will go as high as any other team to get them.

An unruffled surface is not at all popular in the sartorial sphere this season. One of the smartest of the new evening gowns owes its charm and freshness to the circular skirt which terminates in a series of green and rose chiffon ruffles. The dress is of navy blue chiffon with green and rose chiffon roses at the waistline.

Long for a coat for evening is the decree. Heim has created a coat on very long slim lines and has made it of black chiffon velvet, lined with pale blue velvet of the same quality. It is finished in a magnificent silver fox collar and shoulder capelets replace sleeves.

A careless slip is one that is so bulky that is destroys the silhouette which is so important a feature of the present mode. The best slips are fitted with a flare to the skirt in the manner of a peach crepe slip which is form fitting and has a fitted bandeau of lace. Deep lace godets add interest to the skirt.

The turban fits into the scheme satisfied, regardless of the whims of the modes. Designers for Autumn wear is a lovely turban of classic lines of white and black velvet which is twisted and draped into a high bow at the back.

Wool winds into the story of the new fashions with emphasis at the moment, placed on wool lace. Very delightful is a frock of black wool lace piped with green silk and posed over a slip of matching silk. It has short sleeves with tiny green silk bows.

Make a match in your new Autumn costume if you would be smart. A suit of fine herring bone with noble of orange and red has a matching topcoat trimmed with beaver, and a beret of the tweed with a grosgrain trim that matches in color the silk crepe blouse.

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING

BY

LUCILLE

Dear Readers: Should you decide this year that you are going to change the colour scheme of your living rooms, or merely have new draperies and window hangings, now is the time to plan the arrangement. Here are just a few hints gathered to give you some help in this phase of home decoration.

In the first Place if you are not buying new furniture you must be sure that the window draperies are not too bright, in contrast, or else your furnishings will appear dull and shabby. Draperies should not be more vivid than the principal colourings of the room, nor brighter than objects of the same colour in the room. For example, if draperies are the same colour as the rug, they must not be of a greater intensity or the rug will look faded. It is always better to have them lighter than the rug for if the draperies are dark, unless the floor is dark the result will be an unbalanced air about the room.

If your draperies are to be figured, and the walls are brighter than the others the design, they should not be in the dominant colour of the room. An extremely vivid bit of colour in the draperies, you see, might be repeated in a vivid colouring of lamps, vases, or pictures, but not in rugs, furniture or larger objects.

A room that has many windows requires that the colourings of draperies less vivid, otherwise the room will seem smaller than it really is. In such a room sharp contrasts are to be avoided. Contrasts, however, offer the finest effect in decoration. If the room you are "doing over" is large, try for these contrasts for they produce a balance of warm cool colour that would be possible if you concentrated your effort on matching colours already in the room. If your room is predominantly green, it may be enlivened by contrasts with violet, a blue scheme may be changed by the use of draperies in yellow, blue-greens may be contrasted with red, or vice versa.

Contrasts of bright vivid and of softer grayed tones of the same shade also add interest to drapery combinations, and makes the room beautiful and restful.

Above all draperies should be in colours consistent with the use of the room. Medium and darker colours are suitable for living rooms. Light soft pastel colours are suited for feminine bedrooms, and vivid darker colours for purely masculine rooms.

If your home decoration plans present a problem to you, let us help you decide the most attractive to your requirements.

Fashionable yours,

Lucille.

The Hostess Suggests

APPLE JAM

3 pounds brown sugar.
2 cups water.
3 pounds apples.
2 lemons.
3-4 ounce ginger root.

Boil sugar and water five minutes. Add apples, pared, cored and chopped, the grated rind and juice of the lemons, and the ginger root grated. There should be about six tablespoons grated ginger root. Boil mixture twenty minutes or until clear and dense, stirring frequently. Pour into sterile glasses. When firm, cover with melted paraffin and with tin cover. Label and put away until needed. This makes about eight glasses.

GRAPE CONSERVE

Prepare pulp and skins as for jam. For 8 pounds grapes add pulp and rind of 3 oranges, sliced, and cook until tender. Add 4 pounds or sugar, 1 1-2 pounds seed raisins. Cook until thick, adding 1-2 pound chopped walnuts for the last ten minutes.

"Recipes" will appear under the heading each day. You are invited to contribute your favorites.

Today's Verse

A SCARF

I have walked in th enight to listen
In the greening of the year,
To the silent sound of raindrops
And found it good to hear.

I have caught the fluttered silence
To me like a soft shawl
And lightly wrapped me in the comfort
Of hearing thin rain fall.

Mount Pleasant Church Redecorated

The United church at the intersection of the seventh concession of Thurlow and the Shannonville gravel road known as Mount Pleasant Church of the Plainfield appointment has been completely renovated and re-decorated. A splendid job has been executed and all is in readiness for the re-opening which will take place, Sunday, September 28th. The Rev. W. H. Tan ton of the Cobourg United Church, who is also chairman of the Cobourg Presbytery will be the special speaker for the occasion at eleven and seven o'clock. Special music will feature the services. The pastor of the church is the Rev. A. M. Wootton and the organist Mrs. Robert Elliott.

In a recent month 236,480 tons of asbestos were produced in Chile.

WEDDINGS

DAVIS—KENT

Emmanuel Church, artistically decorated for the occasion, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at eleven-thirty this morning when Lillian Emily, only daughter of Mrs. E. Kent and the late Horace Kent, of this city, became the bride of Mr. Cecil Henry Davis, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Davis, Fairy Bound. Rev. George Marshall performed the ceremony.

The bride made a lovely picture in her gown of bridal white lace and georgette, with veil of white tulle that was caught to her hair with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of pale pink roses.

Miss Violet Rigby was bridesmaid and wore a frock of Alice blue georgette with black picture hat and her bouquet was of yellow roses.

Mr. Cyril Kent, the bride's brother, acted as groomsman and the wedding music was played by Miss Wilder.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride twenty-five guests being present. The groom's gift to the bride was a brown fox scarf, to the bridesmaid a pendant and to the groomsman a Parker pen and pencil set.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Davis left on a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Parry Sound, the bride travelling in a costume of green travel tweed, with hat, shoes and bag of green, hickory and gloves in beige. On their return they will reside at 272 George St.

The out-of-town guests present at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Toward Tear, Miss Thelma Tear, Miss Bertha Morgan and Mr. Stanley Morgan all of Toronto.

Time has Tested it — Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has been on the market upwards of fifty years and in that time it has proved a blessing to thousands. It is in high favor throughout Canada and its excellence has carried its fame beyond the seas. If it were double the price it would be a cheap liniment.

Advice to Lovelorn

HER FAMILY IS UNSYMPATHETIC

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Here is the story. I am a young lady of twenty-four, keeping company with a young man two years my senior. We have been seeing each other steadily for over a year and are planning to announce our engagement within a few weeks. Now, it seems that my family has not taken a great liking to my sweetheart for very petty reasons. One is that he is rather a well built man who is about six inches taller than myself, and another is that he is not a man of profession (doctor or lawyer).

My mother is constantly talking against my marriage to him, and she says it is all up to me. She does not try to make herself friendly towards him in any way, and he is aware that my family does not care for him very much.

He can provide very nicely for me, and his one aim is to make me happy knowing how my family feels about our marriage.

Now, my mother is somewhat dependent upon me and I have persuaded my sweet heart to live with my mother after we are married for about six months until she can get her bearings.

There doesn't seem to be anyone to whom I can go for advice, so I am going to ask a disinterested party and will try to guide myself accordingly.

P.E.

Please let me implore you not to attempt anything as certain to end in disster as the arrangement of which you speak—you, your husband and all unreconciled and critical mother all living under the same roof. It would be a better plan all around if you could make your mother such an allowance as you can afford, and have her live with some other member of the family. Perhaps when she sees she has been mistaken in regard to your finance, and that he is making you a good husband she will change her point of view and all of you will become friendly—but at present, trying to live together seems to me an impossible arrangement. The best of luck to you.

Woman is Attacked Negro Faces Charge

St. Thomas, Sept. 24—Nathan Ryan, 50-year-old negro residing just north of the city, has been arrested on a charge of breaking and entering the residence of Miss Martha Flexen a neighbor, with intent to commit an indictable offence. The provincial police are contemplating laying a more serious charge against the prisoner.

Ryan is alleged to have broken into the home of Miss Flexen an elderly lady at 2 o'clock Saturday morning and to have attacked her as she lay in bed. Her screams aroused the neighborhood, and she struck at her assailant with a heavy flashlight with which she had first caught a glimpse of him.

Ryan is supposed to have been frightened away. Ryan has been remanded on a charge of breaking and entering. Miss Flexen is said by the police to have identified Ryan as her assailant.

Police Mystery of Car Thought to be From Belleville

Ottawa Suspected That Owner of Stolen Car Kidnapped by Bandits

GIRL'S IDENTITY

Peculiar Sequel in Search of Mutt and Jeff Bandits

Two bandits nicknamed "Mutt" and "Jeff" on account of their stature, who have terrorized the residents in the eastern part of Central Ontario for the past two weeks by wholesale thefts of motorcars and other articles besides the holding-up of service station attendants reportedly worked Ottawa some time yesterday according to information received by the local police last night. The Ottawa police asked the local authorities to check up on all Marquette cars registered in this city as a car of that name was stolen from Ottawa, yesterday, and the owner of the car has disappeared and it is presumed he was kidnapped by the bandits, while the car was stolen. In place of the Marquette car was left a Chandler seven passenger sedan, Quebec license 36-58. Nearby the sedan was found a tire cover marked Belleville.

The local police and provincial police state they have had no information or anyone being missing from the city nor any car stolen.

Chief McCarthy of Ottawa, informed Sergt. Detective Trusdell, who was on desk duty, that the Ottawa police had a girl in custody presumably from Belleville, who might be connected with the bandits. The girl refused to divulge her name but stated she was in the Cornod Cafe in Kingston some time yesterday. She was found near the substituted car.

NO CONTAGION IN BELLEVILLE NOW

With the removal of a scarlet fever card from a house on Bleecker avenue yesterday afternoon, the action freed the city of any contagious disease according to Dr. Cronk the Medical Officer of Health. "The city has been very fortunate this year in the matter of contagious disease," said Dr. Cronk, and "at the present time there is not one case known to the Board of Health."

COUNTRYSIDE AT FALL EXHIBITION

New Totals in Attendance and Exhibits Made at Stirling

Stirling Agricultural Society has been making steady progress ever since the new grounds were purchased and new buildings erected for the housing of the exhibits. The 1930 exhibition no exception to the rule of advance will go down in history as one of the markgod successes of the long series of fall fairs which have been held in this centre of agriculture. The success of this year's show was due to a number of causes; the attention which the society has been paying to its prize list which has brought the quality of the exhibits to a high standard of merit so that to win a prize means something excellent; the excellent weather; the fine history of the society for "the square deal;" the fine body of officers who handle the affairs of the exhibition from year to year., Progress is marked over everything attempted this year. More than was attempted was realized.

The greater part of the dry was with the warm September which er the country has been accustomed to this autumn. It was the last summer midweek day for next week step's trial autumn with the arrival of October. From the four corners the people came in motors and the grounds were a symbol of the real importance of the Stirling district. This fair is an apt expression of the district's importance.

Stirling expresses an individuals soul. Its fair shows this, the town shows it. It believes in stability and everywhere was evidence that the men who have been piloting the society for the past few years have a sane idea of a fair.

The big passages first of all a very fine body of officers from the president E. J. Fyear down. This includes the new secretary Mr. J. E. O'Donnell who took the place of Dr. Sinn. No veteran secretary who gave up on account of his health in order to take a well deserved rest. The fair owes

BUSINESS ON UPWARD TURN

Sir Herbert Holt and Sir Charles Gordon are Convinced

Victoria, Sept. 25—"We have reached the bottom and are at the turn," Sir Herbert Holt, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, said here in commenting on conditions in Canada.

"There is no stringency of money in the country," commented Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal, another Canadian financier visiting here.

"There is no stringency of money in the country," commentmeasure to the low price of commodities, but there is a better feeling now," Sir Charles added.

"The revival is coming, but it will be gradual," he continued. "There is plenty of money in the country for the business being done and we are always ready to advance loans for legitimate commercial enterprise."

This year's crop, which has been estimated at four hundred million bushels, is better than had been expected, Sir Charles commented.

"There should be a permanent improvement in the volume of business done by the manufacturers of the country," he said when questioned concerning the new tariff.

Bancroft's Future Is Bright With Power, Rail Developments

Proposal to Build Link of Railway, Madoc to Eldorado

RAILWAY PROPOSAL

Power Plant at Bancroft is Expected to Open up New Era

The Ontario Government on the 14th of last month, granted a charter to Bancroft Light and Power Company Limited, which proposes to develop electric power on the York River, running through the village of Bancroft, in the northern part of Hastings County, and also electricity for domestic uses of the citizens of Bancroft and for lighting the streets of the village.

In districts like Bancroft, which cannot be conveniently served by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Honorable J. R. Cooke has encouraged local development of power. The result of this policy will give the citizens of Bancroft all the advantages of electric power for domestic uses enjoyed by the cities of the Province and also enable them to move about at night through brilliantly lighted streets and will also afford protection against fires.

His Worship Mayor Reid of Belleville, proposes to use his influence to have the link of railway of six miles between Madoc and Eldorado completed so that trains will leave Belleville for the north of the county via Madoc and Eldorado. When Maybooth is linked to the northern line of the C.P.R. at Barrie's Bay, Belleville will have direct communication with Hudson's Bay.

Bancroft is situated on the branch lines of the old Central Ontario Railway and the Irondale and Bancroft, which make connection through the northern section of the province to Toronto and it is expected that before long a train will leave Belleville daily for Toronto via Bancroft and leave Toronto for Belleville via Bancroft.

The new power plant now being erected in Bancroft will aid in the industrial and mineral development of the northern part of Hastings and the future may see a thriving city within the limits of this progressive northern village.

After the plant is completed and in full operation, the Village Council propose to invite the Lieutenant-Governor to pay a visit to the village and inspect the new power plant and also the industrial and mineral advantages of Bancroft and the surrounding territory.

The beautiful lakes and lofty hills of this section will also be rendered more attractive to tourists as the conditions in Bancroft improve.

SECOND ACCIDENT IN HOWE FAMILY

"Misfortunes never come singly isn't an old proverb that aptly applies to the family of Mr. William Howe, South George Street, for hardly has his two daughters have been employed at the Trenton Canning factory for some weeks and on Tuesday night Miss Emma Howe sustained a fracture of the right hip. She was rushed to the Belleville hospital and after an X-ray examination had been made, the fracture was reduced by a local physician. The young woman is still confined to the institution but is progressing as well as can reasonably be expected.

Mr. Howe, who had to work late on Tuesday night, was coming to Belleville and it is presumed he dozed for an instant, the car leaving the road and striking a tree did considerable damage. His daughter was a passenger but fortunately no one was injured although practically all the glass in the car was broken.

Cost of Democratic nomination in Vermont was $1.80 as reported to Secretary of State.

Four in Fair Crowd Trampled When Horse Plunges Into People

BARRIE, Sept. 25—Three women and a boy were taken to Royal Victoria Hospital suffering from injuries when a saddle horse that had a bolter, threw its rider and jumped out of the ring into the thickest part of a large crowd witnessing the closing events at the Barrie Fair here late yesterday.

Stumbling over a hurdle and throwing his owner and rider, Andrew Orchard of Minesing, to the ground, the horse tore around the ring in front of the grandstand while nearly three thousand persons looked on.

Frightened by the yells from the crowd, the animal made a dash towards the wire fence surrounding the show ring and leaped into the crowd, landing between two autos.

The four who were injured were standing in a group and were struck and down and trampled as the horse tore into the crowd. The injured were: Mrs. J. Torpey of Minesing Station, minor leg injury; Mrs. Trembley Lefroy, minor leg injuries, later released from hospital; Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, 348 College Street, Toronto, under doctor's care with chest injuries, and Gerard McDougall, aged 7, the serious head injuries.

STIRLING SCHOOL CONTESTS KEEN

Childhood and Youth of District Stir Admiration of Spectators

One of the big and interesting events in connection with the Stirling Fall Fair is the championship school fair held under the direction of Mr. J. Wilson, the popular and energetic representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture at Stirling. In a large tent erected upon the grounds the display under the charge of several schools were visited by many and the exhibits there refreshed much credit upon the young exhibitors. Their handiwork was most favorably commented upon by all. The exhibits consisted of fruit, vegetables, flowers, cooking and art work, all the products of the rising generation. The judges in making their awards had no easy task to select exhibits which they deemed were worthy of placing a prize taken upon. The children are certainly to be commended for the enterprise shown by them. Awards are as follows:

Paper Barns—Clifford Warnsmaker, F. Robson, Edna Morgan, Eva Mills, Reta McWilliams, David Wright.

SHALL WOMEN BE ALLOWED TO PREACH? MEMBERS DECIDE

London, Ont., Sept. 25—Congregations of the United Church will be asked to decide whether women may be ordained as elders. A resolution to this effect moved by women delegates to the general council came up today and would have substituted "members in full membership" for the word "men" in the clauses which limit those eligible for membership. It was decided next meeting will be held in 1931.

A Calgary bid was rejected.

Ottawa Scientists Will Resume Observations on Unknown Planet

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — Early in October astronomers at the Dominion Observatory here will renew observations on the supposed planet which they found last February in searching their photographic plates for traces of the planet Pluto, discovered by United States observers at that clinic.

R. Meldrum Stewart, head of the observatory here, explained that it had been impossible to make any observations during the summer, as the object of the search was too near the sun. In a few weeks, however, it would be possible to take further photographic plates.

Information as to the nature of this astral body is still extremely meagre, as no observations have been made, but it is expected that plates taken during the coming Fall and Winter will enable the astronomers to form fairly definite conclusions.

COMMITTEES RESUME

Members of the City Council will meet tonight in committee in preparation for the first regular meeting of the council on Monday since the holiday was proclaimed early in July. The council have had a number of questions to decide during the summer months and the body has met as regularly as if no holiday had been set. The building of the new lower bridge caused many meetings and shortly afterwards the new upper bridge was mooted and many meetings to decide this question were also held. There is little of a routine nature that has not been, attended to for in the special meeting all information before the council was dealt with At the present there are no big questions before the council many have been solved, and it is not expected that the meeting tonight will be of a lengthy nature.

WAY REOPEN HARBOR

Representatives of business interests of Wellington were given a favorable interview in Ottawa by Hon Hugh A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works, in regard to the dredging of Wellington Harbor, to open it for the freight traffic. It was argued that conditions had changed radically since the original harbor work in 1912. Because of lack of demand for lake freight service, the harbor was used little and was let fill up with sand. At present it is not accessible even for small freighters. If this harbor is dredged the petitioners declare, 30,000 tons of freight, mostly canned goods would be shipped by water from that port. Freight is now being trucked to Picton, twelve miles, for water shipment. A steamship line has indicated that it would furnish Wellington a regular service if the harbor were dredged.

C.N.R. EMPLOYEE IS HURT

Harry W. Thompson, 200 Station Street, an employee of the Canadian National Railways is a patient at the Belleville General Hospital today following a minor operation on the middle finger of his right hand which he injured while at work. Thompson is under the care of Dr. Hill and will be confined to the hospital for a few days only.

IS BETTER TODAY

The condition of C. Taylor who was in the Labatt truck which was wrecked at Desoronto on Tuesday afternoon and who is a patient at the Belleville Hospital is reported to be improved today. Harry Michells, the driver was able to leave for his home last night.

SENT TO REFORMATORY

Electing summary trial and pleading guilty to assaulting his wife, about two weeks ago, Percy Beary was today in police court before Magistrate Mikel sentenced to three months and not more than one year in the Ontario Reformatory in Guelph. It is alleged that Beary was intoxicated at the time the assault took place in the home and Constable Isaard was sent to the scene and made the arrest. Beary has been recently discharged from the hospital after he fell off a train near Mallorytown sustaining severe lacerations about the face and head.

SELTER FOR FISHING BOATS

A harbor is being dredged at North Bay, near Omsemon, where a large fishing colony is located. This harbor will provide shelled fo the fishermen's boats which in the past have been damaged, by storms on the unsheltered shores. The estimtes for this work were passed in the regime of the King Government.

INJURED AT GARAGE

Noble Vance of Point Anne, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital this afternoon following an accident at the Oldsmobile Garage. Mr. Vance was injured internally, when a car being moved across the floor, shot ahead suddenly pinning him against the wall. It was found by Dr. J. J. Robertson, who made the examination, that his knee cap was fractured. He was given immediate treatment.

FIVE LARGE "SPUDS"

One of the Ontario Intelligencer reporters was shown today five large potatoes dug yesterday from a hill on the farm of Frank Ventures of Colborne. The average weight of the five "spuds" was one pound and thirteen ounces each, and the circumference averaged seventeen inches. Mr. Ventress is a citizen of Belleville and recently purchased the Cronk estate at the corner of Victoria Ave and Ann Street.

DIRECTORS MEET

The directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held their weekly luncheon in the Manor and afice today. There was no special speaker for the occasion, general business only being discussed.

TODAY'S TEMPERATURE

The pump house man gave the temperatures for yesterday as seventy two and forty-nine while the readings for today were seventy-four and sixty-four. Many found the weather particularly warm today after the cooling temperature of the past few days.

TAKEN TO HIS HOME

O. W. "Babe" Cunnington who was seriously injured in an auto accident east of the city two weeks ago was sufficiently recovered to be able to leave the hospital yesterday. He was taken to his home in Toronto. He learned the death of Dr. Wilfong of Chesterton, Indiana, a passenger in the other car involved in the collision, will be resumed as soon as Cunnington is able to attend the hearing.

STREW DAISIES AT WEDDING CEREMONY

A delightful touch in yesterday's pretty wedding at Emmanuel church when Miss Lillian Kent and Mr. Cecil Davis were united in marriage happened when the bridal couple left the church. Six little girls from the bride's Sunday school class preceded the party to the door, strewing the aisle with Shasta daisies.

SHORT CIRCUIT DESTROYS CAR

Stepping on the starter after the car had stalled, Roy Rosebrough of Canniffon last his coupe by fire early this morning at the intersection of the Foxboro highway and the Canniffton cross-road. Fortunately the car was insured against fire and theft but the insurance will not compensate for the loss. It is believed a short circuit developed in the motor, which caused it to burst instantly in flames and Mr. Rosebrough was able to extricate only himself from the car and all the personal property in the car was lost.

Mr. Rosebrough had taken a chum home, who resides on the west side of the Foxboro highway and was returning home when the accident happened. Coming to the top sign Rosebrough hailed the progress of his car and the motor stalled. He stepped on the starter and immediately the front of the car burst into flames and soon the whole car was enveloped. Highway Traffic Officer Frink investigated the accident.

While investigating the accident a car driven by Ray Stevens of Campbellford, pulled up in a car to view the wreck and Bert McPherson, whose father owns the car, Sidney Leyburne, Walter Twigg, and Border Copperthwaite all of Campbellford, jumped out to view the fire. Wondering what young boys could be doing on the highway at an early hour in the morning the Traffic Officer searched the car and interrogated the passengers and found that the driver had no operator's permit and in the immediate future, Stevens may appear to answer a charge under the Traffic Act.

Masons' Fraternal Visit at Newburgh

Officers and members of Moira Lodge A. F. and A. M., No. 11, to the number of thirty motored to Newburgh last night to pay a fraternal visit. The visitors were greeted by Wor. Bro. Walker, worshipful master of Newburgh Lodge, after which Wor. Bro. John W. Cook, master of Moira Lodge and his efficient officers exemplified one of the degrees of the order in an excellent manner. After the business of the lodge had been, concluded all repaired to the banquet room where the wants of the inner man were more than supplied. An orchestra from Newburgh gave a number of selections while the banquet was in progress, presided over by the master of the lodge. Bro. Dr. Haffner and Bro. Eddie George of Moira Lodge gave a number of solos to the delight of those present and Bro. Grey of Trenton, a number of readings in his usual brilliant style. The visit was an entire success and will be returned in the near future.

GOVERNOR COOPER'S MESSAGE

"To the 1,300,000 School Children and their Parents of the State of Ohio:

"Since man first developed the faculty of appreciating that subtle quality named beauty, the eye has received its share of praise. And justly, for more than any iiber feature, the eye seems the embodiment of life. Mobile and beautiful, richly set, it stirs the mysterious forces of the individual life.

"But, in praising the eye, we must not stop with appreciation of its beauty. We must remember that the eye is due in very large measure the credit for the tremendous advances which have finally resulted in the civilization of which we are so proud today.

"Man depends upon his five senses for his knowledge of the world around him. And by far the most important of these senses is sight. For most of us the adage, 'seeing is believing,' holds true We trust our sight before we trust our other senses. Our eyes are the windows of our souls, and we must protect them. We must never abuse them.

Over Station WLW the foregoing message directed on March inst. by Meyers Y. Cooper, Governor of the State of Ohio, to the 34,000,000 U. S. school children returning to their studies, should not only emphasize the value of vision, but the importance of selecting a thoroughly experienced Optometrist as the examiner.

LOUISVILLE WINS FROM ROCHESTER

Fourth Inning Attack Enables K. A. Champions to Beat Wings 7-3

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 25 —One big inning, in which they scored six times was sufficient to give the Louisville Colonels, American Association flag winners, a 7 to 3 victory over the Rochester Red Wings, International League champions, here yesterday in the final game of the 1930 "little world" series. The inning was the fourth. Through this wide breeches in the home club's defence the Kentuckians poured four hits and two walks for their winning margin.

Rochester's vaunted attack netted them 11 clean hits, two more than Louisville, but were able to amass but three runs unable to connect with the offerings of Phil Weinert, rugged Louisville lefthander, in the pinches. Weinert pitched a cool, heady game. He was aided immeasurably by the baffling defensive work of Pinkie Simmons, first baseman for Louisville. Simons ranged from deep right centre to left centre, making seven catches, three of which were spectacular.

Marcum was the visitors' hitting star, driving in three runs with a single and double. Joe Brown, Red Wing third baker, led his team at bat with six safeties, triple and two walks.

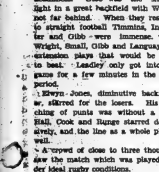
George Anderson, Rochester shortstop, hurt his ankle at second base in the fourth inning and may be out of the remainder of the series. Overseas Nine kept the attendance to 6,000.

Tiger's Steam Roller Still Functioning

EDMONTON, Sept. 25 — Presenting a line that functioned like a high-powered steam roller and a backfield behind it that knew how to make the most of almost every opportunity presented, Hamilton's famous Tigers, holders of the Canadian rugby championship, swept through to the third straight win of their Western tour here yesterday afternoon by defeating Coach Deacon White's Edmonton aggregation by a score of 32 to 1.

While the winning margin was a convincing one, the Edmontonians at least have the satisfaction of having made the best showing of any Western aggregation to date, as the Tigers chalked their way to victories at Winnipeg and Saskatoon by scores of 36 to 2 and 30 to 0.

Early in the first quarter Allan Hall, snapback for Edmonton, heaved the ball far over the intended receiver's head when on his own two yard line and Glen Small fell on it for a touch that Wright converted. It was a break that did not help the team's morale.



Tigers in Fine Display

The Tigers gave a finished display Timmins was a star among a starry cast of line plungers, while their ends, Wear and Gibb, tackled with unfailing deadliness. Gibb was the shining light in a great backfield with Wright and Small. When they joined the ranks of straight football Timmins, Inkster and Gibb were immense, while Wright, Small, Gibb and Langrow ran extension plays that would be hard to beat. Leadley only got into the game for a few minutes in the final period.

Erwyn Jones, diminutive backfielder, starred for the losers. His catching of kicks was without a flaw. Hall, Cook and Bunge starred defensively, and the line as a whole played well.

A crowd of close to three thousand saw the match which was played under ideal rugby conditions.

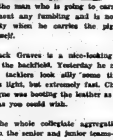
QUICK & ROBERTSON
CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

It's B. C. I. Year



Coach Shiels had his men out for a stiff work-out yesterday afternoon, and they were looked over. Mr. Shiels has some fake plays working nicely and a beautiful forward passbeautiful if it works as well in the game as it did in practice.

Right here Mr. Shiels has stated that he would appreciate it if any noble-minded citizens who wanted to see a good game on Saturday would drive their cars and some of the team to Napanee.

Surely some of the high school lads aren't afraid to ask their parents for the loan of the family chariot on Saturday. What the collegians have always lacked is school spirit. The'r year is going to be the exception, the students claim.

Cyril Mott is going to hold down the quarter's position. He surely had his men and his signals working quite nicely. It looks as though the collegiate is going to have a pretty nice quarterback. Mott "calls it up" all the time; he has that happy faculty of shaving the ball into the innards of the man who is going to carry it without any fumbling and is not as dumsy when he carries the pigskin himself.

Jack Graves is a nice-looking bet for the backfield. Yesterday he made the tacklers look silly some times. He's light, but extremely fast. Champaigne was beating the leather as nicely as you could wish.

The whole collegiate aggregation—both the senior and junior teams—are working hard, it looks like a banner year for the collegiate. They haven't had such a good team since Galloway, Redfern, "Nig" Ross, "Yapper" Colling and other stalwarts used to clean up the local group.

Albert College held its first strenuous practice of the rugby season on Monday afternoon. About twenty boys were in uniform, and from the looks of things "Cie" Mungovan is going to have no tough time licking them into shape.

There is a totally new backfield this year, with the exception of M i Thompson, the college's star punter. "Red" Jackson was not out in uniform and has hasn't reported back to school yet so it is not known whether he will be playing or not. If he does—that will make things different.

The probable team that will start this year Trenton Collegiate on Saturday includes backfield, Mel Thompson, Sid Smith and Ed. Higgins; quarter, Ted Carr; snap, J. Martin; halves, Fenley and R. Martin; middles, Jackson and Ed. Hall; outsides, G. Martin and J. Leek, flying wing, Edwards.

Of those named but few of them played last year. Sid Smith in this year's backfield was in the line last season and he has been moved back. Fenrier, who is a husky lad, will help to bolster up the line; G. Martin and Mel Thompson are the other two with experience.

How the rest will turn out is a matter for conjecture. If anybody can mould a team it will be Mungovan. He won't stand for any loafing and he works the boys hard. Ted Carr, the quarter, is a well known athlete from the Central "Y" in Toronto. Yesterday he worked well and didn't forget his signals.

From the way Mungovan was work ing the boys it does not appear as though Albert is going to use the pass at all. There was not one lateral pass play displayed. The boys showed some nice tricky backfield fakes, though.

Fenrier is about the heaviest man on the line, and he is no slouch. The Albert line will not average nearly as heavy as B.C.I's. The college backfield too, is light, although the collegiate is none too heavy in that department either.

AMATEUR TOURNEY HAS MANY UPSETS

Bobby Jones Last of Survivors of "Seeded" Players by the Committee

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 25 — The shades of night again were falling rapidly over the bunkered battle-ground last evening when George Von Elm of Los Angeles, last survivor of the entire set of "seeded" favorites, save only Bobby Jones, lost to Maurice V. McCarthy, Jr., of New York, in a spectacular battle that went exactly ten extra holes to the 36th, and shattered all endurance records for the United States amateur golf championship. Tied after the first nine holes of the second round match, all square again at the 18th, Von Elm and McCarthy, weary, but still game, went to the tenth extra hole still deadlocked.

It was the 46th hole of the day for the bronzed, sticky McCarthy, who had been forced to play one extra playoff hole yesterday morning to qualify, then had gone to the 19th in the first round to eliminate Watts Gunn, of Pittsburg. Von Elm had swept through the first round easily, whipping Chuck Hunter by 6 and 5 and stood out as one of the few remaining favorites until he cdagin the Texan who fought him to a standstill and finally to defeat.

This was to be Von Elm's last amateur tournament and he was fighting in grim determination to avoid the jinx that has beset him in the opening day's "sudden death" matches ever since he whipped Bobby Jones in the finals four years ago.

Jones Topples Leading Canuck

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 24 — Shooting sensational golf Bobby Jones began match play, the battle for the national amateur golf championship today by mashing Ross Somerville, of London, Canadian title holder 5 to 4 in the first round.

F. G. Mosher, Toronto, the sole remaining Canadian, turned up as the second round opponent for Jones. The stocky Dominion star beat Ellis Knowles, New York three and one to go in the second.

Mile in 2.00 Flat For Widow Grattan

Lexington, Sept. 25.—A new world's record of 2.01 for four-year-old trotters participating in a race and o third best record for horses of any age were scored by Hoi. James S. Parker's Guy Fletcher in winning the Calumet Stakes here today. His regular trainer, Lyman Brusie, was up behind him.

In winning the Phoenix for 2.06 per cent Kinney Direct lowered the record for the stake to 1.59 which was the season's record and the fastest time scored for ten years, in a race in the Grand Circuit.

The Great Guy, in the field in the fastest betting way, won the 2 12 class after the favorite, Darkey Oraitan, had won the opening here. A $2 mutuel on him paid $71 in winning the second heat. The fourth race, a three-year-old trot, was unfinished at the close of the day's racing. Rosa Guy, Helen Hanover, and Betty Axe will race it out to-morrow.

Mrs. Charles F. Adams' Widow Grattan proed to a time record of 2.00, and the latter Hollyrood Dick, driven by his owner, Allen J. Wilson, of Boston, trotted in 2.00 1-4. Racing conditions were ideal.

Bolt Hits School Children Unhurt

Port William, Sept. 25—Thirty-four children with their teacher, Miss Jessie McKenzie, had a miraculous escape from injury at 2.50 Wednesday afternoon when lightning struck the roof of the Swedish Lutheran Zion Church, at the corner of Welsh and South Marks Streets, Port William, tearing the tower off the building and shattering the windows.

The children, aged seven to ten years, pupils in the senior first and junior second grades of the Port William Public School, were holding their classes in the basement of the building when the lightning struck.

Windows in houses within a half-block radius of the building were broken by the shock, all line windows in the home of Mrs. James Perry, across Walsh street from the church, being blown out.

Two men, who were working on the roof of the church suffered shock, but were not taken to hospital.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

POET READS FROM OWN DRAMATIC EPIC OF SEA

Pulses stirred and imaginations kindled as that great epic of the sea, the rescue of "The Antinoe" by "The Roosevelt," was recalled to mind in the vivid word picture of Dr. E. J. Pratt's dramatic poem, "The Roosevelt and The Antinoe," as passages of this work were read by the poet to members of the Women's Canadian Club at the opening meeting of the season last evening. No more fitting tribute to this great example of seamanship and the words which immortalize it, could be found than the breathless hush that settled over the audience as scene after scene of the rescue were pictured in the vigorous phrases and powerful lines of the poem.

Dr. Pratt, who is a Newfoundlander by birth and whose poems reflect the ever-lasting environment where he has passed his youth, spent much time with the crew of "The Roosevelt" on board of the ship upon its return to New York, gathering information for his poem. The very music of the various movements in the rescue are expressed in the rhythm of its lines.

As a prelude to the reading of his poem, Dr. Pratt gave a summary of the high moments in this thrilling event. In January, 1926, the British freighter, "The Antinoe" left last for a destination they had no parallel in the experience of mariners, whose duration was the longest in years and when the barometer readings were also the lowest on record. In giving its call for help "The Antinoe" didn't know its own position. It was somewhere in the worst part of the Atlantic, south of Cape Race.

The message was received by "The Acadian," "The Roosevelt" and it was decided that the latter was in a better position to go to the rescue. From dawn on Sunday morning until Thursday, when the last member of the crew of the disabled ship was removed, twenty minutes before the last most part of the vessel sank from view, twenty-five men, without food, without drink, without warmth in the January blizzard grimly held on to the upper rails of "The Antinoe" and were finally brought safely from the beacon of the storm to the Roosevelt's shelter.

The gallant captain of the rescuing ship, George Fried, has become a national and international figure for his dauntless courage. Everything seemed against him but he persisted. When the wireless communications, which through the radium compass was the only guide to the stranded freighter, failed and the snow continued, Captain Fried was pursued by the nightmare that in the blinding storm "The Roosevelt" might crash down on "The Antonie" and the latter vessel would be shattered, its crew wiped out and with it the three hundred passengers and two hundred crew of "The Roosevelt."

Under conditions that left fellow mariners breathless with respect, Captain Fried directed the rescue, one of the most noble deeds ever known on the Atlantic. Dr. Pratt spoke of the dramatic and moving experience on board "The Roosevelt," when the Catholic priest performed the last rites over the bodies of two seamen who died there while attempting rescue. He pointed out the strange coincidence in the fact that the captain of the Antinoe had himself, ten years previously, under the same conditions, rescued a Philadelphia barque, and dwelt on the almost weird conclusion of the whole mighty drama, the return to Plymouth, the port that had seen the triumphant home-comings of Raleigh and Drake.

The speaker was introduced to the audience by the president of the club, Mrs. W. J. Pearce, who expressed the appreciation of the members to Dr. Pratt.

25th Anniversary Was Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. George, Church street, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last Saturday evening with thirty-five members of their respective families attending the delightful event. Four brothers with their wives and children motored down from their homes in Toronto, to attend, Kenlick Walker, Tom and William, Mr. and Mrs. Kerby, Charles street were also among the guests. Many beautiful gifts were received by Mr. and Mrs. George and at midnight a most delicious lunch was served

Swollen and painful legs are reduced and inflammation and irritation become things of the past. Thousands can testify to the benefit they have received. Any sufferer should get a bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and start the treatment at once. All good druggists have it. Obtainable at Druggist and Doyle's Drug Store.

Clayton Tucker Moves Into City

Mr. Clayton Tucker of Stine has sold his property at that place to Charles Dracup and will give possession immediately. Mr. Tucker comes to Belleville to reside and has rented a property on Albert street.

Mr. Tucker has been a resident at Stine for four years. He has lived all his life in this part of the county. For four years he was president of the Stirling Fair and was active about the grounds yesterday on his duties as superintendent. He has served the board for many years and has started races at fall fairs.

Autumn Tints in Bazaar Decoration by Local Chapter

Bright with flowers and the glow of softly-shaded lights, the Y.M.C.A. was a popular resort on a dull day, when the members of Belleville Chapter No. 55, E.S., held their annual bazaar in the reception room of the Y. this afternoon from three o'clock until seven. The booths were tastefully decorated in the colors of the order which were repeated in candles on the small tables.

Tea was poured by Mrs. George Tice and Mrs. Chris. Lewis, and those who served were Mrs. Robert Craig, Miss Ethel Adams, Mrs. Everett Liddle, Mrs. M. Barlow, Mrs. R. Wensley and Mrs. Ackerman. The candy table was in charge of Mrs. W. D. Embury, convener, Mrs. R. Mills and Mrs. W. Oliphant. Mrs. A. Naylor was convener of the home-cooking, assisted by Mrs. M. Green, Mrs. P. Weseels and Miss H. Blair. Mrs. M. Dagnall and Mrs. Anstiellne looked after the handkerchief booth and Mrs. Hoyle and Mrs. McEwen the bean guessing table. Mrs. W. Clare and Mrs. Holst were in charge of the fortune telling booth and the convener of the fancy work was Mrs. Geo. Cornish, assisted by Mrs. F. Chesher, Mrs. F. Smith and Mrs. R. D. Adams.

MISSIONARY IS HIGHLY HONORED

Dr. Margaret McKellar, missionary to India, who will be the speaker at the Belleville sectional meeting of the W.M.S. at Tabernacle Church on Wednesday, has been honored with a notice from King George and one for distinguished service.

Personals

Mr. Robert Wiseman, M.A., of Montreal, has been spending a few days with Mr. Raymond Rose.

Master "Jimmie" Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Black, Alexander Street was rushed to the hospital yesterday afternoon and operated on for appendicitis. His condition is satisfactory today.

Mrs. T. H. Everson, Mrs. D. Tod, Mrs. Craig, Mrs. Hoag, Mrs. Bale of Oshawa, were visitors at 72 Geddes St. Wednesday afternoon.

Myl Armand Arbour, of Perce Cleape, Que., has arrived in the city to pursue a commercial course at Ontario Business College.

Misses Bernice Sherman and Violet Lewis entertained about twenty-five of their friends at a wiener and weiner roast at Jones' Creek last evening. A delightful time was enjoyed and the party came to a close shortly after eleven.

Mrs. Chas. Wilmot is entertaining at a bridge this afternoon in honour of Mrs. Eardley Wilmot.

Mrs. Ellsbeth Jackson, Ann street, has left for a visit with relatives in Oswego, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. LaPalm of Syracuse, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Ted La Palm of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs James McQuaninge of Yonkers, N.Y., visited their aunt, Mrs. Jos. LaPalm of this city enroute to Peterboro to attend the wedding of Dr. Leo LaPalm.

WEDDINGS

WILSON — GILLESPIE

Peterboro, Sept. 25—A quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, when Mary Alice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gillespie, Peterborough, was united in marriage to Carl D. Wilson, Phm. B., of Tweed, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Wilson, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wm. Allan. Attendants were Miss Frances Gillespie and Mr. Jack Wilson.

Mr. and, Mrs. Wilson left on a motor trip to Boston. On their return they will reside in Tweed.

STACEY—JONES

A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Chapel of St. George's Church, Trenton on Tuesday evening by Rev. Albert Green, when Mr. Albert Stacey, of England, and Miss Reta Phoebe Ann Jones entered into that binding contract "until death us do part". The witnesses were brother and sister of the groom.

TEA BISCUITS

Two teaspoons baking powder, sifted with 2 cups bread flour, 1 tablespoon shortening, 3-4 cup sour milk, 1-2 teaspoon soda dissolved in milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Roll out about one inch thick and bake in quick oven ten minutes. These are delicious warm with syrup. For variety add a couple of tablespoons raisins, and one tablespoon of sugar.

Cinnamon Rolls may be made the same only rolled half an inch thick and spread with a paste made of 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon. Warm a little and work into a paste. Spread roll and cut about one inch deep. Bake fifteen minutes.

(Recipes will appear under this heading each day. You are invited to contribute your favorites).

Persian Balm is the one true family aid for skin health and beauty. Aids the mother in additional loveliness. Protects the tender skin of the child. Delights the father as a hair fixative or cooling shaving lotion. No matter to what use it is put, it is always beneficial to the skin. Every woman should use it. Persian Balm cools and caresses the skin and creates complexions of surpassing loveliness.

Today's Verse

FIRE OPALS

The first thrill of autumn cools the air
And takes my thoughts so far away
That I forget the ugliness and noise
And dream I ride all leisurely through
Peking streets,
My rickshas goes in silence.
And blue sky and fleet white clouds are overhead.
Pink plaster walls and quiet people pass me
Till I stop before the Temple Court
To bargain at the Temple Fair until the sunset comes.
Then I ride home beside the moat
That closes tight about the Palace walls,
Old lotus leaves bend down protestingly
Above the still black waters that carry
Five opals on their breast,
The gifts of western skies.

DANGEROUS ACTS OF BOYS CLIMBING ARCHES

A serious accident will result if the young boys do not desist running up and down the arches of the new lower bridge. This particular amusement is strictly against the law and the police will sternly prosecute any children carrying out this prank. Today at noon a reporter of The Ontario Intelligencer witnessed five boys starting at the east end of the bridge walking to the top of the first arch and running down the other side and then proceeding to the other arch to go through the same routine.

Radio Fans Corner

Reception was off its channel again last night, what I mean is that it wasn't exactly on its best behaviour and we suffered for it. Very muddy reception last night I thought, blurry and indistinct & good part of the time. This was well on in the evening of course.

Attention, all you fight fans. The Sharkey-Campolo bout billed for tonight at the Yankee Stadium will come in on our sets over CKOW and we can tune in at 9 EST. Charlie will be hooked up with the NBC network and the fight is scheduled to go fifteen rounds. All right fans we'll stick right with it to the finish.

Must make it a point to listen in on the Jersey Milk Chocolate hour tonight because it is going to be good. Wishart Campbell is back and sleury with that rhythm of his. Orchestra it should be some combination. That tuneful operatta Rio Rita will be staged tonight and the symphony orchestra opens it with Mr. Campbell singing Rio Rita the hit song of the show. Then we'll hear the "Kinkajou" and "Following the Sun Around." Plenty of other numbers on the program too but space doesn't permit, listen in and hear for yourself. CFRB and CHNC at 9 EST.

At 7 EST from CFRB the well-known Welsh tenor, Maldwyn Brasell will be the guest artist of the Rogers Five who will present another one of their delightful programs. The Wrigley program will be back on the air this coming Monday it was announced. This is a well known and well liked presentation and heard over station CHNC. Rather a difficult station to bring in though.

Now to get down to tonight's headliners. Saturday night and naturally that brings us the Fleischmann hour and Rudy Vallee. The time is 7 EST and you WEAF. Uncle Abe and David from this station too at 10.15 EST. B. A. Rolfe and his boys from WJZ at 7 At 9 EST from WJZ Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta."

Individuality

much to Dr. Sine and the executive and all associated with the fair hope for his speedy recovery to health. Dr. Sine was on the grounds as usual so great is his devotion to the society.

Beer, Beer Everywhere

The program of the day went off without a hitch. There was much doing, scarcely an idle moment for those who wanted to see something. There was a good-sized midway and many concessions did good business. That was to be expected with from three to four thousand people on the grounds, perhaps the largest crowd on record. Baseball matches, contests for prizes among the schools of the district, a competition for teams of horses in hauling a stoneboat loaded with fireguards, were other features. There was a Highland piper on the grounds employed by the society for the enthusing of the crowds. This piper offered to pipe all day and he was employed on this generous promise and did faithful service with his instrument. He played for the school children and he played at different places on the grounds. Then there were horse races of a kind not often excelled. The starter Alderman George O. Tice of Belleville put through fourteen heats in the short space of two and a half hours and in that time a larger number of heating contests were also held on the track.

Exhibits Par Excellence

There were some of the attractions the crowd saw, but there were the exhibits, the backbone of the Stirling show. One hundred and thirty or more exhibitors, the greatest on record as to number, brought in over two thousand exhibits which put the class in Stirling fair. The cattle show was a good one with a fine showing of accredited herds in various breeds, there were in the cattle barns the other; cattle not accredited which numbered a great many of the finest animals to be seen this year at any showing. Then there was a fine showing in poultry. Those who like this class at a fair had delight in what they saw and heard. There were the geese and the duck families, all varieties of fowls, pigeons, turkeys, and settled away in a corner were six coons looking for a ten dollar prize. On the track were many fine horses of the light and heavy varieties. Fine specimens of teams were much admired by the visitors. Swine made a good show ing, and the sheep were not to be passed over for the competition was keen here.

Main Building

In the main building, order reigned in the presence of so many exhibits. Arrangements were ideal for the showing of the huge potatoes, the vegetables of the mangels, the corn, the baskets of onions, the pails and bags of grain the fine apples. There were such sights as these—the deserved first position, sweetest of all sights of the fair the prized vegetables, plates upon plates of eggs. There was the competition in cooking. Stirling Horticultural Society had a magnificent showing in flowers and plants worthy of attention. The Stirling Women's Institute had a nursery exhibit and a display of home furniture and furnishings. Thirty-six boxes of cheese mostly all white made for one of the most closely competed shows in the dairy history of the society. Women's work was not given a rear place but it occupied no small area. The work of the women of this fair seems to be endless in the making of those articles for which the farm housewife is noted. The modern radio had a meritorious exhibition and vied with the band on the grounds. Fine art, painted china, watercolor and oils offered no mean contribution to the entirety of the effect of the fair.

The entire impression of Stirling fair carried away by those who attended is of its solidarity in the vital interests and the importance as an expression of the district of which this is the centre.

Mr. Clement H. Ketcheson told The Ontario Intelligencer reporter that the vegetable exhibition this year was excellent in its numbers and the standard of quality. Judges of horses and cattle reiterated this same high opinion of the fair in the classes on which they passed judgment.

The interest in exhibits which has been marked everywhere at the fall exhibitions is a healthy sign for the farming interests and indirectly for the city interests.

There was a Highland piper on the grounds employed by the society for the enthusing of the crowds. This piper offered to pipe all day and he was employed on this generous promise and did faithful service with his instrument. Speeding Events

No fair is apparently complete without speeding events which naturally attract many interested spectators. Four such events were upon the score sheet and were classified as Class A, Class B, Class C and a running race. Those in the grand stand and on the outside of the track, which by the way is not in a condition to create fast time saw no less than fourteen heats, four in classes A and C, three in Class B and two in the running race. The final heat was completed just as rain commenced. Winners in the several classes were as follows:

Class A

Delli: Wilkes	3 1 1 1

TWO VIEWS

An expression of opinion which connects those who believe that if men receive higher wages they will spend more on the substantial products of industry is given in the Edinburgh Scotsman, which quotes Dr. A. Shadwell, a prominent sociologist, as saying that after a study of various aspects of national life, he inclines to the view that any extra money gained in wages would be spent on amusements." According to him a great change has come over the habits of the people in recent years and today the tendency is to spend on luxuries and conveniences every half-penny that can be spared from the bare necessities of life. Even men on the dole pinch themselves in other ways in order to have a coin for amusement or entertainment."

That is the one view. On the other is the contention that the secret of individual, national and world unrest lies in the condition which they say exists whereby the profits of labor are not properly proportioned among men, executives and labor. It may be true that labor has not had the experience in saving money and using money to best advantage as a power in the state and that with education along the lines of thrift there may be incuated a real spirit of economy.

These two views will battle all the way.

RUSSIAN GESTURE

Russia and her wheat have again started the world talking of the country which used to be called "the bear which walked like a man." China and the East have had their fill of Communistic propaganda and the Russian hand of destruction is seen over that land. Russia's relations with the rest of the world have not been what would compel respect from the rest of the world.

It is suggested that Russia has been short selling grain on the Chicago market and an investigation may lead to world action against the Soviet Republic. Whether this is the fine Red hand again at work striving to cause unrest by upsetting the markets remains to be proven.

Some appear to think that this may be a last gesture of a dying regime, and that Soviet control is going to burn itself up. That also remains to be seen.

There are no fanatics like the idealistic Russians who have been experimenting in governments and in economics and making a point at great cost to Russia or the rest of the world is nothing to the idealists.

WHY DO THEY REBEL ?

Recently several men were sent to penitentiary for an attempt at jail-breaking and for assault on officials of the prison. They had but a short time to serve before the expiry of their term in the jail and hazarded their freedom for a fond hope of liberty to be obtained at the cost of further flaunting of the law and the almost inevitable end of a much longer period of imprisonment. How can this attitude be explained—that would send men into further difficulty for the sake of a will-of-the-wisp notion of escape?

It was probably the sense of rebellion against their incarceration. It locks as if the imposition of a term in the jail had done them not good but made them seek further excitement, made further breaking of the law, necessary to them. A man in his ordinary senses would not risk so much of good to come in the way of liberty for the sake of an escape which is certain to result in recapture. But these men did the evidently senseless thing—rebel and commit assault.

The law has to be severe on men of this type. Breaking of prison is too common across the line and it would look almost as if there were an organization throughout the prisons all over the States to resist authority. Resistance which comes from the criminal-minded must be met by firm resistance of the law. So many attempts are made at escape that one might almost expect the spirit of revolution had got abroad. It must be met by the spirit of the law.

SIDELIGHTS

ASHES

I placed you on a pedestal;
Above the common clay I thought you were
I worshipped at your shrine; I longed
Myself to pattern after you, my sun.
I gloried in your loveliness;
Perfect in deed and thought to one unschooled
In life's entanglement, you seemed to me.
And then—one day my idol chipped;
A tiny blemish on a perfect soul appeared.
A hurt surprise—and pained bewilderment.
And soon the gloss had all chipped off;
An act you did despoiled my dream;
You tumbled from the pedestal I made for you,
And lay in crumpled ashes at my feet.
I gathered up those broken bits
And tried to re-create my finity;
Alas! It could not be—but I—
I love those ashes still, in spite of Pain—loss—bitterness—and yet
I cling to one small spark of hope.

TALKING ABOUT BRIDGES here's a contribution from one of the "Glad" Club on the subject: "We are told never to cross a bridge until we come to it, but this world is owned by men who have crossed bridges in their imagination far ahead of the crowd."

TRUTH IS AGAIN STRANGER THAN FICTION in an incident which recently occurred in Czechoslovakia wherein a dead man shot and mortally wounded an inspector of gendarmes. The dead man had committed suicide and still held the revolver in his hand. When the inspector sought to turn him over a muscular contraction due to the onset of rigor mortis caused the revolver to be fired and the inspector was hit and mortally wounded. Believe it or not, as Ripley says.

SELLING INSURANCE as a profession is one of the most highly paid callings—for those who study it intelligently and are qualified in mind and manner for the work. "Hi" Binder, one of the top-notchers of the insurance craft, made $27,000 in twenty minutes and has an income that would shine even on Wall St. He sells insurance. Hi walked into Louis G Carpenter's office in San Francisco and had that gentleman's name on the dotted line for $1,500,000 and medically examined inside of twenty minutes. Some fast worker is Hi and he had never seen his prospect before. Mr. Binder goes after the big fellows and has been selling insurance for sixteen years and a member of the Million Dollar Club for ten years. Qualification for that club is to sell over a million dollars worth of insurance a year. Last year he sold policies totalling nearly three million dollars and in sixteen years he has sold 1,500 policy holders nearly twenty million dollars insurance. Believing in his own product Hi Binder spends $1,000 a month in premiums on his own policies. His son, sixteen years old, is insured for $62,000 and by time the lad is 21 that total will have reached $100,000. All of this information came out at the International Convention of Life Insurance Underwriters in session at Toronto which is being attended by Mr. Binder.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—Is it proper to acknowledge a wedding gift with a printed card of thanks?

A.—No, it carries a note of discourtesy. A personal note to the donor is necessary.

Q.—How may one who lisps overcome the fault?

A.—Reading aloud and dramatic recitations, if persisted in, will usually overcome the fault.

Q.—At a formal tea where are the refreshments served?

A.—In the dining room.

COWBOY BANDIT GETS TEN YEARS

Westerner in Montreal Refused to Rob Victims of Less Than $5,000

Montreal, Sept. 24—A western cowpuncher who turned bandit but refused to take from his victims less than five dollars was sentenced to 12 years in the penitentiary by Chief Justice Perrault in the arraignment Court today. The prisoner gave his name as Jack Starr, 26, and said he hailed from Winnipeg, Mann.

Approaching William Adam, manager of a gasoline station on Mount Royal Avenue east, yesterday, Starr, pointing a 32-calibre revolver, ordered him to hand over his money. Adam took $2.40 from his pockets, all in change and promptly proceeded to hand it over to the bandit.

"Not enough, I never accept less than $5," stated the man with the gun in his hands. "I'm going now and if you ever say a word of this you'll hear from me," with that he grasped Adam's hand firmly and disappeared.

The clerk immediately informed the police and with a constable, combed the district in search of the fugitive, whom they arrested not far from the scene of the attempted hold-up.

Unusual Relishes Create Interest

By Hannah Wing

Have you ever grilled how an unusual relish "pepe up" a simple company meal? It may be the same kind of chicken or chops that the guests have at home but add to it a relish with an intriguing flavor that can't quite be guessed and you have made a conquest. A favorite of ours is grape catsup. A truly unusual and satisfying combination of spice and grape. We make it every year.

Grape Catsup

1 pound tart apples, 4 lbs. grapes, 3 pounds sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons allspice, 2 teaspoons clove, 1 1-2 cups vinegar.

Cook the apples until tender. Wash the grapes and remove the stems. Place grapes in a pan and without adding any water steam them until soft. Put the apples and grapes through a sieve into a preserving kettle, add the other ingredients and let them simmer for 20 minutes. Use whole spices and tie them in a cloth. Suspend them in the catsup during the cooking and remove them before the catsup is sealed. Seal in clean hot jars.

You will recall that either pickled watermelon rind and ginger pears can do this trick but this new combination of gingered watermelon rind keeps them guessing.

The flavour of SALADA is the most delightful of all

"SALADA" TEA

'Fresh from the gardens'

Gingered Watermelon Rind—
One pound melon rind, 2 cups sugar, 2 quarts water, 1-2 lemon, 2 tablespoons preserved ginger.

Use 1 pound melon rind weighed after paring. After discarding the green and pink part of the rind cut white in 1 inch squares. Cover with salt water allowing 1 tablespoon salt to every quart of water. Let stand overnight. The following morning drain, rinse the rind with cold water, cover with boiling water and cook rapidly for 15 minutes. Drain. Boil the sugar and water for 5 minutes. Add the rind, the lemon sliced thin and the preserved ginger sliced thin. Cook rapidly until the melon is transparent. Pack in clean hot jars and seal while hot.

And what good is.... ch hot rich brin a plum conserve. With it rich are eaten with a chameleon disregard for numbers.

Plum Conserve

Three pounds sliced Damson plums, 1 orange sliced thin slices in quarters, 1 lemon sliced thin, slices cut in quarters, 1 pound raisins, 1 1-2 pounds sugar, 1 cup chopped nuts.

Cook the plums, orange, lemon, raisins and sugar with a little water until thick and clear. Add the nuts, pour into hot sterilized JARS. Cover with melted paraffin.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Tobe Goes to Town

Charles S. Reid

Miranda Dutton stood in the yard, feeding the fowls. About her feet were chickens, geese, ducks, guineas and turkeys, all carrying on an animated contest, the grains which Miranda was scattering in little broadsides over the yard.

Presently the old woman seized a brush broom from the ground at her feet, and gave chase to a turkey cock that was making havoc among the younger chicks and turkeys.

"Git out'n here, you blunderin' old buzzard!" Miranda laid about her with the broom.

A short stout old man was making his way up the lane which led to the pasture lot. He was setting his long staff down in time with some unusually rapid strides he was making.

"Lord, I wonder what's a hurryin' Tobe Dutton now?" exclaimed Miranda, pausing in her work of scattering the feed.

Tobe was almost out of breath, when he reached the yard. He held a letter in his hand. "It's from Sue!" he exclaimed, thrusting the letter towards Miranda, the seam of which had been broken.

"For the land's sake, Tobe! Did yuh get some 'un to read it for yuh!"

"Yes, Bill Sykes; down at the store, read it."

"An' what did Susan say?"

"Lord, Maw, yuh can't guess—but yuh just can't!"

"An I ain't a goin to try, nuther."

"Well, then, I'll ha' to tell yuh. Susan's sent money in thar, an' she's a waiting us to come an' visit her in the city."

Miranda sat down in a heap to a sitting posture on the ground, among the ducks and chickens. "Lord help, Tobe, we can't—we just can't!"

"Why not, Maw? We ain't never been to the city in our born days; an' Susan's married rich—an' I reckon she wants us to have one good time afore we die."

Miranda was silent for some moments. "I reckon yuh're right, Paw," she agreed.

"We'll jest natcherly have to go, 'cause I know Susan's done set her heart on it."

"The gal's got it all laid out in the letter how we're to come. We're to go to Ellaville an' catch the train. Lord, I wonder how it'll be, ridin' on a train. We're to show the letter to Ash Render, the agent. He'll fix the tickets and git us all set on the train, when it stops for the mail."

"I reckon it's goin' to be a pesky lot o' trouble, Tobe, gettin' us off," Miranda sighed.

"An' Maw, Sue says if we like it in the city, she'll get an apartment for us; an' we can give up the farm, an' live all our lives in the city, an' have a good time."

"Lord, Tobe! I'd got to git busy time out here, wi' nothin' to do!"

"Now, Miranda, yuh know I made a promise once, an' last year, 'thout a bit o' her, 'case you had the rheumatiks."

"I reckon so, Tobe; but when air we to go?"

"Comin' Saturday, 'thout fail."

"Why, Tobe, that's only two days then. I reckon I can get Polly Dorsey to tend to the chickens an' things."

Ash Render read Sue's instructions carefully, and fixed the tickets. Then he held the train long enough to get Tobe and Miranda seated in the middle section of the day coach. The train started.

"Now, Maw, you hold tight!" admonished Miranda.

Tobe held tight; and Miranda never allowed her watchfulness to lapse for a moment. Susan met the train with a big car, with a chauffeur in livery.

"Is that some o' your husband's folks?" asked Tobe, getting Susan's ear, after the car had started.

"Yo, dad, that is the chauffeur, the man who drives the car."

Deposited before a pretentious apartments house in an exclusive district, Tobe and Miranda gazed about them and up and down the walls of the tall buildings.

"If ain't no fool brick maker that's makin' 'em around here some'rs, Susan!" Paw suggested. "But, Lord, where did they git enough cord wood to burn all them bricks?"

"Ah, hush, Paw!" commanded Miranda. "I don't reckon they had to burn 'em here. These folks are smart enough to make 'em 'thout it."

"Mebbe so."

Susan led the way; and soon the old couple was conducted to a suite of rooms whose windows overlooked a large area of the residential section. Susan opened the bath-room door, and was at great pains to explain the operation of the cocks and drains.

"Now," said Susan sweetly, "you old dears, I want you to make yourselves perfectly at home. After you have your baths, just lie down and get a good rest. I will come for you in plenty of time for dinner."

Sue floated out from the presence of the old folks, leaving them to their meditations. Tobe rose from a big, easy chair into which he had thrust him and closed the door which Susan had left jar. Then he went to a window and looked out.

"Jest look here, Maw?"

Miranda joined him at the window. The sun was sinking behind a distant sky line. "Lord, look there, Tobe," said she, "see that sun a settin'—an' Sue talked about dinner. I reckon hit's supper she's a meanin'?"

"Like as not. Did yuh ever see the like o' houses? If a fire was to git started some 'rs, Miranda, thar ain't nothin' short o' some kind of miracle could keep it from burnin' up a million folks—I'm tellin' you!"

"Lord, Paw, it makes me uneasy to think about it."

They made a second survey of the bath room, trying the cocks and drains.

When the dinner hour arrived, Susan's husband was introduced to the old folks. Henry Martin was a good fellow. As he served at table, there was a smile on his face that would not come off. Tobe liked that smile —Miranda was not so well pleased with it, and she kept looking down at her clothes to see if anything had gone wrong. The dinner was not much, according to Miranda's idea, but she thought it migh. do for city' folks who didn't have much to do.

"Well, folks," announced Henry Martin, pushing his chair back from the table; "the first thing on the program is a show. We're going to see a show tonight."

"Land sakes!" exclaimed Miranda, "is it a circus, I wonder?"

"No; a picture show—a movietone." Tobe and Miranda exchanged glances but made no comment.

It was growing late when the old folks closed themselves within their suite for the night. Tobe surveyed one of the twin beds with his gaze. "Thet's a dinged little bed for two people, Miranda," he suggested

"It surely be, Tobe; but I reckon we can manage it."

During the rest of the night Tobe and Miranda took it about rising and pacing the floor and gazing from the window, and sleep had come to their eyes for only brief intervals. At daylight both were dressed. Miranda folded carefully and packed away their night clothes in the large oil-cloth handbag which they had brought with them. They sat for two hours imprisoned in their rooms before Sue made her appearance.

"I do hope you slept well!" declared Sue.

"Yes, I reckon we did, Susan," said Miranda, "but somehow I kept hearin' them ducks and chickens and turkeys a callin' me all through the blessed night."

"Why, mother?"

"I shore did; an' I got to see about 'em."

"What time does the train leave this mornin', Sue?" asked Tobe, taking up his handbag which already was packed and closed.

"Surely you are not going right back home?" Sue was concerned.

"Yes, you know, we can't stay away from them critters. We shore have had a good time visitin' you an' Henry."

"Yes, Sue, honey," added Tobe, "you know, for us, we've stayed a dinged long time. We got to go now."

When Tobe and Miranda alighted from the train at Ellaville late in the afternoon, Ash Render greeted them, without surprise.

"Lord, Uncle Tobe," laughed Ash, "Sue wrote in that letter for me to fix them return tickets for thirty days—but knowin' how things was, I jest fixed 'em for four, an' bless my soul, you're back in two!"

"Yes, business at home, Ash, you know. But we shore did have 'a big time in the city!"

Food for Foxes Furnished by Sea

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., — Fox farmers of the Summerside and Borden districts have received an extremely useful visitation from the sea. On the afternoon of Friday, August 15, no less than seventy-two pilot whales, or blackfish, were stranded on the shoals between Miren Mile Bay and Carleton Head, near Borden.

News of the stranding spread throughout the district, and crowds hurried to the beach where the big mammals were caught by the ebb tide and unable to escape. The work of despatching began. Some of the carcasses were hauled on shore by horse and motor, while others were towed to Summerside by steamers requisitioned for the task.

All the following day fox men of Summerside and surrounding settlements were busy capturing the stranded whales and preparing them for cold storage. In Norway, whales of this time are used extensively for fox food. In at least one instance, the captors were treated to an unpleasant surprise by their haul, for an express wagon was completely demolished by a whale coming back to consciousness on the way to a ranch.

The weather was fine at the time the animals came in, and the consumption is they were following smaller fish. They have been seen around the Prince Edward Island shore on numerous occasions chasing fish, and indeed, a few years ago a number were stranded in much the same manner near Summerside, and at Pictou, Nova Scotia.

The pilot whale, or blackfish, range in size from eight to forty feet in length and weigh from 500 to 3500 pounds. They have a large square nose and very small eyes, and a mouth shaped like that of a shark with two rows of very sharp teeth.

YOUTH INJURED WHILE BATHING

Impure Water Found In Wells of Prince Edward County

Wellington, Sept. 25 (By Mail) — Wellington friends of Ray Palmer, 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Palmer, Belleville, were sorry to learn of his accident when he struck a spike and injured his leg when diving in the water. Dr. Stobbe was called and the boy was taken to the Belleville General Hospital.

George Ireland, 15 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ireland, who broke the leg is progressing favorably. The boy was riding a pony and racing with a dog when the pony slipped and fell breaking the boy's leg. He is under the care of Dr. Thompson, Wellington.

Mr. and Mrs. King Terry and daughters were at Picton hospital on Sunday where they visited Mrs. Gory McFaul and daughter and Mrs. Tookey and daughter.

Mr. Clarence Stevenson who is a fruit inspector was visited by Chief Inspector Robinson of Montreal last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Morden have returned from a trip to Toronto, New York and Philadelphia.

Dr. F. A. Scott has taken the water from about sixty well in the town and had it analyzed and finds that only five wells are safe to use. Many of the residents attribute the cause to the canning factories. One of the factory's chlorine was used in the waste waters to prevent the odor and this found its way to some of the wells.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hubbs accompanied Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Lewens to Picton on Monday where they visited Mrs. Percy Wilson at Picton hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnston were the four guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McQuinn Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sargent Mrs. T. Johnston, Miss Theresa J and Mr. Arnold Johnston were noon hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McKay on Sunday.

Mrs. W. A. Foster has returned home after spending a few days in Picton at the home of her daughter Mrs. Cory McFaul, while Mrs. McFaul was in Picton General Hospital with her little daughter who was born on Thursday, Sept. 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thomas left on Saturday for Toronto where they will visit their son, Mr. Oran Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph.

Mrs. Mervel Tompkins of Albany, N.Y., is visiting her sister Mrs. A. McDonald. She will return home about the first of October.

Miss Pearce has returned home after spending a few days in Belleville at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Fanning.

Miss Ella Terry is spending a few days in Belleville at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Palmer while Mrs. Palmer is at the hospital with her son Ray Palmer.

Mr. Sweetman and Miss Pearl Bowerman of Bellville were guests of Mr. Wm. Bowerman on Wednesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Platt, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Fanning, Mr. Drakesworth, were among those from Belleville who attended the Wellington Cemetery Company Decoration Day on Sunday, Sept. 21.

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A vermifuge that can be depended on is Mill, er's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that beset infants enfeebling them and endangering their lives.

School Parade

Twelve schools were represented in the parade held during the afternoon namely, Sidney S. S. No. 20, Hunting don S. S. Nos. 2 and 5, Huntingdon S. S. No. 4, Sidney S. S. No. 10, Sidney S. S. No. 13, Rawdon S. S. No. 14, Rawdon S. S. No 17, Rawdon S. S. No. 3, Thurlow S. S. No. 15, Deloro Public School, Madoc S. S. No. 7 and Huntingdon S. S. No. 10. The pupils from some of the schools were appropriately costumed for the occasion and their various exercises were witnessed by many interested spectators. The pupils of Sidney S. S. No. 10, teacher Miss I. Graham were awarded 1st prize for marching. Huntingdon S. S. No. 10. Miss Alice Heatman, teacher, 2nd prize; Thurlow S. S. No. 15, Miss L. Jones, teacher, 3rd prize; Sidney S. S. No. 13, Miss Irene Gr lis, teacher, 4th prize; Huntingdon S. S. Nos. 2 and 5, Mrs. Willis ms teacher, 5th prize and Rawdon S. S. No. 14, Clarence Bailey, teacher, 6th prize.

Strathcona Exercises

Pupils from the several schools were in competition and all showed careful training in physical exercises. Marmora Public School carried off 1st prize, Sidney S. S. No. 13, 2nd prize; Sidney S. S. No. 20, 3rd prize; Thurlow S. S. No. 14, 4th prize; Rawdon S. S. No. 14, 5th prize and Huntingdon, S. S. Nos. 2 and 5, 6th prize. First Aid Competition

In this event three girls or three boys from each school competing gave exhibition in first aid, consisting of a bandage for a scalp wound, artificial respiration and the placing of splints upon a broken arm. Pupils from Tweed Consolidated School carried off the first prize, Madoc S.S. No. 7 the second prize and Thurlow S. S. No. 16 the third prize.

Neatness and capability were taken into consideration by the judges. In many of the schools first aid kits are provided and in several instances have been found to be useful in treating minor injuries. It was certainly a revelation to many to witness the manner in which the bandages and splints were applied by the scholar used as a patient. The placing of the bandages etc., was explicitedly explained by another pupil.

HER PAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Miss M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 22 —(Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them, Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

Drug taking is very widespread in Egypt, where it is estimated that 500,000 out of a population of 14,000,000 are victims of the habit. Opiates are said to spend nearly $5 per head of the total population on drugs annually.

Mothers can easily know when their children are troubled with worms, and they lose no time in applying a reliable remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

TWO QUALITIES -- RED LABEL & ORANGE PEKOE

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

"There's no excitement in it unless you do care to a certain extent," put in Sonia, thinking of Bertie and how much she disliked to be with him.

"Oh, you can like them and all that, but this 'I-love-you-so-much-I-could_die_for-you' is the bunk.

"I think so too.",

"Take everything and give nothin' it all," advised Maxine. "Take it from one who knows kiddie. You're young yet and can't have had much experience, for all you look and talk so wise. When you see a man who makes your heart come up in your throat and cold chills go up and down your spine run like the devil."

Sonia, as conscious of Franklin Crane as if he had been beside her, said nothing.

"I have had more than one man crazy over me," confided Maxine. "And I've loved one or two of them But the minute I ve'ened the least bit their 'enthusiasm began to wane. I hate them all," she said vollently. "And oh, how I hate myself. Life simply isn't worth living."

Her blue eyes were swimming in tears.

To Sonia drawn by hundreds of different threads in life her words sounded impossible.

"She can't mean it," she thought. "Just because one man turned her down."

"Cheer up," she said to Maxine. "I can't Sonia, I know it's yellow of me and all that, but I'd like to walk back into the lake and never come back."

Sonia was sympathetic, but also a little embarrassed at such an intimate expose of another's feelings.

"If I ever felt like that I certainly would never tell any one," she told herself, "But then I'd never let myself feel like that."

She tried to talk of other things, but Maxine refused to answer. At last Sonia let herself drift mentally, off into the blue distance. A warm feeling of contentment came over her. She had not yet lost the consciousness of Franklin Crane's arms.

"I'll see you again, soon, Sonia," the waves boomed on the beach.

Perhaps he had called while they were out. Suddenly she wished to go back to the apartment.

"Come on, Maxine. It's time to go home."

"What's the use?"

"There's no use," said Sonia, truthfully, "making an ass of yourself about it."

Maxine rose then and sought their street car. Sonia was thinking how much happier she would have been alone.

"There you go," she smiled at her thoughts. "Snap out of it yourself."

Arrived at home, Maxine flung herself on the davenport, while Sonia wrote home. She explained to her mother that she was living in the apartment of Miss La Rue, who is 21 and head of our department."

At 4 o'clock the telephone rang. Both girls sprang to answer it, but it was Maxine who snatched the receiver from the hook.

"Hello. Yes.

Her lips twisted into a bitter smile as she turned to Sonia.

"It's for you——"

Then Sonia, color high in her cheeks, answered "Yes?" And Bertie's suave voice came to her for the second time: "Oh hello, Sonia. I just wondered what you were doing."

"I'll kill him if he ever rings up again," Sonia thought, furiously.

Her voice was like ice, but Bertie chose to be insistent.

"I'm coming right up. Be there in about twenty minutes. We'll go for a ride."

"Oh, I can't go." Sonia said, desperately. "I'm going to be busy."

"All right. I'll take Maxine then." She turned to Maxine with fire in her green eyes.

"That was the persistent Bertie. He's coming up and I can't stand to be with him."

Maxine laughed.

"Remember your good advice to me and take a little of it yourself," she admonished, pleasantly. "But for God's sake get him out of here."

So Sonia and Bertie went riding out to a roadhouse for sweet potatoes and baked ham. The dinner was delicious and had it been any one in the world but Bertie in the seat beside her Sonia would have enjoyed the ride.

"There is no earthly reason," she told herself, "for the intense dislike I have for him. As if he were walking on my grave. Ugh!"

She cringed when he laid his hand carelessly upon her knee.

They were on their way home a dot in the long procession of automobiles. But Bertie had no desire to go home.

He parked along the beach, ostensibly to look at the lake. But the sun was down and most of the cars had gone. Sonia feared he had stopped merely in order to have the use of both hands. She was right. His hand slid over to her.

"Don't!" she cried sharply.

"My God, don't tell the whole beach about it," he said incensed at her tone.

"Leave me alone, then," said Sonia, coldly. "If you touch me I'll get out and go home on the street car."

"Well you are the limit. Muncie must be a hell of a place to bring a girl up in. Are you really so innocent as all that, mamma's baby?"

"Never mind how innocent I am," she said. "I want you to keep your hands off me."

"Oh, you want me to?"

"That's what I said."

"I take it that does not apply to all our little boy friends."

"And that does not concern you, Bertie."

"Oh doesn't it. Listen here, young lady, who was it took you to your first dance in Chicago? Who were you with when you met Franklin Crane?"

By the time the doorbell rang she was ensconced in the bathtub. Maxine thought it better that Mac should not know of her presence yet. In spite of the cramped position and the low murmur in the other room Sonia drifted to sleep.

"Tomorrow" she smiled 'is another day. "I'm sure to see Franklin Crane."

Maxine was her radiant self at breakfast. Her blue eyes shone with happiness. Her skin was soft and clear.

"She's really pretty." thought Sonia

Mac was carefully unaffected from the conversation of both of them.

Sonia had a dim recollection of having been laughingly pulled from the tub some time near morning, then having dropped, achingly into the depths of dreamless slumber.

When they had finished their hasty breakfast and were seizing hats and pocket books Maxine said shyly: "Every thing's O.K. again, Sonia."

"I'm glad."

"I should think you would be. My dis position was simply fiendish, I know."

"I wonder," Sonia said as they hurried through the hall to the street. If you don't want me to find another room somewhere—since you wanted a roommate because you'd quarreled with Mac?"

Maxine ran her arm through Sonia's "I should say not. You stay right here. I told you I needed the money, and if you don't mind sleeping in the bathtub occasionally—I'll do the same for you. Besides, Mac has promised to take me out oftener."

It was a glorious sunlit world they faced that morning. For some reason Sonia thought of it for weeks after. How they had stood arm in arm, waiting for their car, full of life and the joy of living, serene, confident.

She hid not been at her desk long before she knew by the beating of her heart, that Crane was approaching. With an effort she continued jotting down figures, Her eyes when she hit ed them to his were clear green pools. unbonded.

"Good morning! Did you miss me yesterday? Always that absurd little phrase he insisted on dragging in. Before she could answer he had continued lightingly:

"And why should I?" Don't say it, Sonia, it sounds so heartless. And I know you did."

She leaned back in her chair.

"You are so conceited and impudent as a 6-year-old boy. But I did miss you."

"There you are! I thank you for admitting it. I knew you did because a corner of my heart was aching all day. I knew it must be Sonia missing me—"

"Yours of course," she scoffed. but with suddenly lowered lids.

"Look at me, Sonia. Do you know what I did?"

"You aren't accountable to me for your time, Mr. Crane."

"But I want you to know I spent the entire day with my mother. We drove up to Milwaukee and home by the lake. It's a wonderful ride. We'll take it together some day."

Sonia's heart suffocated her. Could he have the same feeling of intimacy of which she had been conscious once their first meeting? Even before they had danced together?

"I'd love to," she answered sprawling ridiculous mishapen figures over her blotter.

"I wish I could see you to-night," Crane continued softly, but there's a stupid banquet on "How about to-morrow?"

She realized that she should have pleaded an engagement herself. But not even to allure him could she delay seeing him until Wednesday. So she nodded, her telltale color creeping into her cheeks.

"Until tomorrow then," he whispered

INSTALLMENT VIII

Not until Franklin had descended from the balcony did Sonia's vision clear. She was annoyed with her utter lack of sophistication. That she who prided herself on her coldness should blush like a school girl. Even the memory of those so recent school days brought no smile to her lips. They seemed less behind her now, as if they belonged to another girl. Sonia's laugh ter roused her.

"I'll say he's some man!"

"Meaning what?" answered Sonia, busily jotting down figures again.

"Look at her, girls! Isnt she the poifect little bookkeeper? Not a flutter of air in her room."

Sonia shrugged.

"But when he stood beside her," Violet continued, stopping her addins machine. "Oh I'd love to, Lord Franklin."

Sonia could have boxed her ears. But she managed a bored smile to meet the smiles of the other girls in the department.

"Rave on, darling!" she said, indifferently. "I must be more careful, though,' she thought. "I don't want the girls to think there's anything between us, especially not on my part."

Which was typically Sonia!

It was with the intention to deceive the public, represented by the girls in her department, that she stopped her work for the second time to face Walter Henderson, in spite of his announced intention of looking her up she had to see him since Maxine's party weeks before.

"I wonder if you remember me?" he said now, speaking pleasantly to the other girls.

Sonia nodded.

"Of course, I do! Walter Henderson, resident of Evanston, investor in the Thomas Real Estate company."

"Good for you," he cried, while Violet and Jinny exchanged glances. "I've been on my vacation and I was afraid you'd have entirely forgotten me."

Sonia gave him a swift look.

"I couldn't forget you, when you offered so charmingly to relieve me of my loneliness."

He laughed.

"Don't rub it in. As I remember, you were quite vehement in your denial of any such thing."

"I know I was, very gracious that night."

"Absence seems to have made the little heart grow fonder. Yes——?"

Sonia's eyes were very kind. She let them rest in his like a subtle caress but without answering.

"Sonia," he leaned across her desk. "How about dinner and a dance tonight?"

FOUR MILLIONS AVAILABLE FOR RELIEF WORK

Terms Under Which Works May be Given Aid Under Act

REGULATIONS MADE

Money Available for Immediate Use in Certain Parts

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP) — Four million dollars for "direct relief" is set aside as the maximum for this purpose under regulations for unemployment relief officially announced today. It is understood all the money will be available immediately to meet conditions in certain localities especially.

This amount of two million dollars, it is stipulated, is to pay one-third of the expenditures of municipal items for district relief where suitable work cannot be provided for unemployment and on half of direct relief unorganized districts. The Minister of Labor is empowered to enter into agreements for payment by the provincial governments of such expenditures.

Provision is also made for the minister to enter into agreements with the provinces for a twenty-five per cent. Dominion contribution, with a five per cent. provincial contribution and fifty per cent. contribution from municipalities for construction of such public works and undertakings as may be necessary to provide suitable work in municipalities for unemployment. Where municipalities are unable to bear 50 per cent the burden agreement will be vested in women's organizing property and to be paid by both governments.

Payment of fair wages and provision for an eight hour day, stipulations that political affairs should not interfere with the giving of jobs and a clause for preference to residents in local cities are also contained in this. Regulations announced by Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor, were approved by a meeting of the cabinet.

WAR MEMORIAL PROJECT MOOTED

Mayor Reid Calls Public Meeting for Tonight for Discussion

Mayor Reid has called a meeting tonight at the city hall to consider the question of a war memorial, the Red Cross, Canadian Legion and other organization interested being invited and citizens generally.

This question has been to the fore during the past year and there are many who feel that a decision should be made, or at least a committee formed for the purpose of taking initial steps in connection with the rearing of the memorial to the Great War dead.

His Worship speaking to The Ontario Intelligencer said that he hoped and expected a large turnout of citizens would be present at the meeting this evening.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Feast of Martyrs is Held at St. Michaels Relics are Venerated

Monsignor Nicholson, Parish Priest Celebrates High Mass

SKETCH OF MARTYRS

13th Century Gregorian Mass of Blessed Virgin is Sung

Today is the Feast of the Eight Jesuit martyrs who lost their lives in an attempt to christianize the Huron Indian tribes in the middle of the 17th century. The principal scene of their martyrdom was at Midland, Ontario, not too far from this district. The Jesuit custodians of the Shrine, which is located near Midland, loaned the Stewards of St. Michael's church here for the Feast a reliquary containing relics of the Saints.

During the day, surrounded by lights and flowers, supplied through the generosity of the ladies of the Parish, this reliquary will be venerated by the faithful.

This morning at 8 a.m., Very Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, parish priest, was celebrant of a High Mass in honour of the martyrs. The choir rendered a beautiful 13th century Gregorian Mass of the Blessed Virgin, entitled "Cum Jubilo," which was often heard, no doubt, before these heroic priests left their homes in France to evangelize the savages of the Primeval forests of what was then New France.

This evening at 7.30 Monsignor Nicholson will deliver an illustrated sketch of the lives of these heroes of Christianity who have left Canada the precious heritage of faithfulness to Church and country.

Right to Deport Too One-Sided

LONDON, Sept. 26—"It is a one-sided arrangement under which the Dominions can deport Old Country men who commit crimes in their territories while we are not allowed to deport those from overseas who commit crimes here," said Sir Robert Wallace, K.C., chairman of the London County Sessions.

Sir Robert was dealing with the case of Alan Duncan Leslie, M.C., whom he sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment for burglary.

Leslie, a former army officer, with the Military Cross to his credit, was dismissed from the army by general court-martial for fraudulent conversion. After his dismissal he went to Canada. He was deported by the Dominion after his arrest for an offence there.

DYNAMITE USED TO KILL BEARS

Woodsmen Pay Fine for Illegally Killing Animals

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 26 — Wilfrid Tanguay and Maurice Giguere are woodsmen who live in the Laurentide National Park in a settlement known as a l'Ilnfer; and a touch of realism has been given to the settlement's picturesque name by the depredations of bears which have come around their cottages at night, raiding provisions, making sleep impossible and generally rendering life unbearable.

Tanguay and Giguere decided to do something about it. They set traps, cunningly contrived devices which consisted mainly of a battery fixed to touch off a fuse attached to a stick of dynamite, if a bear came near it. Two bears at least put their feet in it. There might have been more but it was difficult for the horrified game warden to tell just how many there had been originally.

Charged with killing bears illegally, Tanguay and Giguere pleaded guilty before Judge Portier in the Court of Sessions here and gave their reasons for the slaughter. Pointing out that if they wanted to get rid of the bears they would have adopted slightly less dramatic tactics, Judge Portier imposed a fine of $25 on each of the two men.

Delorme Sleuth Loses Appeal

MONTREAL, Sept. 26—The application of Farah Lajoie, for 21 years a detective on the Montreal police force for reinstatement in the organization has been refused by the aldermanic police committee. However, the committee went on record as favoring a pension for the former sleuth.

The opposition to Lajoie's reinstatement was led by Alderman Dubreuil. The latter said he had been approached by numerous clergymen who had objected to the book written by Lajoie on the case of Father Adelard Delorme, who was acquitted on a charge of murder arising out of the death of his brother. Raoul Delorme. Lajoie was one of the detectives assigned to the case at the time.

THREE SCORCHED AS FIRE BURNS BARN AT WOOLER

Engine Filling Silos is Believed to Have Become Overheated

MACHINERY LOST

Thoroughbred Bull Perishes and Crop is Destroyed

Three men were rather severely scorched, a barn belonging to Algin McMaster of Wooler, was burned to the ground and Mr. McMaster's entire season's crop was destroyed with a total loss, by fire that broke out on Wednesday.

The blaze is believed to have started from an overheated engine while the silo was being filled. Men who were working there escaped to the barn from the silo, but were scorched. Mr. McMaster himself had his hands badly burned and James Mitchell and Ab Sharp, two hired hands, were scorched about the face and hands.

A quantity of machinery that was stored in the barn was practically totally destroyed by the fire, although a little was saved. A thoroughbred bull perished in the flames.

The conflagration broke out about ten o'clock on Wednesday morning and despite efforts by hired hands and neighbors the flames could not be checked. It is believed that there was insurance placed on the barn, although the crop and machinery will be a total loss.

Napanee Man W. Cuthill Kidnapped Bound and Gagged

Police Find Cuthill in Montreal Where Kidnappers Left Him

CAR STORY SEQUEL

Pair Believed to be Mutt and Jeff Bandits Looked for

Wilfrid Cuthill resident four miles east of Napanee on the King's Highway will not forget his experience for some days through reports received from Chief Wasts of Napanee today by the Ontario Intelligencer. Mr. Cuthill was engaged to drive two men and a girl sixteen years of age from Napanee to Kingston presumably on account of a breakdown occurring to their car early Wednesday morning, and before reaching the destination it was bound an gagged and thrown into the back seat of the car and transported to Montreal he reports. Today word was received from that city that Cuthill has been located, but the circumstances under which he was found have not as yet been communicated to the police at Napanee. The car owned by Cuthill is now in the hands of the police at Hull, Quebec it being found in that city late Wednesday night, presumably through information received from the girl who it is said was abandoned at Montreal by the two men and who proceeded to her home in Hull to communicate with the police. The men are unknown to the police at present but are believed to be the men responsible for the depredations and thefts of cars that have taken place in the eastern part of Central Ontario during the past few weeks.

Chief Watts, speaking to The Ontario Intelligencer today stated, that the adventure of the three persons implicated started some time on Tuesday. It is alleged that the party hired a taxi at Hull, Que. to take them to Kingston. Before arriving at that point the driver was bound and gagged by the thugs and left hanging to a tree while the car was driven westward. Presumably the car ran out of gas or the mechanism refused to respond, this evening being found by Cuthill residence. The car is now at Napanee in police custody. Mr. Cuthill had retired and after loud knocking on his door was aroused an the mission explained. Seeking to act the good Samaritan he dressed and prepared for the journey only to be kidnapped before he reached Kingston. Apparently after the car arrived in Montreal, no further use could be made of the girl, and she was abandoned in that city only to find her way back to Hull Quebec, and inform the police. At present the girl is being held at police headquarters and most likely will be able to give such information, that will effect the capture of the two men, who were companions on the trip.

THROW STONES THRU CAR WINDSHIELD

It has been reported to the police on numerous occasions that little children gathering at favorite corners for play have amused themselves by throwing small stones and rocks at cars as they were passing. A few windshields have been broken that might have caused permanent injury to the occupants of the car through flying glass. Yesterday a small child threw a rock at a car owned and driven by Daniel Woodard, 82 McLean Avenue, of Toronto, while proceeding west on Highland Avenue and broke the windshield. Mr. Woodward reported the damage to the police and Constable Insarinight investigated. The parents promised to make restitution for the windshield.

BELLEVILLE WILL BE REPRESENTED AT GAS MEETING

Council Resumes Regular Business After "Holiday"

LOT IS SOLD

Bell Telephone Company's Bill is Ordered Paid

Deliberations of the City Council for the fall term were resumed last night, when that body met in committee in preparation for the regular council meeting on Monday night. The session was a lengthy one but took the form of discussion on some subjects, that will come before the council at a later date. The routine of the city business has been well in hand all summer for although the council had declared a holiday through the summer months, the construction of the new lower bridge and then the decision to build the new upper bridge have caused the council to hold special meetings at short intervals.

Arrangements were made last night to finance the construction of the new upper bridge, when the city treasurer and chairman of Executive, Ald. Wood ley were authorized to confer with the Bank of Montreal for the borrowing of $60,000.00 until such time as the work is completed and the debentures issued to pay for the said construction.

The council dealt with the bill rendered by the Bell Telephone Company with respect to the labor and material used in connection with the changing of their cables and pipes during the construction of the new lower bridge. The account of $1,078.87 was ordered paid and the matter will be charged against the new bridge account.

Recently the council said to T. J. Harris the contractor, a bill in the city for $5.00 providing that he would within one year erect a house valued at $3,000.00 on the lot. This agreement has been complied with and last night the council said to Mr. Harris the vacant lot adjoining the one sold with the same provisio and at the same figure.

A light was ordered placed at the east end of Wharman street on account of the dangerous and street and there being no protection. The recommendation was brought in by the chairman of the light committee.

Scalp Injury Sustained in Crash In Fog at Turn to Point Anne

George Ash, stock-keeper employed by Hepburn and Brown, local Ford distributors, is suffering from an injured scalp today as a result of a motor accident at the junction of the new Point Anne road and the King's Highway shortly after the midnight hour last night. A heavy fog made driving dangerous and the pilot of the car failed to notice the turn and plunged over a culvert on the north side of the highway. Ash, was a passenger in the front seat and he received a nasty scalp wound which was treated by Dr. J. J. Robertson. He was able to be at work today. The driver of the car was unhurt. Some of the glass was shattered and the fenders damaged but the car was brought to the city under its own power.

A number of members of the County Council in company with Austen Fellows, District Engineer, were on a tour of inspection yesterday of the road leading from Belleville to Bancroft. Twice yearly in Spring and Autumn the road is inspected by the Council and the engineer in order to determine repairs, etc., contemplated. There is movement on foot to widen the road and while nothing definite has been done to date, it is expected that something definite may be planned before next Spring.

FRACTURED HER ARM

The six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey O. Anderson, 4 Dufferin, Trenton, fractured her right arm while playing in an apple tree at her home late yesterday afternoon. The fracture was reduced by Drs. Farnsworth and Robertson who reduced the fracture and she was resting much easier today.

FINALS UMPIRES

Messrs. Ken Colling and Walter Gerow, Belleville baseball boys, appointed by F. A. Elliott, President of the Ontario Baseball Association to umpire the final games in the intermediate championship of the Province between Ingersoll and Peterboro Canadian General Electrics, conquerors of Canada Cement team. The first game will be played in the Liftlock city on Saturday afternoon of this week. Both teams have no peers in this district so far as umpiring is concerned and their selection to handle these important fixtures is a tribute to their efficiency.

WHEEL DROPS OFF

On Wednesday evening when returning from Belleville with a truck load of empty cream cans, Mr. C. J. Carleton met with an accident which might have been more serious. When about five miles from Tweed, a front wheel of the truck dropped off, the truck going into the ditch. Mr. Carleton was not seriously injured, sustaining a few cuts from broken glass. Damage to the truck was slight.

MRS. BLAKELY HONORED

Mrs. A. F. Blakely who has long been identified with the Women's Association of Bridge Street Church, both as an officer and as earnest worker and who leaves shortly for Montreal, where she will reside, was honored on Tuesday evening with a presentation by fellow-workers. About forty ladies of the church gathered at the home of Mrs. R. H. Bell, the occasion on Tuesday evening and after a musical programme, Mrs. Blakely was presented with a dinner wagon and end chair by Mrs. May and Mrs. Stonehewy. The president of the Association, Mrs. J. E. Shortt, read an address in honour of Mrs. Blakely, who made a very gracious reply saying how much she would miss the work and friendships.

After the presentation, refreshments were served. Tea was poured by Mrs. Ackerman and Mrs. Morgan, and members of the association assisted in the serving. The musical part of the evening was in charge of Mrs. Houston and Mrs. McKinnon who gave delightful solos accompanied by Miss Lazelle Brown.

CAR LOST TWO WHEELS

Driving to school about eight-forty-five this morning, a car with three school-girls in it skidded on the Kingston Rd, crashed into side of road, losing both back wheels. Miss Marion MacDonald, Kingston road, who was driving, fortunately was not injured. Her sister, Miss Mabel MacDonald, suffered a severe cut on her hand. Miss Gwenn Drew sprained her wrist and Miss Gladys Hilton suffered a like injury. All four live on the Kingston road and attend Belleville Collegiate Institute. The girls did not attend school today but expect to report for classes on Monday.

EIGHTY DEGREES

Just like summer! The mercury climbed to eighty degrees above at noon today. Here are the temperatures for yesterday and today—yesterday, 71; 85; today 80; 61.

KINGSTON RD CHURCH W.A.

A most successful and happy event was given by the Junior "B" branch of the W.A. circle of the Kingston Road Anglican church last night. The meeting was opened in the usual way, with Miss B. Fones welcoming the members back after the summer vacation. She stated that she was pleased to see so many mothers in the audience. Miss Jones introduced Mrs. John Lyons the speaker of the evening. In her introduction, she stated that the girls had nineteen hundred fellow workers. Mrs. Lyons gave a most interesting talk on the work in Canada and foreign fields of the organization. A splendid programme of music, readings and songs was followed by refreshments, supplied by the girls. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Lyons.

OBITUARY

HENRY SMITH

Henry Smith, aged 72 years an inmate of the Hastings County Home for several years suddenly passed away today. He was about the Home in the early part of the day doing his daily work when he was stricken with heart apoplexy and expired quickly. The deceased was a resident of Stirling for many years and was well known in that locality. Mr. Sanderson, superintendent of the Home, stated today that the deceased was a credit to the home for his, religious character and the valuable service that he rendered about the Home and his assistance to other inmates. His passing has thrown a pall of gloom over the Home and the superintendent, matron and staff regret his sudden passing as he was held in high esteem by all. The funeral will be held tomorrow from Campbell and Browne Undertaking Parlors, interment being made in Belleville Cemetery.

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, September 25—Reports were received that one white man and seven or eight natives were entombed in a deep mine by an explosion due to a gas pressure. Thirty-two natives were injured. Rescue parties were endeavoring to reach the imprisoned men.

POURING BEGINS AT BRIDGE PIER

Very Rapid Progress Made Upon Replacement of Bridge

Preliminary work on the new upper bridge is progressing rapidly and with continued good weather such as has been experienced since the job was started a record may be made. At the present time there are more employed than on the one lower bridge in its initial stage and the superintendent informed the press today there would be no laying off of men nor any slackening in the rate the work was travelling. A portion of the old bridge, sold by the Holcomb Construction Company to A. Safe, junk dealer, has been removed at the northern end of the bridge and the forms for the new pier are nearly completed. The pouring of this pier with cement will be started tomorrow if nothing unforeseen happens. The digging and cleaning of the coffer dam in the centre is well on the way and should be ready for pouring when the north end pier is completed.

RAILWAYMAN KILLED

Port Arthur, Sept. 26.—A. Cyril Roberts, aged 28, a Canadian National Railways coal chute cleaner, was killed almost instantly when caught between two passenger cars as they closed under the power of a moving crane, in the railway yards here tonight. He is survived by his mother.

SONIA

by Vida Hurst

Sonia hesitated.

"There's a stupid banquet on," Franklin Crane had said. Why not save her pride by accepting the invitation of the rather interesting man?

"Oh, I'd love to," she repeated for the second time that day. A smart from Violet, Sonia's face was serene and composed. "It's awfully nice of you," she added sweetly. "You know I'm living with Maxine?"

She eyes widened at her informant. "You are? Since when? Oh, but I thought—"

"It was at the Y.W."

"Yes, I don't mean that—" He's ays intent to Maxine's well-developed figure and knot of blond hair.

"Maxine told me you were just up from Muncie."

"And what has that to do with it?" She laughed, amused at her direct obliteries.

"A great deal, little Sonia. If you had known it, Maxine is too old for you."

Sonia was annoyed. "It isn't often I'm accused of being too young," she answered. "It's usually the other way around."

"This is no place to discuss it, at any rate," he said, rather brusquely "and I'll call for you at a quarter to 7 to-night."

Viewing his well-tailored shoulders as he turned away, Sonia was pleased with herself. She lifted her eyes to Violet. This rather effectively dispelled any suspicions concerning her with Franklin Crane. Besides, she would be glad to be busy that evening. The thought of an evening alone with Max ine or sleeping in the bathtub again seemed impossible with the vision of tomorrow dancing in her brain.

Toward noon Maxine drifted over to her.

"Walter Henderson make a date?" she whispered, under pretense of examining Sonia's books.

"For to-night," Sonia answered.

"You know it is not until youth goes that we begin to appreciate it; but it's the gift of the gods, Sonia, and when you're run contrary to a few conventions and you bumped you will long for the inexperience again."

Later when they had danced many times, he said to her, "Sonia, don't think me a disgusting old crab, but I don't like to see you live with a girl like Maxine."

"What's wrong with Maxine?" snapped Sonia.

"Don't be offended and don't think I'm criticising her in any sense of the word. It's just that she isn't good for you that's all."

"Too indefinite," shrugged Sonia.

Color was high on his cheeks now, making him strangely more human and less imposing. Their relationship while dancing lost its distinctiveness. Subtly transformed by the alchemy of Sonia's nearness he had become to her just another man. Unconsciously her voice had assumed its old arrogance. Insolence to the advancing male!

"Sonia," he answered, "I can't say any more. I haven't anything against Maxine but can't you understand?"

"Understand what? Maxine has been wonderful to me. She is head of my department, and ten years older than I am. I see no reason why that should prohibit my living with her, particularly when the advantages are all on my side."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

In the last 16 years Norway's national wealth has increased 80 per cent.

Maxine seemed excited about it.

"Asia girl! If you can hook Walter D. Henderson you're going some—he wallows in money of his very own," she emphasized.

"Sonia, dancing in a silver gown with emeralds on her white hand——" Like a flash she remembered her dreams before coming to Chicago. Strange how cold they left her now. How useless they seemed in comparison with dining to-morrow night with Franklin Crane!

Maxine assisted at Sonia's toilette with expert hands.

"Wear the pink," she ordered. "Your line with Walter Henderson is the big-eyed unsophisticated."

Sonia laughed.

"That's never my line, Maxine. I couldn't look unsophisticated if I wanted to and anyway I don't want to. He can take me or leave me just as I am."

Nevertheless she wore the pink chiffon, but reluctantly. It had seemed so entirely Franklin Crane's gown.

"I have known Walter Henderson since I was 19," Maxine continued, cautiously. "And I know he likes 'em young and inexperienced."

Sonia powdered her thin shoulders with a huge puff. In the mirror she saw her reflection —sleek hair, narrow eyes, scarlet mouth, arm with the puff behind her head, a living model from the fashion magazines. She smiled, well pleased.

"I shall be just as I am," she decided.

She thought Walter Henderson's greeting of Maxine a little formal for one who has known her since she was 19. But he was all attention to Sonia. His smooth, well modulated voice carried force with it.

The most desirable table in the room the most attentive waiter the choicest food were obtained with the least possible effort. A lift of the eyebrow a shade of displeasure in his pleasant voice wrought miracles. Sonia liked that. She liked the extra air of deference the waiter wore when serving them. It was pleasure to appear with a man so sure of himself and of the world.

Lights and music reflected the gayety of her mood.

"You seem like a different girl to-night," her host commented. "Much more gracious and amiable."

"Was I so very rude that night of Maxine's party?"

"Not rude. But rather haughty and unattainable. You interested me with your intensely grown-up airs, but I like this Sonia better."

She smiled back. "I am more at home now. At first I was so blatantly independent. I suppose I was sorry for my one to see how lonely I really was."

"You admit that you were lonely then?"

"Oh, terribly; not for Muncie," she insisted, seeing him smile, "nor for any one in it, but because I hadn't quite adjusted myself to Chicago."

"And what's wrong with your home town?"

"Don't think I'm knocking it," she said quickly. "There was nothing wrong with the town. It was just me. I've never seemed to belong, somehow. My father and mother were poor, but that wasn't the reason. I always seemed different from the rest. Their ideas and convictions left me unmoved. I have my own ideas of conduct," she said honestly, "and I believe they are different from the average nice girls."

"You aren't trying to imply that you're not a nice girl, Sonia?"

"I'm not sure whether I am or not," she answered frankly. "Everyone in Muncie thought I was bad. Even the girls who liked me were shocked at me. And their mothers had a way of looking at me—ugh!"

His keen intelligent face lighted with interest.

"Tell me about it, Sonia. What are those ideals of conduct you spoke of last night?"

"I don't think I could put them into words. It's more an indefinite feeling about things. That one should be a good sport and play the game, taking his losses," she smiled, "like a gentleman."

"Well, certainly there's nothing so wrong about that. That's the code of any sportsman."

"I know. But I also feel that every girl must live her own life, in her own way, following the lines that seem indicated in her particular case. And I neither understand nor care for all the 'blah 'that is shouted about conventions and virtue."

"But my dear," he reproved gently, "you feel that way because you are so —will you pardon my using your own word—blatantly young!"

Sonia's eyebrows lifted in disapproval.

Radio Fans Corner

Reception last night wasn't bad at all and of course the fight had to be postponed, just when weather conditions were fine to bring it in and now we have to wait until October 3rd. Oh well such is life.

Rather thought that heavy blanket of fog would spoil things on the air last night but it didn't and we had all the programs that were marked on our list. To-night we'll hope for just as good luck for we're starting off an another Friday night's entertainment.

The Canadian pacific Railway sponsors an hour of choral singing to-night during their hour of broadcast 9 EST and over the Canadian hook-up CKGW included. The Choir is the Canadian Choir of Brantford and is leaving shortly to compete in the great Festival of choirs at Blackpool England. They open their presentation to-night with Sir Hubert Barry's "Descend Ye Nine" and ten other numbers will follow and Rex Battle's Royal York Hotel Concert orchestra adds two numbers.

Eddie Cantor, star of "Whoopee" will be the guest artist on the Radio Follies program over CFRB and the Columbia system at 9 EST to-night. Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will be another feature of the program. Eddie sings two new songs on this program to listen in.

From WHAP the Cities Service Concert orchestra to-night at 7 EST and at 8 EST the Chiquot Club Rhythm bringing us a wealth of sparkling music and a sleigh load of fun. At 8.30 EST a new program rises up and hits us right in the eye as a mighty good program. It is listed as Del Lampe's Rhythm Symphony orchestra and those three words about town Tom Dick, and Harry are to be featured on the presentation.

RKO next at 9.30 EST and WHAP and then Vincent Lopez and at 10.15 EST Uncle Abe and David, Billy Jones and Ernie Hare from WJZ at 8.30 EST, and to cap it all Duke Ellington's Cotton Club Band from WABC at 11 EST. It looks like a big night.

INCIDENTS OF EARLY DAYS AT MASSASSAGA

Massassaga, Sept. 26—Misses Mary and Bell Northcott of Belleville, Rev. N. S. and Mrs. Hawley, of Centreton, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Oster and son of Amber, N.Y., were the dinner guests of Miss Bessie Wallbridge and Mr. Jay Anderson, Bayside farm, Tuesday of this week.

As one lingers in the moonlight of the bright and witty happenings of their younger days and the clean, clear-cut competition of games without prizes in fishing, swimming, skating and sailing on the Bay of Quinte one wonders if we have not lost much from our lives as the motor car takes the road. Are not we really the losers?

Mr. Hawley, in his interesting way gave many vivid accounts of earlier days or homesteading at Massassaga. Miss Wallbridge drew a very humorous picture of the safe return from a party to Big Island of a party of young people, over the ice of Big Bay, and Muscote Bay later than mid night, only to get lost in a big fleet after the crossing of the last marsh. All cutter loads drew round and round this field till a gap in the stone wall could be found and as the last sleigh load came through the full moon in all its glory shone out and disclosed the mad search by the tell-tale tracks. In her humorous way, Miss Wallbridge described the finding of the little gap in the old fence, far more perplexing than miles of frozen bay and marshes.

Mr. Anderson added pleasure to the ideal day by motoring all to the same field and today that same fence stands in perfect condition, although built for well over one hundred and sixty years. It is to be seen through wild grape vines and elderberry bunches which we gathered keeping still a century of custom of hospitality of the old pioneer home.

As one sat in the spacious living room and listened to the recounting of experiences of other days one could almost see it filled with the bright faces of young folk near the crackling of wood on the hearth and just smell the apples in the big pan nearby and the popcorn jumping in the popper.

Miss Wallbridge's ancestors from England came to this country from Bimington, Vermont, she being the daughter of Asa Wallbridge. The old house has always been an outstanding one in courteous, genuine hospitality. It has stood for nine Christian centuries always and it now owned by Mr. Wallbridge's nephew, Mr. Jay Anderson.

The Hostess Suggests

Concordia Sandwich

1-2 lb. hamburg steak or
2 cups minced beef
4 cup tomato sauce or chili sauce
1 1-2 cup milk
2 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon pepper
12 slices bread.

Add chili sauce to meat and heat. Season if necessary. Spread liberally on bread. Beat eggs slightly add milk and seasonings. Dip sandwiches in egg mixture. Saute until a golden brown. Serve hot. Serve six.

Egg and Spinach En Casserole

1 1-2 cups cold chopped spinach
6 eggs
Salt and pepper
1 cup cheese sauce

Put four tablespoons spinach in bottom of ramekin. Drop raw egg on top, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with cheese sauce. Cook in moderate oven 350 degrees F. 15 to 20 minutes or until eggs are set. Serve six.

Oven "poaching" was the way to cook the' above dish. The casserole should be set in a pan of water in the oven.

(Recipes will appear under this heading each day. You are invited to contribute your favorites).

"The Unholy Three" Packs the Belle

"The Unholy Three," featuring the late Lon Chaney, in his first and only talking picture was witnessed by a large crowd at the Belle Theatre last night on the first of the two days on which it is shown in this city. Excellence of the picture itself, the sound accompaniment, and the fact that a melancholy interest centres about this masterwork of an artist who died shortly after completing it, account for the wide interest in the picture here.

Lon Chaney, whose masterly impersonations made him the greatest star in his peculiar class while the silent films were in vogue, here shows that his voice was a part of the same great artistic temperament as made him a world name for years. The voice, like the man, Chaney was no mere speaker of lines, he acted them, he did more, he is the mimic, and the ventriloquist with a perfection in his field making him unrivalled.

In "The Unholy Three" he is supported by a giant and a midget who star in their role of assistants to Echo, the role played by Chaney. Lila Lee, the hero and J. C. Nugent, as the lover, added to the effect by their clever acting, while the court lawyers lent a lifelikeness which made the court scene one of the most thrilling on record.

Into this film are worked the secrecies of night and sound, the sounds of parrots, the roars of the spe, rounding out a complete effect.

The sound film has lost much to the death of Chaney. There is no one to take his place. Death cheated the screen of one of the greatest of character actors as "The Unholy Three" shows.

In lighter vein to the creak story was the "Freshman's Goat," full of thrills and gaiety.

In two months of this year Cuba sold 233,000 tons of sugar to Russia. Egypt will have an agricultural bank.

Plan How to Spend Twenty Millions

Ottawa, Sept. 26—The Governmental program for dealing with the unemployment situation in Canada advanced another step yesterday when the Governor in Council by Excellency the Governor-General, information as to the nature and terms of the regulations is withheld. It is understood, however, that they follow the lines already indicated and that grants payable to the municipalities and Provinces are contingent on a measure of co-operation from them. Applications by the municipalities, it is understood will be made to the Provinces and passed along by them to the Dominion. The regulations were submitted by Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor, to his colleagues at a sitting of Cabinet which lasted until well into the evening.

Teacher "Skinny" Nervous, Gains Pep 14 Lbs. in 3 Weeks

ST. AURELIE, P. Q.—"Was nervous, exhausted. So skinny, was embarrassed," says Miss Alphonsine Fortier, teacher. "Tried Limited Yeast. Gained 14 lbs. in 3 weeks. Now healthy and happy."

Teachers, lawyers, doctors, nurses, mothers, ministers all write of gains of 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks with new Limited Yeast. Blemished skin clears. "Nerves," constipation, indigestion go overnight. New pep first day.

Ironized Yeast is two great tonics in one. Weight-building brewer's Yeast plus strengthening, blood-enriching iron. Many times more effective than unmedicated yeast. Results in half the time.

Don't be "skinny," weak, nervous, in danger of serious ills. Take these pleasant little tablets for yeasty taste; no gas. It will delighted with quick gains, manufacturer refunds money. Get Ironized Yeast from drug gist today. Feel great tomorrow. New pounds quick.

It Won't be Long Now!

SINCLAIR'S

WEDDINGS

HEARNS—ROSE

A pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at Bayside United Church parsonage in the presence of a number of friends from Frankford, Trenton and Johnstown, when Olive Reta, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rose of Frankford, was united in marriage with Edward Blake Hearns son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Hearns of Frankford. Rev. J. R. Butler officiated. The bride was handsomely attired in sky-blue silk crepe and was assisted by Miss Muriel Batchelor of Trenton, who was becomingly gowned in orchid crepe. Mr. George Montgomery of Frankford, assisted the groom. After many hearty congratulations and showers of confetti, the happy couple left on a motor trip. On their return they will reside in Frankford.

CHOATE — OKE

Oshawa, Sept. 26—A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Centre Street United Church, September 24, at four o'clock, when Beryl Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hedley Oke, of Darlington, became the bride of Carman Edward Choate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Choate, of Picton, Ontario. Rev. W. P. Fletcher performed the ceremony. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Alice Georgina Daley, of Oshawa, and Mr. Harry Allin, of Courtice. After a honeymoon trip that will take them to Toronto and other Eastern Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Choate will make their home at Oshawa.

VAN ALLEN — JOHNS

A pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, September 17th, when Berna May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Johns, of Laurgan, Sask., became a bride of Mr. Clarke Lucas Van Allen, of Belleville, son of Mrs. Annie M. Van Allen, 53 North Front Street, and the late Mr. Frank Van Allen. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Donald McVickers.

The bride, who was charmingly attired in silver and brocette over satin, was given in marriage by her father, and entered the drawing room on the arm of Mr. Clarence Johns. Miss Vivian McConnell. The bride carried a bouquet of red roses and white heather.

She was attended by Mrs. William Johns, who wore a lovely frock of sky blue georgette and carried a bouquet of Mr. William Johns, the bride's brother's groomsman.

A delightful supper luncheon was served, and about thirty guests were present. Later the bride and groom left for Belleville, the bride wearing for travelling a smart ensemble of navy blue, with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Van Allen will reside in this city.

TODAY'S VERSE

BRIEF RETURN

Summer came again today
Just like us by surprise
Though she did not come to stay
Summer came again today
Til her own warm-hearted way;
Autumn's dress was no disguise.
Summer came again today
Just to take us by surprise.

FOUND HANGED

DUNNVILLE, Sept 26—Using a trip rope from a nearby barn, Oliver Lym burner of Smithville, hanged himself to a tree about one and a half miles from his home yesterday. The body was found by a search party about 8 a.m. Ill-health was given as a reason for the act.

Beverages for Evening Parties

By Hannah Wing

Has it occurred to you that the beverages to be served with evening refreshments can be varied interestingly in several ways.

For instance try serving hot chocolate with evening refreshments as many people who take coffee at dinner do not wish to drink it late at night (although of course one of the caffeine-less, brands can always be served when coffee is preferred). Mexican style chocolate is especially nice for such lovers of coffee for it has a mocha flavor due to the addition of three teaspoons of instantaneous coffee mixed with the chocolate.

A covered pottery pitcher and rather thick pottery cups and saucers are nice for serving hot chocolate because they retain the heat better than do the thinner wares—and hot chocolate must be hot to be good. There is also on the market a new electric chocolate coffee pot in which the milk for the chocolate may be heated at the table and the chocolate syrup added from a small pitcher.

The chocolate syrup, which is a mixture of chocolate, sugar, salt and boiling water, may be made up in quantity in advance, and kept on hand for just such occasions. If you like making four or five cups to a recipe, cut down on the amount of water. The syrup will keep just as well and you will not have to use so many jars to store it. If you prefer you can buy the chocolate syrup already prepared. The chocolate malted powders are also especially satisfactory for making milk drinks to serve with late refreshments.

And by the way for afternoon refreshments tea crystals similar to the instantaneous coffee crystals are now on the market.

These dissolve instantly in boiling water and leave no tea leaves or tea bags to dispose of. You probably know the colored and fruit-flavored sugar cubes and the sugars in bridge shapes. Also for use in tea are sugar crystals which dissolve more slowly than the standard variety, and candied crops which add an intriguing flavor to the familiar cup.

Other tidbits for the tray of tea accessories are candied flower petals and mint leaves. You may prepare these easily by dipping mint leaves in slightly beaten egg white, then sifting granulated sugar over both sides and placing them on a wire rack in a warm place until dry. If the petals are not thoroughly coated the process may be repeated.

Lime Fruit Cup

Crush ice, 1-4 cup canned fruit, syrup 1-4 cup bottled lime juice or 3-4 cup fresh lime juice, 1 cup ginger ale, slice of cucumber, 1-3 tablespoon crushed pineapple, 1-3 cherry or sprig of of mint.

Fill a quart pitcher half full of crushed ice, add fruit syrup (a combination of flavors is desirable), lime juice and ginger ale. Garnish with slices of cucumber, a sprig of mint, fresh crushed pineapple and cherry or mint.

Hot Chocolate

Three cups milk, 1-4 cup sugar, 1 1-2 squares chocolate, few grains salt, 1 cup boiling water.

Scald milk. Melt chocolate in small saucepan over hot (not boiling) water, add sugar, salt, and very slowly boiling water. Stir until smooth, place over heat and boil five minutes, then add to hot milk, beat until frothy and serve with whipped cream.

SUNSET is a Concentrated Dye

In the little cake of Sunset you'll find a concentrated quality dye that does a lot of dyeing. Sunset is not like the ordinary sailing dye to an envelope—Sunset has in it the best quality, fast dye and lots of it.

But Sunset goes further; it is a combination, a combination of dyes and soap. Sunset dyes and tints at the same time, dyes them perfectly—but dyes them the same shade in one and the same time. Cleans the fabric too in the same operation.

Sunset in every one of its 36 standard colours gives a true, even colour that rivals the work of professional dyers at a one-tenth the cost.

Sunset is easily the most economical, most convenient material for dyeing the hands—no fuss—no bother—no

AGED TURK HIT BY PASSING CAR

156 Year Old Visitor is in Very Bad Condition

New York, Sept. 26—Zaro Agha, the Turk, whose contention that he is 156 years old has drawn the attention of this country and Europe, was knocked down and seriously injured last night by a hit-and-run automobile at Broadway and Sixty-first street.

The aged Turk, who came to this country in July, was in so serious a condition from internal injuries and lacerations of the leg and head, that three physicians did not consider it advisable to remove him from his room in a hotel, where he was taken after the accident, to a hospital.

Accompanied by his representative Asim Bidran, and by Ahmet Muzo, 23 years old, who says he is Zaro Agha's great-great-greatgrandson, the aged man was crossing Broadway from east to west at Sixty-first Street. They reached the safety zone in the middle of the street, and stood there waiting for automobile traffic to halt.

A private sedan passed by, traveling northward. Its driver wheeling as if to turn west on Sixty-first Street. As the car turned the front fender struck Zaro Agha. He toppled forward, his head striking some other part of the automobile as it continued on.

Income is the thing
$100.00 a Month Sure!

Could you be sure of it? These men were:

Everything was going well until he got tuberculosis. Then he lost his earnings; but his Canada Life policy gave him $100 a month. Four years later he returned to work, and said: "That income saved my life, gave me courage; enabled me to pay my way a blessing indeed."

An old man, alone—home, family all gone; unable even to pay his board bill. He had but one asset a Canada Life policy, taken years before "to protect his family!" He was astonished to find that the cash value and profits were large enough to buy him $100 per month annuity for life. He had "made a sure" without knowing it.

Another man bought a policy which guaranteed to pay him $100 a month when he reached age 65; but he died later he returned to work, and said: "That income saved my life, gave me courage; enabled me to pay my way a blessing indeed."

There is but one sure way. How other men and women have provided an income is explained clearly in our booklet, "An Income for Life." Why not send for it?

Cards Have Strength to Extend Athletics in Coming Title Series

And National League Supporter Prestige of Old Circuit to Be Restored By Their Champions.

New York, Sept. 26—Those amazing St. Louis Cardinals, who seem destined to win the National league pennant after a courageous, uphill struggle that has thrilled the fans of the country, have the baseball "it" to make the impending world series with the Philadelphia A's an exciting, colorful and dramatic event.

They have the power, the class and other potentialities capable of restoring to the National league the prestige lost through humiliating defeats in the last three National league entry in the last three world series.

This situation is distressing to officials of the older circuit and there will be rending of hair and gnashing of teeth if the American league club repeats in the 1930 classic. In 1927, the New York Yankees beat the Pittsburgh Pirates four straight; in 1928, the Yankees defeated the Cardinals four in a row, and last year the Athletics conquered the Cubs four out of five.

If the fast-stepping Cardinals "miracle team of 1930," get into the world series this year—and that seems to be a foregone conclusion—they will hardly be worse than an even-money bet to "take" the A's. For this psychology of recent baseball happenings has been favorable to the St. Louis aggregation. They have been riding along on one of the greatest winning streaks in the history of the game, beginning back on August 9, when they were sunk in fifth place, twelve games behind the lead, and continuing to the close of the season.

The A's on the other hand, have coasted in to win the American league hunting.

Will Connie Mack's players, who have been easing along, be able to key themselves up to the winning pitch that the Cardinals have been maintaining for the past six weeks?

It requires keen competition to develop this "will to win" that the Cards possess, and St. Louis has had such competition. They knocked the Giants off when they were pennant-mad, and wrecked the Robins at a time when Brooklyn officials were accepting world series reservations.

St. Louis' remarkable fight to win the flag recalls the memorable drive of the Boston Braves in 1914, when they climbed from last place to the top and then humiliated the Athletics by crushing them four times in succession for the world's championship.

LOOKS LIKE LONG SERIES

The forthcoming series between the Cardinals and the A's gives promise of developing long, hard-fought engagement. .It would not surprise baseball experts if seven games were required to settle the issue. Both teams have been under world series fire, the A's last fall and the Cards the year before, so it is unlikely either club will succumb to nerves and crack in the big money games.

Two master tacticians, Connie Mack and Gabby Street, will be in the opposing dugouts. They are both old-timers in baseball and can see more in the game than slugging the modern lively all. On occasion, they can both be depended upon to employ the sacrifice bunt, the "squeeze" play and the stolen base.

As the world series approaches, advance reports indicate there is more sentiment among the populace in St. Louis than in Philadelphia. When the A's returned home after clinching the American league pennant, they were quietly welcomed by the Mayor and his cabinet, but there was no big turnout of fans. St. Louis, however, is making a celebration for the Cards to be held the morning after the pennant is won. The Cards will be home for their final series of the year, with the Pirates.

Neither Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, nor Secretary Ed Barrow would confirm or deny the report yesterday that Joe McCarthy, who will be succeeded by Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Cubs at the close of the season next year. The change in Cub management was made known late Monday night by William Wrigley Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs.

"I have seen McCarthy only once in my life," said Colonel Ruppert at his home yesterday, "and that was a great many years ago. I have had no talk with him about managing the Yankees, nor have I had any talk with Bob Shawkey regarding next season.

"In fact, I haven't talked baseball with anybody for several weeks and don't intend to see anybody until after the close of the season. I plan to have a conference then with Shawkey but until that time arrives I cannot say anything."

Asked whether he had any comment to make on the statement credited to Wrigley that the latter intended to help McCarthy land a job either with the Yankees or Pirates," Colonel Ruppert declared there was nothing he could say on that point either, as he had up to now received no communication from Wrigley regarding McCarthy.

Secretary Barrow was equally reticent to discuss McCarthy as a future manager of the Yankees.

"So far as we know, McCarthy may not even want to come to New York," said Barrow. "Nor do we know whether we would want him, as up to now we have not discussed matters with Shawkey. So there is really nothing we can say about the matter until after the close of the season."

HOW THEY STAND

The St. Louis Cardinals moved another step nearer the National League pennant as they trounced the Pittsburg Pirates 9 to 0 yesterday, Chicago's second-placers won a game, defeating Cincinnati 4 to 3, but the reduction in the number of games left to play deprived them of their last chance to win the title outright. The victories of the two leaders left the Cards three games ahead and each has three more to play. Chicago still can gain a tie by sweeping the series with Cincinnati if St. Louis loses three straight to Pittsburgh. Since a Cardinal victory or one Chicago defeat is all that is needed to settle the matter, the standing:

JONES SURMOUNTS ANOTHER OBSTACLE

Meets Sweester in Semi-Final with Homans and Seaver in Other Set

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 26—It isn't new, when the ordinary golfer drives out of bounds, slices into a trap or takes three putts. It is hot news when Bobby Jones does these things ,but after a day and a half of embarrassing moments, the great Georgian suddenly snapped out of his slump yesterday afternoon applied the par clincher to Fay Coleman, 23-year-old Californian, and swept into the semi-finals of the national amateur golf championship.

Jones, after an erratic morning round in which he looked like anything but a triple champion, staged a characteristic return to form to wallop Coleman by 6 and 5 in the 36-hole quarter-finals. As a result Bobby has only two more all-day battles between him and the goal that no other golfer has ever approached—a clean sweep of all four British and United States championships in one year.

Today Jones will play an old rival, Jess W. Sweetser, Kenilworth-born New Yorker, who shares with Jones the distinction of having held both the British and U. S. amateur titles Sweetser, who had to engage in a play-off to qualify in this tournament, put on a come-back rumself yesterday to beat the youthful Princeton-man, Maurice J. McCarthy of New York, conqueror of George Von Elm in a record-breaking 36-hole second round match. Sweetser captured his quarter-final match 5 and 4, after being one down at the end of the morning 18 holes.

Sharkey-Campolo Bout is Postponed

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—The Sharkey-Campolo fight, scheduled for last night, but postponed because of rain, will take place October 3, indoors, at the Madison Square Garden. Uncertain weather conditions led to this decision to put the fighters inside rather than trust to the Stadium climate.

Sharkey will remain in New York to continue his training here, while Campolo will leave today for Gus Wilson's camp at Orangeburg.

The delay may serve to increase the "take" at the box office and permit Madison Square Garden to avoid another financial failure. The advance sale was said to be short of $100,000, and expenses should run to at least $150,000. Interest in the fight has been so slack that it was doubted whether 20,000 persons would have attended last night.

Sharkey had one encounter yesterday, anyway, despite the fact that rain prevented the clash with Campolo A battle, mostly verbal, took place between the Bostonian and a group of photographers at the weighing-in ceremonies. The trouble developed when a cameraman asked Sharkey to pose with his rival for a flashlight picture, and Sharkey refused. A quarrel followed and the Bostonian rushed at the photographer. They were pulled apart by other photographers and handlers.

Sharkey weighed 200 pounds, the most he has ever scaled for any bout. He appeared fat around the waist and the Athletic Commission physician who examined him said he was extremely nervous and appeared to be worrying. Campolo, weighing 222 1-2, was pronounced in perfect condition. When news of the episode reached the ears of betting commissioners, the odds favoring Sharkey dropped from 3 to 1 to 9 to 5.

RACEHORSE WILDLY LEAPED INTO CROWD

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Sept. 26— A race horse at the Fair Grounds track here threw his jockey late yesterday, hurtled over a fence and crashed into a crowd of spectators, injuring 24, 13 of them seriously. The jockey was trampled by other horses in the race and received internal injuries. The horse then leaped a high fence and plunged into a group of about 1,000 persons.

The animal knocked over about 50 people before it fell. Then it kicked viciously into the small group it had knocked over.

RUGBY SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

Albert College Will Play Trenton Here — College-iate to Napane

The lid will be pried off the local rugby season tomorrow afternoon when the scholastic teams get away. The Albert College squad will play hosts to Trenton here, while the Collegiate will face the Napanee team on the latter's gridiron.

"Cy" Mungovan has been drilling the Albert boys all week and they are said to be in good shape to face the Trenton delegation. The visitors have rough-shod over everything in this neck of the woods last year and they will have plans made to visit the road again this year. The whole squad will be given an opportunity to do their stuff in tomorrow's engagement and the weeding out process will start on the first of the week.

The Collegiate team were sent thru their paces in rapid-fire style at the East Bellevelle playground last night and Coach Shiels believes he has the team in the best possible shape. The boys were a tired lot when the practice concluded last night. Mr. Shiels believes in driving them at top speed and every candidate must be in good condition in order to retain his place. The Collegiate squad will travel to Napanee by motor and Coach Shiels would appreciate it if local sportsmen would donate the use of their cars for this occasion as there is a decided shortage of transportation facilities.

Batstone is Through As Gridiron Player

KINGSTON, Sept. 26.—Footballers circles are wondering if Harry Batstone former Queen's backfield star, and now coach of the team, will play this season since the four-year rule was scrapped by the Inter-collegiate Union. There have been many rumors that Batstone would return to the gridiron as an active player but the member of the tricolor said that he is definitely out of the game as a player.

"I will not return to the field as a player," said Coach Batstone. "I have been out of the game for the past three years and I don't think I would be of much use to the team as a player after a long lay-off. Besides, there are many players trying for positions on the team, and they are entitled to consideration. As far as I am concerned, I am finished with football as a player." Coach Batstone was expected in some quarters to be seen in the game this year as relief for Carter, but the announcement by the tricolor mentor meant that he will not again be seen in the back division for Queen's.

There might be objection raised, too, on the part of other intercollegiate teams to a coach playing.

27 Members of Athletics Eligible in World Series

CHICAGO, Sept. 26 — Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis yesterday named 24 members of the Philadelphia Athletics as eligible players in the 1930 world series, with Manager Connie Mack and Coaches William Gleason and Earl Mack bringing the list to 27.

The eligible players are:

Max Bishop, John Boley, Mickey Cochrane, Eddie Collins, Jimmy Dykes, George Earnshaw, Jimmy Foxx, Lety Grove, Mule Haas, Frank Higgins, Eric McNair, Roy Mahaffey, Bing Miller, James Moore, Charles Perkins, Jack Quinn, Ralph Perkins, Ed. Rommell, Wally Schang, Bill Shores, Al Simmons, Homer Summa Rube Walberg and Dibrell Williams.

The National League eligibility list will be released when the National League championship is decided definitely.

TRAFFIC POLICE CHECKING UP ON MOTOR BRAKES

Stop Street Observance, Must be Strict, Says Officer

SEASON'S DANGER

Sample of Brake Testing is Need Shown by One Test

With the advent of the rainy weather, motorists are inclined to slacken down in the upkeep of their cars with respect to brakes. The summer is over and with the passing has gone the great influx of American tourists on the heavily congested roads. Instead of slackening down on their upkeep, a motorcar should be kept in prime condition especially in the rainy season as accidents are more numerous, due to slippery pavement and frosty nights. Speeding too is dangerous about the city streets as the school children are passing to and from school and Belleville has some dangerous intersections.

The city traffic officer Bert Prink, is still on the job and in his patrolling of the city streets is making a practice to stop motorists and test their brakes. Yesterday some fifteen cars were stopped and in one instance defective brakes were found and the owner of the car will have to answer a charge under the Highway Traffic Act. At 20 miles per hour the car was not stopped by the brakes until 47 paces had been covered. Some were found a little slack and a warning issued as have them adjusted immediately.

Not only is the traffic officer checking up on the brakes but he is also watching the stop streets. There has been a number of minor accidents caused by the motorist coming out of a stop street and failing to stop has collided with cars on the through traffic streets. This branch of the city by-law is being closely watched and every motorist guilty of the offence will be hailed into court. The acquisition of the Traffic officer during the summer has had the desired effect in reducing the number of accidents and the effort will no doubt be continued next summer by the police commission.

KOLOFF DEFEATS FROM BAFFERT

"Dangerous Dan" Wins Second and Third Falls from Baffert

TORONTO, September 26.—At Ba-fert the Georges Carpentier of the wrestling game, met his Dempsey last night. The flashily speedy French grappler's lengthy Toronto winning streak was brought to an abrupt conclusion by Dan Koloff of St. Louis, who once again showed that it was not for nothing that he had been dubbed "The Balkan Lion," Conqueror of Siki, DeVito, Hewitt, Stasiak and others gracing his Toronto campaign the lithely-built Frenchman started like a victor against Koloff last night but was very much subdued at the finish.

It was an exciting match and a good one. There were thrills and they were provided by good wrestling rather than the super-showmanship that character zes so many of the present-day wrestling bouts. Baffert used his speed in aggressive fashion but the powerful Koloff bided his time and with great ser strength and a thirty-two pound weight advantage gradually wore his name down.

It was a three-fall match, Baffert taking the first but losing the next two To Matchmaster Ivan Mirkaloff the result was somewhat of a disappointment "Baffert and Sonnenberg would have drawn $20,000," he wailed and in making that est mate he was not far off the mark. However, he has a good attraction for next Thursday, Stanley Stasiak having been signed to meet the winner. Sonnenberg will likely appear here next month against an opponent, not as yet determined.

W. S. MacDiarmid on ELECTION

The exiles in California received the news of the past few weeks with sadness and regret. Sad because of the fall of the grand old Liberal government. Regrets that they were unable to join with the "old boys" in the wonderful home welcome which the city by the Dominion could put on such a celebration. Toronto may be happy but she cannot boast of as many Belleville sons and daughters at the beautiful city by the bay.

Toronto vs. Belleville

In looking over the list of those who attended W. C. Mikel, K.C., U.E.L., should start an action against the Queen City. There are good grounds for a divorce of alienation of affection There is no good reason why Toronto should exist on many Bellevillians. All it can boast of is a street car system that Belleville dispensed with years ago. Past trains leaving Montreal reach Belleville hours ahead and Toronto jails handle more prisoners in a day than Belleville will in a year. Belleville saw the big English airship before Toronto. It is hard to see why anyone would prefer to live there after seeing the beautiful city on the shores of the Bay of Quinte.

The old boys did not have the pleasure of seeing Ten Barrooms in One Night. When getting off at the depot there was no opportunity of stopping at Bill Docter's. Down the line where John Doyle had his oats. Bill and Fred Deacon have a dry shirt factory. Gene is Charlie Kyle who flourished a few doors farther south. Then came the road now a paved street was the Old Fitzpatrick House. The last to have the tavern license was Marvin Wims.

The recent complaint of chief Lynch about Bellevillians chasing him to a fire is interesting. This is a serious matter and a slap at our constitution. President Hoover will not like it. Every man is created equal and has the right to pursue a fire engine in the quest of happiness if he is a slow at freedom the wide world over. No matter where you go or what city you may be in if there is a fire you will see someone running to it. And the chances are he will be from Belleville. If the Belleville boys can go to a fire in an automobile they will get there much quicker. They are not Pasle to get there before Chief Lynch and put the fire out. That's something for the tax payers to think about.

The defeat of the Liberal government was no surprise. It is hard to explain away the reason why Mackenzie King furnished the rope to hang himself when there is a wide world depression as there is today why he was defeated. If the defeated premier had sense enough to sit pretty for another year he might have had a chance. He deserves no pity and is getting none.

It is to be hoped that the citizens of the grand old Dominion will feel better under absolute Tory rule. If they figure on Premier Bennett to be the boss to lead them out of the wilderness of unemployment they are going to be much disappointed. The Republicans promised it when they said a panic would result if Smith was elected. Hoover and prosperity was the slogan, but the Tories in the U.S.A. Now the Americans are saying "Washington saved the country, Lincoln freed the slaves, Hoover freed us from work."

One thing you can count on the Tories will pull up their belts and will sing prosperity no matter how hard the times if they can stay in power. The sad part of it is that Mackenzie King gave them a chance to vote. Women were going to purify politics and save the country. It just means more Tory votes. It looks like lean years ahead.

Yours for better times.

W. S. MacDiarmid,
Los Angeles.

Canada Probing Soviet Wheat Sale

OTTAWA, Sept. 26 — Canada will not send a representative to attend the inquiry into Soviet short wheat selling at Chicago on Monday. Last evening a telegram declining the invitation of Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., chairman of the committee of Congress investigating communistic activities in the United States, was dispatched by Sir George Perley, Acting Prime Minister. Sir George explained in his telegram that the Canadian government is endeavouring to ascertain whether or not there is any ground for the report that there has been manipulation in Canada. This method of co-operation, he suggests appears preferable to sending representatives to the Chicago hearings.

BACK TO DUTY AT 85

KINGSTON, Sept. 26.—Dr. Alfred J. Pile of Amelasburg, at the age of 85,has returned to his practice in that village after being ill in Belleville Hospital. Dr. Pile is Medical Officer of Health for the district, and still attends to that office. He has a fine cattle farm. Dr. Pile graduated at Queen's Medical College in 1869, and has been in active practice 61 years.

Time has Tested it — Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has been on the market upwards of fifty years and in that time it has proved a blessing to thousands. It is in high favor throughout Canada and its excellence has carried its fame beyond the seas. It is were double the price it would be a cheap liniment.

NEWSPRINT HEAD RESIGNED POST

Col. John H. Price Claims Member Companies Aggressive

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 25 (CP) — Col. John H. Price, chairman of the Newsprint Institution of Canada, today announced his resignation because he declined, he said, to associate further with that body owing to unwillingness on the part of members to adhere to the rules. One member company had shown aggression towards Price Brothers and Company Limited, and for this reason his firm would adopt whatever independent policy it might see fit to protect the interests of its shareholders. In outlining the status of the association, Col. Price said it had been formed for the stabilization of the industry. Recently, however, there was among the members the tendency to scramble for markets and in one instance a member company had become aggressive against Price's own company. This led him to resign.

Expect Price-Cut War in Newsprint

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (CP) — The situation in Canadian newsprint industry remained very uncertain today. No one was willing to forecast the effect of Col. John Price's resignation as chairman of the Newsprint Institute. Col. Price said he agreed with stories in the local papers, which forecast the resumption of price cutting activities on the part of Canadian newsprint producers.

DECORATION DAY AT WELLINGTON

Canadian Legion Fathered Unique Service—Graves Decorated

WELLINGTON, Sept. 25—By Mail—Wellington Cemetery Company Decoration Day was held on Sunday, Sept. 21st., when the Canadian Legion, lodges, Prince Edward and Hastings Regimental Band and the general public paid tribute to their loved ones. The service opened with Canadian Legion service held at the Park Memorial Gates. Mr. Burd called upon Rev. Harry Perry, who took charge of the Devotional services which opened by singing Faith of Our Fathers. Mr. Burd then introduced Judge McLean of Picton, who gave an excellent address, stating he was proud to be associated in working with what is left of the great band of brothers who fought in the great war. He stated that the meeting held was a privilege and a duty to their fallen brothers. He thought the place filling as Wellington was named after a great soldier, the Duke of Wellington, and that they had met here to do honor to the great band of men who laid down their lives, that peace of British liberty might reign throughout the world. He paid great tribute to the Canadian Legion for their noble work done in what he hoped was the greatest and last battle for the protection of liberty throughout the world. He stated a good soldier was a good man and a good christian. Many of the men had earned medals and there were many instances of self sacrifice not known to the public. He extended words of comfort to those who did not loved ones and he said his firm conviction based upon his intimate knowledge of the soldier was best expressed in the words of Kipling—Being cleansed of base desires they went up the steps to the Almighty blameless.

He urged the members of the Canadian legion to consecrate themselves and to band together to carry on the noble work they were doing which was a duty as the country looks to them to carry out and protect the ideals for which their brothers gave their lives.

Wreaths were placed on the Memorial gates by Mr. Burd president of the Canadian Legion 160 and Mr. Milner, Picton.

After this service the parade with Capt. D. S. Ainsworth, marshal of the parade formed and marched to the cemetery headed by Prince Edward and Hastings Regimental band followed by Canadian Legion, lodges and general public where Mr. A. A. Morden, Past President of Cemetery Committee Co., acted as chairman. Service opened with "O God Our Help in Ages Past".

He introduced Rev. Canon McVear who in speaking of the Life of the Soul after death said "There's no death. What seems so is transition.

At one time some thought that in the case of our Lord Jesus Christ, the place of the soul was taken by His divinity, but not so. His soul after death went to the place of departed spirits. So the word hell means the covered place being derived from the word "halah" to cover. In secret societies covering is referred to as he is hailed or heeled meaning he is covered or shelter in the lodge. He called attention to the beautiful words. This day shall thou be with me in paradise and described the place of rest and of the resurrection. The war and its consequences has given us greater appreciation of what the life of the soul after death means.

Then the assurance was given

They shall rest from their labours

Christ not only died for us, but he took that journey and went down the dark path that we may follow along that same way which will be brightened by his presence and have the aspection that we should all be joined together at the general resurrection.

This was followed by hymn "Asleep in Jesus" then the flower committees marched and placed flowers on the graves and selections were given by the band after which Mr. Morden called upon Mr. James Duckworth of Belleville Past District Deputy of the Oddfellows for an address who spoke of the fraternity or brotherhood. He stated the Oddfellows had worked for 100 years for the uplift and welfare of mankind and one of their mottoes was love the living, remember the dead.

He stated the fraternity had principles which if inculcated in us cannot fail to benefit us.

He stated it was educational to be an Oddfellow.

He referred to the new cemetery and stated it was much in evidence that interest was taken in caring for the dead or departed ones and addressed the lodge and said it behoves us to look well after our plots and remember our loved ones who have passed to rest and keep to our principles—Love the living, remember the dead.

He stated he had a warm place in his heart for Wellington and its welfare.

Rev. Dr. Taylor was the next speaker and took as his topic, "Why the use of flowers. As for man his days are as the grass; Are flowers used to show our frailty. He told of many instances when flowers were comforts to the hearts of those who sorrow and in placing of flowers on the graves we show our loved ones are not forgotten. Dr. Taylor led in Prayer and the Last Post was given by Prince Edward Hastings Band.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

More than usual stress is placed on the livestock and dairy interests at the fall fairs this year. This is a universal opinion. Things are evidently getting back to essentials; what were fads are being dropped and the fair is again what it was intended to be—primarily for the benefit of agriculture. Stirling fair is a case in point. It had livestock of a standard quality which would do justice to any fair, poultry, which would bring credit upon a provincial exhibition, grains and vegetables which are the equal if not the superior of any shown at much larger exhibitions.

Now the prize money goes to the encouragement of the interests which are vital in agriculture. There are other interests in the fair but they occupy a subordinate place.

It is well to see the directors of fairs devoting attention to those factors which will improve agriculture.

NO DOOMSTERS THERE

Stirling rain was an eye-opener to those who have been spelling the doom of the smaller fairs in Ontario. These dismal prophets of the end of rural exhibitions are in the talk of the boy, "all wet." They are not only wrong but they are unconsciously doing their best to unsettle rural fairs. The rural fair is too important to be discarded. It has the touch that the big fair lacks.

SEEING CLEARLY

Depressions bring hardships on many but they also bring many people to their senses, away from the gambling mart in stocks, and make them place the stress upon the essential values of life. Valuable training in economy is now being given those who dwelt in a fool's paradise while prices which meant nothing mounted and profits looked large but they were nothing bu a cloud in a windstorm. Men are learning that speculation is not the end-all of life, that there is a surer basis of prosperity than betting on prices, that there is enough uncertainty about things in general to make life interesting without gambling about them. Depressions make those put their houses in order who had lost all sense of proper bearing with the piping and swelling times of boom. After wandering in the woods of enchantment and deception the man whose vision is now cleared can see the realities of life against which the unreal things look pale to-day.

OUR SPEED-MAD GRANDFATHERS

Great-grandfather who courted his sweetheart in an ox-cart, and grandfather who travelled in a stagecoach were as speed-mad as young men of today, declares Edward A. Filene, veteran Boston merchant, in the September "Rotarian."

"The underlying truth about the airplane," he says, "is that it goes places, and gets there quickly over routes that were never open to travel before.

"But that was equally true of the stagecoach. People of the stagecoach era were as speed-mad as the people of today. They did things and went places as quickly as they knew how.

"The essential difference between this and other ages is not one of materialism versus spirituality, nor of speed versus leisurely, patient, and philosophical attitude, but a difference in what we are able to do.

"Success is quite as desirable for our modern youth as it ever was . . . . and I am glad to note that modern youth is somewhat skeptical. It wants success as seriously as ever, but it seems to be more interested in how Croesus actually got his money, than in any platitudes the old gentleman himself may have uttered on the subject.

"Some of us old fossils are convinced that this is an age of materialism and low ideals. We suspect that modern youths are not the heavy saints that we were fifty or sixty years ago. Those of us to whom business still means nothing but making money, cannot visualize public service except in politics and the professions.

"My personal experience with young people convinces me that they can. That is one of the reasons why the old fellows should go to the young ones for advice."

A SOWER WENT FORTH

Under the fecund arrows of the sun
A farmer plants his furrow patiently.
So went the ancient sower of the seed
Before the dawn of Karnak's dynasty.

O long religion of the fruitful sun!
O living legend of the quickened field!
Ere Egypt was—the cycle of the corn;
The seed . . . the sun . . . the full and ripened yield.

Ere Nazareth, the rhythm of the wheat:
The seed . . . the shower and warmth . . . the winnowed grain.
Pharaohs, priests and peoples change—not these:
The sower and the seed, the sun and rain!

SOME YEARS AGO there was a week end excursion from Deseronto to Rochester. On the night of the return Lake Ontario became very boisterous. The passengers were all greatly alarmed. One lady on reaching home told her experience to her husband. She said: "The storm was something frightful. We all thought we would be shipwrecked. I got up, dressed and put on my jewelry." At this stage of the narrative her husband began to laugh.

"What are you laughing at?" she demanded.

He replied, "At you. You were bound you would look respectable when you got to the bottom of the lake."

Q.—When making a formal introduction, which word is preferable, "present" or "introduce?"

A.—"Present" is preferable, as "Mrs. Brown, may I present Mr. Jones?"

Q.—At a dinner, after rising from the table, should one push back his chair into place?"

A.—No.

Q.—Should a young man ever stop a girl of his acquaintance on the street and talk with her?

A.—No; if he wishes to talk with her, he should walk along at her side.

A History of Connecticut Industry

The Middleton (Conn.) Press in a series of articles "A History of Connecticut Industry," contains an interesting article regarding J. and J. Cash Incorporated, South Norwalk, Conn. Reference is made in the article to the Belleville, Ont., plant of which Mr. Thos. Webster is manager.

The press story follows:

J. and J. Cash, Incorporated, South Norwalk

In the "old days" ribbon manufacturing in England was done in the homes of the working people. The company maintained warehouses at sales rooms. In these warehouses, the silk was given out on bobbins to men who, in their homes ran a foot or hand power loom. When the silk was converted into the ribbon, it was brought back to the warehouse and the workman was paid his price for the job. John Cash, realizing the inadequacy of this process, built a square of houses, three stories high, the top floor so arranged to hold two looms. He then gathered his weavers together from all parts of the City of Coventry and installed them in this weaving centre. His action at the time was considered as being too socialistic, pampering the working classes too much and created considerable furore in industry. About the only person who gave him a word of encouragement was the late A. T. Stewart, the then merchant prince of America, and he substantiated his endorsement by sending over large orders for ribbon. These hundred houses are still in existence and are the attractive part of the present large plant of J. and J. Cash, Ltd., Coventry, England.

Again, when that great international mode of communication was first installed, Mr. Cash came to the front. The first commercial message which read "Go to Chicago" was called by John Cash to John Matthews, the American representative of the company.

A few years pass on when the world began to wake up to the utility of advertising. Again, in the old days, advertising was a black and white proposition. In 1871, the ribbon business was practically settled due to the French treaty which flooded England with ribbons made in Praslie. Manufacturers after manufacturer "went under" but the Cash company saw another opening for their looms and brought out the famous Coventry fringes and to advertise these fringes they had printed in colors, the first of their kind, some very handsome display cards so attractive in those days, and they got into the homes of the buyers instead of the stores, but we have registered that the first colored lithograph advertising was put out by J. and J. Cash of Coventry, England.

Following the frilling business, the company made a lot of colored embroidery. A buyer in a jobbing house in New York City suggested to the New York representative "if you can make an embroidery design, why can't you weave an initial?" Thus the beginning of the initial and name business which is so well known today. The business, grew and the company in England began to realize if they could give quicker deliveries in America, their business would continue on the up grade.

In 1905 it was decided to build a plant at South Norwalk, Connecticut, and in October 1906, the plant was completed and put into operation. When the building was erected, it was considered by the directors at Coventry, England, it being a branch of this firm that ample provision had been made for twenty years.

In 1912 a large addition was added to the plant that was to last for 20 years. When the new structure was added it was decided to make woven labels for shirts, etc. Up to that time, the business had been confined to the woven name tape industry alone. The policy of the company had always been to make "the best" and the result of this brought about a great change in the administration, late in 1919. It was decided to put the American branch on its own feet by incorporating it as an American company with a capital of $300,000. The incorporation papers were no sooner out than our company started manufacturing in Canada, having leased property at Brantford, Ontario.

In the meantime, the woven name business increased to such an extent that it was decided advisable to erect a plant in the west to take care of the distance orders." All the principal cities of the middle west were visited and a central visit to Los Angeles was made. The Chamber of Commerce of that city showed a keen interest to have the Cash company on the Pacific coast that it was deemed advisable to select Los Angeles as headquarters for the Western business and in 1921 the first narrow textile plant was installed by J. and J. Cash, Inc., on the Pacific coast.

In 1922 the Norwalk plant doubled its capacity by a large addition and in 1923 the Brantford, Ont., factory was moved to larger quarters in Belleville, Ont. We now come to the year 1926, when a large building, a plant in itself, was erected at South Norwalk. This was no sooner completed than it was voted to erect a new plant in Los Angeles to take care of the increased business. A location was found and in 1927 Los Angeles plant was the property of the company.

Having taken care of the western business the Canadian business was in the meantime, going so strongly ahead that in 1928, it was decided to build a new plant along lines of the western plant and in 1929, this was finished. The company then realizing it was on a safe, sound and progressive basis voted to make it one of Connecticut's million dollar corporations.

The present officers are: Sidney Cash, president; Frank Goodchild, vice president and general manager; Arthur Lole, secretary and treasurer; W. R. Cartwright, superintendent of Cash and Harold Kirby.

Salts officers under the control of J. and J. Cash, Inc., have been opened up in New York, Toronto, Chicago, San Francisco and Santiago de Cuba.

Six naval officers recently graduated from Annapolis have sailed for England as first Navy Rhodes Scholarship men.

IT'S THE GUM in GASOLENE that STEALS your POWER

use KOOLMOTOR

Harmful gum has been removed by the special mini-gum process*

ONE REASON why Koolmotor Gasolene delivers full power from the moment you start your car is because it has been freed from harmful gum.

Excessive gum in gasolene causes a sticky deposit to form on the valve heads. When you step on the gas to get more power your valves have to struggle to get free . . . like a fly stuck on a piece of flypaper. This causes loss of compression and "missing" cylinders.

The gum content in Koolmotor Gasolene has been reduced to a harmless minimum through the special Cities Service mini-gum process. This makes Koolmotor Gasolene clean and free-burning and protects your engine against sticky, gummy valves.

You'll actually feel new freedom of operation and new power when you fill your tank with this cleansed fuel.

Why not do it today . . . there is a Cities Service station or dealer nearby.

CITIES SERVICE OIL CO. LIMITED

*The Mini-gum process—the name applied to the extreme care and precision taken by Cities Service experts to remove harmful gum from Koolmotor Gasolene. When this powerful, clean burning motor fuel reaches your car its gum content has been reduced to a harmless minimum. You are protected against the menace and expense of sticky valves.

Taking of Census is Under Study

Plans for 1931 will be Completed Soon—Staff of 15,000 Required

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — One of the duties to be performed by H. H. Stevens, as Minister of Trade and Commerce, will give his attention is the setting up of the machinery arrangements for the 1931 census. Taking of the census is one of the most extensive acts of organization and administration carried out by the Dominion and although the actual count will not be made until June 1, 1931, preparations are fully under way at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics here and will be completed at an early date.

The more important matters calling for decision at the moment are the general lines which the census will follow, and exactly what shall be the scope of the questions. As the census is the "stock-sheet" of the nation, setting out each year for some of the most important measurements by which the national business must be transacted for another ten years, the form and content of the several questions to be asked have to be given exceedingly careful consideration.

In Canada the decennial census is broadly limited to two great subjects —(1) population and (2) agriculture. For industry and many other subjects the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has now satisfactory machinery distinct from the census.

On the subject of population, a number of useful questions will probably be asked. It has already been determined, as a result of the recent conference on unemployment, to include among these certain questions which will permit a scientific study to be made of the whole problem of seasonal and periodic unemployment in Canada. This is a new departure, though the United States census which was taken in April last, affords a precedent, and its results will undoubtedly be of permanent value. Another new feature is the collecting of a list of trading establishments of all descriptions which will subsequently be used as basis for a thorough investigation into internal trading activities. It is hoped also to make a beginning through the population census of certain social problems, notably those connected with charitable, correctional and other institutions.

All preparations will virtually have to be completed during the early autumn, in order to clear the way for the large amount of field organization and preparatory work necessary before the huge machine required to take the census is made ready for operation. The latter will require a staff of probably not less than 15,000 enumerators, commissioners and others who must reach every nook and corner of the country.

The Canadian census coincides in point of time with the census of Gt. Britain, Australia, New Zealand and other countries of the Empire, and as it follows the same general lines, a most valuable series of data and comparisons for the whole Empire will be the result.

BURWASH ARRIVES

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 25 —After disappearance for two days in the Manitoba Lake Country, Major L. T. Burwash, noted explorer of the Arctic, reached Winnipeg today in a fokker plane. He is going to Ottawa with the tale of his visit to the magnetic pole and discovery of the camp of the Franklin expedition.

Nearly 25 percent more Americans visited Austria this year than last.

WOMAN HEARD AT PICTON CHURCH

Wilfred Lane is Coaching Collegiate Rugby Team

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

PICTON, Sept. 22—"Mother" Whittemore of New York, founder of the "Door of Hope" for unfortunate women in that city years ago, spent the week end in Picton and spoke at the church services and at several special gatherings. She came to Canada under the auspices of the Missions of Bible Education and Mr. T. A. Robinson, of Toronto, who is the secretary, accompanied her here. With her also is Miss Grunet, well known pianist.

Mrs. Whittemore is over 80 years old, which makes her talks all the more effective. At the United church services on Sunday she told something of her life and the founding of the "Door of Hope." She was the daughter of a fairly wealthy man and her husband held a substantial business post. She told of how one evening she was going to a dance and of an incident that brought home to her the uselessness of her life as she was living it. A visit to Jerry McAuley's Mission in the slums of New York, was probably responsible for her conversion and she entered into this work. With other workers she would go from dive to dive, frequented by criminals and the fallen, distributing tracts and on the back of each tract was an invitation to fallen women to visit the "Door of Hope." Thousands did and today there are 76 branches in different parts of the world including Africa and China.

Delia, or the Blue Bird of Mulberry Bend, was one of those women dearest to Mother Whittemore's heart. She was an educated woman, said Mrs. Whittemore and more sinned against than sinning. Jenia was the leader of a gang of thieves. The police were hunting the band and in one of the dives were the missionaries and Delia's band. Delia showed the missionaries a way out and Mrs. Whittemore gave her a rose. Delia called at the "Door of Hope" and eventually she became converted and this time led a "gang" of missionaries into the dives.

"Mother" Whittemore's story was full of pathos and humor and made a great appeal to her hearers. The story of Delia was told at the big gathering in the United Church on Monday evening. Monday afternoon she addressed a women's meeting. Miss Grunet gave a number of piano selections which were greatly enjoyed. At the Sunday evening church services, with Prof. Walden and Miss Grunet at the piano, a unique and beautiful duet was enjoyed.

The Collegiate rugby team is holding nightly practices under the direction of Wilfred Lane. Their first game is here on Saturday when they meet the Belleville High School. Picton has a strong team though several members of last year's team are missing.

No arrests have yet been made in connection with the robbery at the Jaz long store. It is believed that the work was that of a professional.

Collegiate students are practicing for the annual field day on October 6th. A large number of prizes are being competed for.

Barn Burned

In the storm Saturday night a barn owned by Samuel Brunnell, near Derry Valley, was struck and burned. It contained part of the season's crops. No other damage was reported.

Mrs. James Pargey, of Belleville, who recently returned from a visit with her sister in British Columbia, visited friends at Bloomfield a few days ago.

Mr. Rodney Rankin, Toronto, was in town last week.

Australia expects to receive $25,000,000 this year from its sales tax.

WIDOW FLASHES GUN AND SHOOTS

Combining of Church Publications Urged at London

ENID, Okla., Sept. 25 — Mrs. Dolly Douthitt, 30 year old pioneer Oklahoman, whipped a small revolver from its hiding place within the folds of her dress while seated in court here and shot United States Commissioner H. Z. Wedgewood. She was subdued before she could wound others in the crowded courtroom and later was rushed to the county jail here.

The sudden shooting occurred after a ruling by Judge H. E. Butzer during the hearing of a damage suit in which Mrs. Douthitt was involved. The ruling was contrary to Mrs. Douthitt's wishes and she fired upon Wedgewood, who is a litigant in one of the eight suits pending against her, without warning.

"I'm through with them. I will get them yet, for I will fight to the end," she said after explaining enemies had been "hounding me until there was an explosion."

Yesterday was not the first time the eccentric widow had been held in jail. Twenty-six years ago she was arrested after the shooting of her husband, W. T. Douthitt on an Enid Street. She was found not guilty of the charges filed against her in his death.

The case attracted widespread attention, especially gaining prominence after it became known she had purchased a specially built casket for her husband.

"I am highly temperamental," the widow said. "They forced me into court. I carried that gun for years, but I am a Christian."

No charges will be filed against her, county authorities said, until physicians can determine the seriousness of the commissioner's wounds.

Spectators subdued the woman before she could fire upon Judge Butzer and Roy Elam, an attorney, who apparently had angered her. Mrs. Douthitt, a large property owner here, was acting as her own attorney in the hearing.

All Night with Asthma

Everyone knows how attacks of asthma often keep their victims awake the whole night long. Morning finds him wholly unfitted for a day of business and yet business must still be carried through. All this night suffering and lack of rest can be avoided by the prompt use of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy, which positively does drive away the attacks.

Chinese to Hang For Cafe Murder

Brantford, Sept. 25—"Me no understand."

This reply of Wong Kung, part proprietor of the American Cafe here, was the termination of a dramatic scene in the Brant County Court house last night. It was his reply to Mr. Justice Wright's question as to whether he had anything to say inasmuch as a jury had just found him guilty of murdering his compatriot, Lim Koo.

Koo was stabbed in the back with a butcher knife in the restaurant kitchen in August last.

Mr. Justice Wright, after commending the jurors for faithfully and properly discharging a most unpleasant duty, then passed sentence. Briefly he spoke as follows:

"Wong Kung, you have been found guilty after a fair trial of a most serious crime. The evidence pointed to a deliberate cowardly murder and the law must be satisfied. In the witness box you stated your belief in the Christian religion. One of the commandments given by the Almighty to man was, 'thou shalt not kill.' You have sinned against the laws of God and man, and as judge of this court, my duty, though painful, is simple and plain."

The judge then set the day of execution as November 6, pronouncing the sentence of death in the customary solemn words.

Quick action saves trouble, worry. Keep Dodson's Egyptian Liniment always handy. Stops bleeding instantly. Cauterizes wounds. Quickly relieves Barber's Itch and Ringworm.

EMBLEM CLUB TO MEET

The first meeting of the "Emblem Club" will be held at the Y.M.C.A. here on Friday night of this week. The organization is international in scope and is associated with the Y.M.C.A. It functions chiefly during membership drives and the local association is now in a campaign which will start next week. Members of the "Emblem Club" are entitled to wear special pins for having secured the greatest number of new members in previous drives. The pins are particularly well designed and as the holder increases his number of new members he is given recognition by the presentation of a new and more valuable emblem.

Muffets... More delicious flavour

...all the food values of the whole wheat

Contains every one of the four vitamins your body needs, one the "sunshine" vitamin no other cereal has.

YOU will love the natural flavour of Muffets . . . each a ribbon of whole wheat, baked through and through and toasted to a tempting crispness. No other whole wheat biscuit like it. Serve at any meal, either alone or with milk or cream, or with berries or fruit . . . fresh or cooked.

All the food value of whole wheat . . . protein, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins, bran . . . nothing is removed from the entire kernel of the wheat.

Read the Health Facts printed here.

You are sure to like Muffets. On every package this guarantee is printed. "If you do not agree that Muffets are the best whole wheat biscuits you have ever eaten we shall remit you the cost of this package." It is backed by the integrity of the world's largest cereal millers.

Get Muffets from your grocer today. You will enjoy the healthfulness and flavor.

The Sun Vitamin, too

Now by a patented scientific process the natural food value of Muffets is increased. By means of ultra violet rays similar to those in sunshine there is stored up in every Muffet as much of the health benefit of sunshine as you would secure from 20 minutes' exposure to noonday summer sun, or to 3 hours of winter sunshine.

Scientists say we are all dependent on sunshine for health. Children need the "sun" vitamin "D" which Muffets gives you, vitamin to have sound, hard teeth . . . strong, straight bones. Men and women need it to restore wastage of teeth and bone. The lowered vitality you sometimes feel during fall and winter months is due in part, health authorities tell us, to "sunshine starvation". The ultra-violet rays of fall and winter sunshine are only 1/9th as strong as in summer.

But the benefits of summer sunshine are yours the whole year 'round. At breakfast or at any other meal, eat Muffets now when days are shortening. Give your children . . . get for yourself . . . the added amount of the "sun" vitamin "D" which Muffets gives you.

Health Facts About Muffets

1. For growth—The proteins in Muffets are far more efficient than the proteins of ordinary fine cereals.
2. For bones and teeth—3 times as much phosphorus in Muffets as in white flour, 39% more lime than in ordinary whole wheat bread!
3. For your blood—3 times as much iron in Muffets as in cornmeal or rice.
4. For well-being—Roughage—in the exact proportion intended by nature is in every Muffet.
5. Vitamins—4 important vitamins, one being the new "Sunshine" vitamin never before obtainable in cereal . . . the vitamin that helps you to use the lime in your food.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Finger In The Pie

Louise Peple Armstrong

"We've a clannish family, and I've a natural affection for Sophia," explained Mrs. Cordelia Stokes, "but we never were at all companionable. When poor Charlie married I remember saying to Mr. Stokes, 'Claude I've a feeling Ill never have anything in common with my brother's wife.' And I do believe Charlie would have succeeded better if he'd married differently."

Mrs. Winston poured her visitor another cup of tea, struggling a feeling of inadequacy. She should say something sympathetic, particularly as Mrs. Stokes, who was Tom Winston's richest client, had paused in the discourse of her family problems to transfix her with beady black eyes, silently demanding approval. Yet she could only summon up sympathy for the woman whom Mrs. Stokes had for the past six months referred to as "poor Charlie's widow."

"She might be willing to live in a small apartment," suggested Dolly Winston hopefully, "if you would make her an allowance——"

Mrs. Stokes set down her tea cup so abruptly that her young hostess broke off in dismay.

"An allowance!" Mrs. Stokes exclaimed, her double chin and ample brocaded bosom squirer with emotion. "Sophia never knew the first thing about money. Poor Charlie used to tell us—but there, no use going into that, I'm sure. Only you've no idea what impractical ideas Sophia has. No, I'm afraid I must keep her on with me.

Mr. Stokes and I have that large house, and people might think it queer if my brother's widow were to live elsewhere. I suppose, "she ended reflectively, as she drew on her gloves, "that adjustments will eventually be made. I must get Sophia something to keep her occupied, find needlework perhaps. She's clever with her needle and Mrs. Ross to cook too."

Mrs. Winston drove into town a week later and met "poor Charlie's widow" on the street. "I'm driving back to an hour," she said, "and I'll be glad to take you along, Miss Sophia.' For Sophia had taught Dolly Winston in the High School, years before she married the brother-in-law of Stokes Knitting Company.

Miss Sophia turned a pair of timid brown eyes upon her and protested: "I would trouble you Dolly. The street-car——"

"Nonsense, Miss Sophia. I'll be delighted to have you. I'm going to park on Fifth and Main and shop."

As it happened she finished her shopping long before Dolly did, and was surprised her passenger at Fifth Street engaged in conversation with a Mr. Archibald Jennings. Mr. Jennings had a flourishing restaurant business with branches in several cities. Dolly had said he was opening another place on the new highway to be called "Ye Green Teapot," and wished a capable woman to take charge.

Miss Sophia was sitting in the car speaking in an agitated manner. "No, I couldn't possibly," she exclaimed, clasping her black gloved hands nervously. "You must take it as final."

And Mr. Jennings quickly responded: "I'm not asking you out of sympathy, Sophia, you understand? And I appreciate the fact that it would cause some talk—that your sister-in-law might't approve."

Dolly coughed discreetly then, and Mr. Jennings broke off, observed her, and was terribly embarrassed.

"I finished my shopping early," she said. "Tom told me about your new venture, Mr. Jennings, "she added to cover the little woman's confusion. "and I wish you success."

"Thanks," said Mr. Jennings briefly, mopping his slightly bald, very round head. "I—I was just talking to Sophia about it. You know, Mrs. Winston, Sophia and I are old friends."

As they drove off, Dolly watching Miss Sophia smartly out of the corners of her eyes, saw her regain composure. Presently the lady began to talk, telling her in a pathetically earnest way about her life with her sister in-law. "Cordelia's quite dear to me —doesn't want me to feel it, I'm a burden. My husband left very little insurance and Cordelia even brought my widow's weeds. I'll always be very grateful—"

"You certainly will have to, living with Cordelia!"

Miss Sophia gagged and was silent. "What about this Mr. Jennings, your old friend?"

Having decided to be frank, Dolly was determined to go the whole way —no matter what Tom should say about meddling, she thought. And, she added in mental defiance, keeping "Ye Green Teapot" would certainly be pleasanter than fine sewing and cooking for Cordelia, to say nothing of the independence it would entail.

"Oh, I couldn't" Miss Sophia faltered" —certainly not to soon after Charlie's death, Dolly! Cordelia wouldnt approve—"

"Mother Mrs. Stokes! She's not worth your consideration. selfish, vain old woman! She only wants to keep you a burden on her bounty—a grudging giver."

"I—I can't let you speak of Charlie's sister like that!"

I can't help saying what I think, Sophia," Dolly said contritely as she saw the stricken expression on the other face.

They had arrived at the gate of the Stokes country place, an ornate affair of hand-hewn stone with a coat-of-arms chiseled over the top. Miss Sophia descended in silence and turned with bent head to walk up the flagged path.

But she suddenly halted and came back, and Dolly Winston was amazed at the transformation of her countenance. With pink cheeks and bright eyes, poor little Miss Sophia was almost pretty!

"I believe after all," she cried breathlessly, "I'm speaking of Mr. Jennings, you know, dear—I believe I'll accept."

"I hoped you would, Miss Sophia," Dolly declared warmly, "follow the dictates of your head, and you won't go wrong."

She had an impulse to tell Tom that night of how she had copped "poor Charlie's widow" into the beginning of an independent career; but when he brought out a number of hotel pamphlets and spoke of vacation plans, Miss Sophia and her future were dismissed for the glowing present of the Winston family.

"I thought we'd drive to Yellowstone," Tom suggested, rumpling his black hair, "I always wanted to take a long northern trip."

"And then through Colorado, and perhaps the coast—"

A savage ringing of the door-bell disturbed these golden dreams some hours later. The colored maid, sullen at being interrupted in the reading of her latest detective tale, ushered in—Mrs. Stokes!

"It's very late," the lady said nervously, "but my reason for coming is a distressing one, which I'm sure you'll agree."

"That's all right, Mrs. Stokes," Tom assured, offering a chair.

She sank into it sighing, and Dolly was alarmed at her appearance. All hauteur had vanished, the proud woman was completely crushed.

"My husband's heart-attack tried to stop them. But the officials in Richmond were extremely rude and unfeeling. Oh, to shame of it! I know it will get into all the papers— my brother's widow!"

"What's happened to Miss Sophia?" cried Dolly in alarm.

"The worst!" Mrs. Stokes sastred her tragically. "The wretched woman has eloped with an ordinary policeman—named Jennings!"

"But surely, there's some mistake —" Tom began.

"There's no mistake," Mrs. Stokes cut him off with a return of her aggressive manner. "Look at this letter she left behind in my pillow—in a second-rate romance and at her age too!"

"I'm afraid," said Tom gently, — "there's nothing to be done."

After a season of tears she was gone, and peace reigned in her wake. Tom filled his pipe contentedly, and recently at prospectuses and maps of the West. "The note said a friend advised her to follow the dictates of her heart. I wonder who the friend."

"I said 'head' not 'heart' Tom," Dolly explained. "But the poor dear was so upset—and now I'm glad she's going to be happy."

Tom took the pipe from his mouth to glare severely into the blue eyes of his wife. "I had a hunch," he began, then smiled and sat down beside her, drew her close. "Now we've just how you happened to stick a finger in the pie," he said.

"Well, it was this way," Dolly began. "I was actually thinking all the time about 'Ye Green Teapot.'"

HER PAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Villaer, P.E.I., Sept. 22 — (Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. These boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Healing and strengthening them. Strong healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

Brutal Beating Concludes "Ride"

St. Thomas, Sept. 25—A battered and bloody face, discolored eyes and clothes hanging in tatters were the evidence offered by A. Ray, Wilson, aged 40, of this city, in support of a sensational story that he had been "taken for a ride" in true Chicago style.

The brutal beating to which Wilson's condition bore testimony, and his startling tale of an attack made as punishment for his having illegedly "squealed" to the police in a recent court case, sent Chief Constable Ryerson and provincial police on an investigation which resulted in the arrest of four men on charges of assault and causing actual bodily harm.

Those arrested were: Bob and Ted McQuire, St. Thomas, Kenneth Vincent of Union, and George Anderson a London taxicab driver. They will appear for trial on Friday.

Wilson, a railwayman, told the police that the four accused had invited him into their automobile, and had driven him to London, where they met some girls and purchased liquor. At midnight, he said, they proceeded into the country west of St. Thomas, where at a secluded point they set upon him, beating him and kicking him cruelly in the face and body. One of his assailants, he added had even tried to gouge out his eyes.

Wilson is recovering from his injuries under medical attention.

Laymen Conduct Mid-week Service

Last evening in Bridge street Church the regular mid-week service was presided over by Mr. P. B. Deacon the recording secretary in the absence of the pastor Dr. Bell, who is at Toronto this week attending the annual theological conference of the alumni of Victoria University and Emmanuel College.

Missionary matters formed the theme last evening. Mr. Deacon pointed out how missionary enterprise had been the forerunner of the founding of the British Empire.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman reported upon the recent conference of laymen at Albert College.

Judge Deroche gave some impressions as a representative in attendance at the conference. Of the 1900 home mission stations of the United Church in Canada 400 have recently been established and 500 became self-supporting since union took effect. In the foreign work in Japan over 100 places austain themselves independent of outside financial help.

Principal Bishop of Albert College also addressed the gathering upon the problem of interesting the membership of the church in maintaining the great task of missionary support. The past few days Principal Bishop has been attending the General Council held in London, Ont.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1930

THIRTY FOUR FREIGHT CARS IN HUGE CARGO

Huge Shipment of 400,000 Bottles of Liquor to French Islands

SAILS AT SUNSET

Tonight a priceless cargo will leave Belleville shortly after sundown. There is no particular reason why it should leave just after sundown but it just happened that way. It is a precious cargo, at least to thousands in Bermuda, St. Pierre and Miquelon Island and other points on the Atlantic Coast.

The good ship Myrtle, manned by a husky crew of Newfoundland sailors, will lift anchor from the Government docks, its hold stowed to the brim with the products of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company.

Four hundred thousand briskly smart bottles containing amber liquid compose the shipment. It is the choicest stock from "the Corbyville Hotel." Employees have been working overtime for the past two weeks to get the order out. It required thirty-four thousand cases and thirty-four freight cars to transport the cargo from the plant to the dock.

Forty-eight of Belleville's unemployed have been given jobs during the past three days stowing the liquor away aboard ship. The top layer will be dropped off at St. Pierre, a French colony at the mouth of the St. Lawrence while the balance will go to relieve parched throats in Bermuda. The big steel vessel will reach its destination in about ten days.

Ten and twelve casks were removed from the freight cars to the boat with each load and occasionally a case was precipitated into space and landed with a crash. The odour left no doubt as to the contents. These were laid aside, a record taken and replacements made. - The Belnuggs, a Norwegian craft, will arrive next week for another load for the same destination.

Two Plead Guilty to Operating Still

Peterboro' Sept. 27.—The first charge against Bruce Freeburn of assisting in the operation of a still at Rogers Creek on Sept. 4 was dismissed Friday by Police Magistrate O. A. Lang ley, Creighton Freeburn, a son and a cousin of the pleaded guilty on two accounts of operating a still, and the former to two charges of illegal sale. They were arrested by Provincial Police on September 4 and again on Sept. 12, after they had been let out on bail on the first charge, when Royal Canadian Mounted Police, disguised as tourists, caught them in the act of operating another still on Rogers Lake. Evidence was reserved until other charges pending are concluded.

O n second charge against Bruce Freeburn, heard this afternoon, judgment was reserved.

"This was the largest still I have seen in my eleven years experience in the south work," Reeve Officer W. H. Butler said in describing the operations.

40 Injured When Bleachers Settle

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 27.—At least 40 persons were injured when a portion of the bleacher stands, containing 2,500 spectators at a high school football game, collapsed last night.

The game was between Columbus Central High School and Youngstown Chaney.

Ambulances and doctors were rushed to the scene. A number of the victims were taken to hospitals.

The stands collapsed just as the first half of the game ended. Although first estimates placed the injured at 40, it was believed that the list might reach 75.

BLASTING IN CREEK DISTURBS SLEEPERS

Residents of Wooler were awakened from their slumbers by a dull detonation which startled the inhabitants of the village and caused some of them to wonder if a miniature earth quake had taken place. However, on investigation the truth was ascertained and it was found that the noise was caused through workmen blasting stones in the creek bed.

War Memorial Plan Is Considered By Special Committee

Mr John Elliott is Named Chairman of General Commitee

DISCUSS PROJECT

Views of Citizens will be Incorporated in Report

General apathy was shown last night, when only a mere handful of citizens, sixteen in number, turned out for the organization meeting to consider erecting a memorial in this city to the glorious dead from this city in the Great War. Nevertheless something was accomplished, that will eventually lead to the erection of a memorial, by the election of a general chairman, John Elliott, a secretary, Fred Chamberlain, treasurer, Alderman Harold Armstrong, and a committee composed of Mayor Reid and T. T. Webster. This executive will in the near future interview prominent citizens of the city and get from them their views on the subject and if enough interest is created another public meeting will be called. If the same apathy is shown as was shown last night, the committee will cease their labors and Belleville will be numbered among those cities, which are few, which failed to memorialize their dead.

Mayor Reid in opening the meeting explained the purpose and stated that probably the lamentable weather had much to do with the small attendance, which in reality should be no excuse, "It is strange there is not more interest taken in this matter as there is only a mere handful gathered here tonight and the citizens are not looking for the opinion from as serious a standpoint as they should for a city of nearly 14,000 people," said the Mayor. I think a general chairman should be appointed and on motion of Ald. Woodley and Kinneer, Mr. Elliott was given unanimously this responsible position.

"As small as the meeting is," said Mr. Elliott in accepting the chairmanship, "a start should be made to raise a fund in memory of the men, who discharged their duty to their country and their creed to offer the supreme sacrifice. I am a citizen of this city. It is of interest to men, who have returned, and should be to every citizen who was not privileged to answer the call. It is a long time since 1918 and the memorial should have been proceeded with long ago. I would not say that the citizens were unmindful of their obligation and many believe that the Great War Veterans' Memorial Hall was the only memorial that would be erected. Every town of any importance in Canada has a war memorial and we are not a little bit ashamed of our position here in Belleville without one?" After appointing the committee the meeting adjourned.

GERMAN WOMAN DIRIGIBLE PILOT

Frau Thomas (above) has obtained from the German Ministry of Commerce her license as a pilot of small dirigibles at Berlin, Germany. She is the first woman to obtain such a license. The qualifying tests are very strict and thorough, but she passed them with honors.

Major Sills Dies

Major John H. Sills of Trenton, died in Birmingham, Michigan, on Friday night. The funeral will take place on arrival of noon train at Trenton on Monday, going direct to Belleville Cemetery by motor.

Major J. H. Sills a native of Prankford was a son of the late E. O. Sills, former M.P.P., one time owner of Rathbun Paper Mills and other industries there. He was a graduate of R.M.C., was adjutant of the old 49th battalion and served overseas with the 21st battalion C.E.F., won the D.S.O. on the field. He is survived by his widow, Constance Weller and three sisters, Miss J. O. Sills and Miss Muriel of Toronto and Mrs. Hamilton of Winnipeg.

WELLS WINS CASE

TORONTO, Sept 27—CP—Mr. Justice Raney today dismissed the action brought by Miss Florence Deeks, Toronto, claiming $600,000 damages from H. G. Wells, British author and from McMillan Publishing Company. Plaintiff alleged Mr. Wells had used a manuscript of her work "The Web" in preparing his "Outline of History".

JONES THREE UP

Ardmore, Penn., Sept. 27.—CP—Bobby Jones bidding for his "grand slam" in golf, won three up on Gene Homans, of Englewood, N.J., today after nine holes of their thirty-six hole match for United States amateur championship.

RAIN STOPS GAME

Barrie, Sept. 27 — Rain halted the first game of the O.B.A.A. interfinal-ite finals between Barrie and Milton in the first of the second inning here yesterday. Neither team had scored and the game was called when the bases had been loaded with one man out. The teams will play at Milton Wednesday.

MIDGET GOLF CLUBS UNDER SOCIETIES ACT

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept 27. — To free themselves from Sunday restriction three Vancouver miniature golf courses have been granted incorporation under the Societies' Act and play cers will register and pay green fees as they do in big clubs.

"Orders" Will Drive Modern Don Juans off Dark Roads and Lanes

The modern Don Juan and gay Lothario must be on his best behaviour these days, or rather nights. The Provincial Police have opened a crusade against parking on side lanes, concession roads and even in pasture fields. "It's orders from headquarters", they assert, "and we have been informed that parking minus lights on side-roads must cease".

The campaign opened on Thursday night and a rushing business resulted Twelve couples were disturbed and they did not welcome the intrusion either. Pretty young damsels who had been casting romantic admiring glances at their love-lorn swains a few minutes previous registered ignominy and surprise when the police flashed their lights into the car.

The authorities were insistent on searching the cars for liquor and while some of the owners protested vigorously, the officers carried out their plans.

The ultimatum carries weight and the police mean business. The nice bright moonlights nights hold a fascination for most young couples but they simply must not park. "Keep moving" say the police.

STORM RAGING CAUSES NO LOSS IN THESE PARTS

Limb of Tree Falling Carries Down Wires on Coleman Street

CROPS GARNERED

Heavy Downpour Accompanies Electric Discharge

Belleville and district appears to have escaped with the minimum amount of damage in the severe storm which swept over this area early last evening. The Bell Telephone reports some minor trouble on Coleman St. but it was of little consequence and was soon repaired. The wires were torn down when the limb of a tree crashed when the pole was at its height. Farmers state that the crops have practically all been harvested with the exception of corn which is being cut now. The silos are being filled now. Reports from Rossmore state that shutters were ripped loose from some of the cottages at that point. The storm was at its worst about ten minutes after which the rain subsided although the wind continued with intensive fury. It was reported that a house was struck by lightning near Massassaga but the Ontario Intelligencer was unable to get confirmation for the rumor.

Explorer Anxious About Ill Wife

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 27—CP—Major T. L. Burwash who in his flights in Northwest Territories discovered relics of the ill-fated Franklin expedition, arrived in Ottawa today. He was more anxious to receive word from the hospital of his ill wife, than to discuss his work—find He will make his official report to Government.

Canadian Gladioli Show Here Aug. 1931

Belleville secures the Canadian Gladioli Society show for August 1931.

This announcement was made today by Mrs. George Bonisteel, of this city, a director of the society. This is the first occasion on which the show has chosen Belleville for the exhibition and there is real opportunity to enter in three classes, the open, the amateur and the novice class. There is an extensive prize list which provides an opportunity for every grower.

Belleville and St. Thomas had a strenuous battle for the choice of the location of the next show, Belleville winning out on the efforts of Mrs. Bonisteel and other members of the executive backed up by invitations of the City Council, the Parks Board and the Horticultural Society. "Never before have I felt that the time was ripe to invite the society to Belleville for the annual show," Mrs. Bonisteel told the Ontario Intelligencer today. "But now I feel that we in Belleville are justified in inviting the society here."

Belleville has many growers of gladioli and there is a possibility of a large number competing in the Dominion show, the date of which is to be set.

Mr. W. C. Glaspell of Galt, is president and Mrs. Marshall of Hamilton, is secretary of the society.

Lake Michigan Went Mad Gulping Down Lives With Boats

Coastguards Stand by, Baffled by Angry Waters of Lake

TWO-MASTER SUNK

Eight Members Believed to Have Lost Lives on Salvor

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (CP) — Lake Michigan went mad yesterday, raging and pounding upon its eastern shores, gulping down two boats, probably three and taking an unknown yet, number of lives. The storm-tossed barge Salvor sank off Muskegon, Mich. with coastguards standing by, baffled to rescue by the angry waters.

The two-master "Our Son" sank twenty miles off Ludington, Mich. The steel-hulled motor carrier North Shore, Milwaukee, bound from Bellon Harbour, Mich., with a cargo of grapes was many hours overdue this morning.

Eight men were believed to have lost their lives in the sinking of the Salvor. Two bodies were washed ashore late yesterday. Three men, lashed to a derrick which projected above the water after the barge had gone down, could hardly have withstood the smashing waves.

Eight coastguardsmen who set out from Ludington to go to the rescue of "Our Son" and for whom fears were expressed last night returned to port by morning.

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 27 (CP) — No men believed alive were taken from the wreckage of the barge Salvor by coastguards today.

ATHLETICS 7 TO 3 FAVORITES

New York, Sept. 27— The Philadelphia Athletics were quoted 7 to 5 favorites to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals in the world series by J. A. Pried and Co., Wall Street betting commissioners. The Athletics also were quoted 7 to 5 favorites to win the first game.

Announces Regulations Governing Goods Contracted Before Sept. 16

Ernest Geen, collector in charge of Inland Revenues for this port, handed to The Ontario Intelligencer today a circular received from Ottawa, respecting imported goods contracted for prior to September 16th and cleared from customs on or before November 30. The circular states that the regulations prescribed by the Minister of National Revenue shall not apply to goods imported on or before the 30th day of November, when such goods have been bona fide contracted for and purchased in the country of export prior to the 16th day of September. Documentary proof of the bona fide purchase by contract of the goods shall be required in all cases.

The following is as follows —1st copy of original purchase order attested to by affidavit of importer; 2nd acceptance thereof by the exporter prior to the 16th day of September. No purchase order will be accepted under this regulation as bona fide, which does not specify definite quantity or quantities with definite price or prices and provide for delivery in Canada on or before 30th day of November.

THANKSGIVING DAY MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—Following Friday's Cabinet meeting it was announced that Thanksgiving Day and Armistice Day in this year will be observed on Monday, November 10. The usual proclamation declaring that date will appear in the next issue of the Canada Gazette.

No Relief Money to be Used on Dominion Airport in Sidney

W. E. Tummon M.P., and Ald. O. H. French of this city spent some time at the Air Camp in Sidney yesterday and the former states that action will be on a minor scale for the balance of the autumn. Mr. Tummon says that no part of the twenty million dollars which was allotted by the Government to take care of the unemployment a tuation will be devoted to the camp as it does not classify under the heading of Public Works toward which the whole sum will be directed. "We must wait for another session of Parliament when a further appropriation will be made for the Camp", he observed.

Ald French has suggested that application be made immediately through the Provincial Government for a part of the twenty million appropriation public works in Belleville. Ald. French contends that sewers can be dug during the winter and if even at increased cost, the unemployment will be relieved by the assistance from the government. Mr. Tummon informed city Aldermen that prospects are bright for an allocation from the government of a new upper bridge. Mr. Tummon has already conferred with the Minister of Labor who has looked with favor on the request. The Quinte construction will be completed with the work at the camp with a small staff. The steel for the construction work at the camp has arrived.

Wheels Broken and Windshield Smashed, Top Crushed in

LIES IN HOSPITAL

Fear Entertained He May Lose Arm Result of Cuts

J. Heffernan, Prince Edward County, sustained serious injury and is now confined in the Belleville General Hospital the result of an automobile accident a short distance north of Honeywell's Corners on the Tweed County Highway late yesterday afternoon. The man received a deep gash on the right arm get and there is a possibility of his losing the member as the ligaments and arteries were cut by the flying glass. He also received blow on the head that rendered him partially unconscious. It is believed that Heffernan's car was out of control to skirt the ditch for a distance of 111 feet before coming to rest against a fence post. The car was completely wrecked, two hind wheels being broken, the windshield smashed and the top crushed in. Traffic Officer Byles went to the scene of the accident and Dr. Welsh of Roslin, rendered first aid at the scene and then brought the patient to the Belleville Hospital at the time of the ac dent was driving south on the Tweed Highway and was alone and when help arrived the man was unable to state how the accident happened.

WHEAT TOUCHES 70 1-2 CENTS TODAY

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 27 (CP) — New record low prices for wheat were added to long downward list on the Winnipeg grain market today. Within a few minutes of opening, October wheat slumped to 70 1-3 cents a bushel, a cent below season's previous low mark and lowest October future price since 1908. Other classes showed losses from 7-8 cents to 1 5-8 cents.

Each person in the United States is on the average poorer than a year ago by $132, but about half have $37.50 in cash.

BREAD PRICES

Kingston announces today that some of the grocers in that city are selling bread for eight cents a loaf, although the wholesale price has not been affected. Belleville is still selling bread for ten cents a loaf. One baker for some time has sold his bread for nine cents a loaf, but he is the only one in the city. Other bakeries sell bread at eleven cents.

RUNAWAY GIRL FOUND

Missing from the home of her brother-in-law and sister in Brockville since September 17, an Ottawa girl of 18 years, who has been a resident here since midsummer, was located Thursday in the Wincheste -Chesterville district, and was returned last night by Constable S. Kirby. The girl gave as her reason for running away an aversion of school, and declared that she desired to make her own way in the world. Montreal was her objective. She had hitch-hiked during the days and nights she was absent.

PAINFUL INJURY

While working on construction work on the power development at Bancroft some days ago, Gerald Towle was the victim of a painful accident. In assisting in lowering a stop-log in the dam, another workman accidentally let the brake slip causing the handle on the windless to revolve rapidly and which in turning over struck Gerald a knockout blow in the face.

CORN AT FRANKFORD

One hundred tons of corn are brought to the Canadian Canners at Frankford to be packed each day. This has been the custom ever since the corn crop started to be canned in the village and the plant has been going at full blast since that time with some thirty men and about thirty-five women employed. Mr. Chas. Sloan, the manager of the factory, expects that the corn pack will be concluded in another two or three weeks.

IMPROVE WATER SUPPLY

The Water Tank at Wooler Continuation School is being fixed and the work is under contract to Mr. Jack Stacey of Trenton. Previously the water supply of the school was contained in two large tanks in the basement of the school premises, but this was found to be unsatisfactory, and they were taken out. Spring water now runs continuously into the school taps as a result of the change, says the Trenton Courier Advocate.

BOON TO COMPLETE BRIDGE

Smithfield bridge across the railway tracks will be completed by October 15th. Four east and west spans have been installed, and the centre spans are being put in. The pouring of the floor will be the last work. After this the grade work will start.

MERELY A TIE-UP

There was quite a tie-up for a while on the King's Highway just outside of Trenton limits, Thursday, due to one of the big steam shovels that has been used in the ditching work at the Air Port being removed from the scene of the operations to the Canadian Pacific Railway depot at the bottom of Gilmour Hill for removal elsewhere. On the arrival of Traffic Officer Rose, however, the situation was kept well in hand and the traffic continued running smoothly.

CONVERSATIONAL CLASS RE-OPENED

French Conversation Classes both at the Trenton Collegiate on Monday night, with between fifteen and twenty enrolled. These classes are held under the tutelage of Mr. T. H. Gauthier and Miss Hazel Farley with the classes lasting until Easter. Many of the High School students are availing themselves of this excellent opportunity of bettering their pronunciation and conversational French through these classes.

PAVE MARKET SQUARE

At a special meeting of the Trenton Town Council the question of constructing a pavement from Ridgway street to Dundas street, which takes in the Market Square, came before the attention of the Town Fathers. It was decided that work should start right away and a gang of men are now filling the draining system.

OWNER NOT IDENTIFIED

Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Provincial Police informed the Ontario Intelligencer today that no further developments have resulted following the finding of a shot gun in the Crowe River near Marmora two weeks ago. The general opinion is held that the gun found was the one which shot Jerome Keene aged recluse on Cordova Road in December 1929. The weapon was found mudge downward in the bed of the river and was apparently secretly there. Provincial Officer Grey of Marlboro as well as Inspector Lougheed have covered the ground thoroughly but have uncovered no clues that would lead to the identity of the owner. They will continue their probe.

LOOKING FOR LOST MAN

Provincial Police have received a circular to the effect that Sam Holy has been missing from his home at McKellar village near Parry Sound for some time and his relatives are anxious to learn his whereabouts. The man is described as his being fifty-seven years of age, weight 145 and is of a retiring disposition. He wore a dark grey suit when last seen and was said to have carried a large sum of money.

PROPERTY CHANGES HANDS

It was announced today that Col. Putman who resides on the King's Highway, one mile west of the city, has disposed of his property to H. L. Sullivan of Detroit. The property known as "The Meadows" has been bought several times and Mr. Sullivan found it the most attractive between Windsor and Brockville. The home overlooks the Bay of Quinte and is surrounded by several acres of garded land. The new owner takes possession November 15th. The deal was consummated through J. L. R. Gorman of Belleville Locators.

BOY IS IMPROVING

Master Alvin Geen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Geen, who was injured when a playmate threw an apple which caught Alvin in the temple some days ago, shows improvement. When the accident first occurred grave doubts were held for the little fellow's recovery and friends will be glad to learn of the change in his condition.

CHEESE TAKEN

Peter O. Murray of Thurlow township elected summary trial and pleaded guilty to stealing a cheese from the brick of Earl Morgan on September 8th last. As the Crown was not ready to proceed the man was remanded for sentence until Wednesday. Another man was summoned to court on a charge of receiving stolen property knowing same to have been stolen. When the charge was read his counsel R. E. Arnott stated that the client would not elect at this time and was remanded until Wednesday for trial. Bail was requested for Murray and his father placed a bond of $200.00 n court for his appearance for sentence.

TO-DAY'S CHEESE BOARD

Cheese sold on the Belleville Cheese Board on Trade today at 15 3-16 and 15 1-8 cents.

INJURED AT WORK

Samuel Poirier, who has been employed for several days at the Government dock in assisting to load the cargo from the Consolidated Distillers to the vessel Myrtis which will push off for St. Pierre tonight, was injured late yesterday afternoon when he fell from a trestle. His ankle and elbow were badly bruised. The injured man was treated at Dr. Robertson's office and later removed to his home. He will be laid up for a short time.

Hangar Steel Arrives At Air Base Camp

Steel has arrived at the Curtiss camp in Sidney and work on erecting the hangar has started.

The John T. Hepburn Company of Toronto, have been awarded the contract for this part of the work and the superintendent of steel construction is on the job supervising the raising of the main steel pole, which will be the main bands for the supports. It's Toronto men, who are fully experienced in steel construction, and four local men are engaged in this end of the work which should easily take three weeks to fabricate.

Digging, ditching and grading compose the rest of the work on the great flat plain, that is now the air base, with some twenty-seven men employed by the Quinte Construction Company of Toronto, who have charge of the grading operations. This does not count the men with the trucks, says Trenton Courier-Advocate.

Wing Commander Kenny, Squadron Leader Edwards and Major D. Barry, chief engineer of the Department of National Defense at Ottawa were at the Trenton Air Camp on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week inspecting the sea plane base which is situated on the site of what was formerly Cottage Hill. These three prominent men in aeronautics are part of the Development Committee looking after the operations in connection with the government work. At the present time the sea plane base is only in its infancy and no real steps have yet been taken as to its completion. The channel between the mainland and the island,—a short space from the shore, is under discussion as to whether it is wide enough for the purpose in view. The purpose of this visit was to study the conditions surrounding the ground and water conditions for the taking off and landing of sea planes.

MISSIONARY BAND RALLY AT MADOC

The annual mission band rally of the Kingston Presbyterial was held in St. Peter's Church, Madoc, on Saturday, September 20th. Delegates were present from the Presbyterian Churches in Belleville, Burnbrae, Stirling, Tweed and Madoc, 65 registered.

The sessions, presided over by Mrs. W. H. Jenkins the Presbyterial Secretary of Mission Bands, were opened at eleven o'clock by devotional exercises led by the Secretary Minister Band

Screendom's Ace Assassins' of Sorrow

The Four Marx Brothers, famed Merry Mad slars of "The Cocoanuts", voted the funniest picture of 1929, are back again sweeping Belleville with fresh galcs of laughter, in their second Bomb-Shell of Joy, "ANIMAL CRACKERS", at Belle Theatre, Today, Monday and Tuesday. Matinee Daily, with Rudy Vallee in "The Stein Song", and Paramount News.

of Madoc. Encouraging reports of the different bands were then read, followed by a recitation by Nancy Mollard of Madoc.

At noon, lunch was served by the ladies of St. Peter's Church. In the afternoon, the Stirling Mission Band conducted the devotional exercises, followed by an address of welcome heartily given by Frances Blue and nicely replied to by a member of Stirling Band. After a delightful solo by Alice Rogers of Tweed, Mrs. J. A. Seymour of Madoc read a message from Mrs. George A. Reid, the Presbyterial President in which she expressed her regret at not being able to be present and conveying her good wishes and words of encouragement to the Mission Bands This was followed by a piano duet by Nancy and Florence Holland of Madoc. Mrs. Seymour then told the children a very interesting story about the hymn "Jesus Shits Us Shine", which should inspire each to do the work in his or her "small corner." Miss Freda Matthews of Stirling and a student in the Deaconess Training School in Toronto, delighted all with a story, teaching that Jesus loves the children of all races and colours. Rev. Mr. Marshall welcomed the rally to St. Peter's and made an appeal for Christ-like deeds, after which the Madoc Miss on Band sang a sweet little song. "When the children sleep".

In her secretary's report, Mrs. Jenkins told that the financial objective of the Mission Banda was the furnishing of the M. C. Abey Memorial Nursing Home for Children in the Bhil District in India, made possible by a generous gift from Mrs. Abey of Brandon, Manitoba. The sum of $330.56 was raised by the Bands of Kingston Presbyterial in 1929

The Banner of Merit was presented to the Burnbrae Mission Band. Betty Nicol Madoc, led in the offertory prayer and Helen Whytock thanked all who helped make the Rally such a success.

EMBLEM CLUB'S FIRST MEETING

The "Emblem Club" of the local Y. M.C.A. held its first meeting of the Fall and Winter season last night. The Emblem Club is an inner group of the Y.M.C.A. whose chief concern is the securing and instructing of new members. The organization is international in its scope and is in operation in the majority of the associations throughout the United States and Canada.

The chair last evening was occupied by Mr. Elmer Walter, chairman of the Membership Committee of the Belleville "Y". There were some twenty new members enrolled, into membership and presented with their initial pins. Eleven members were awarded the pins for securing five new members and five were awarded the ten pin emblem for securing ten members or over. The secretary outlined to the new members the objects of the organization. Mr. Alex Gordon favored with a number of musical selections. The election of officers resulted as olloys:

President—Mr. Frank Hitchon.
Vice-Pres.—Miss Violet Hobson.
Secretary—Jack Murphy.
Club Pianist—Alex. Gordon.

It is planned to hold monthly social gatherings for the reception and making acquainted of new members of the association with the present membership.

Light refreshments were served at the end of the business meeting.

The Anaemic Girl

Who Has Lost Her Charm and Beauty

"She seems to be losing her looks." This remark is often heard about girls who are in a low state of health. Sparkling eyes, their rosy cheeks and clear vitality. The cause is not far to seek—they have become anaemic; that accounts for the pallor and the lines of charm. The anaemic girl, if she neglects her health, may be a sufferer all her life.

Take heed, you pale, anaemic girls. Plenty of fresh air, nourishing food and rest will help you, but what you need most is good blood. Those wretched headaches, that fickle appetite, and those terrible heart palpitations can only be banished if the blood is rich, red and pure.

Good blood—the kind that brings good health is created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The whole vitality of these Pills is to build rich, red, health-giving blood. The Pills are sold by dealers in medicine or by mail, 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OBITUARY

MRS. BELLA M. BRYANT

Bella May Brezie, beloved wife of Mr. Harry Bryant, of Lonsdale, passed away last evening at her home. She was born in Lonsdale 55 years ago and lived all her life in that section. Mrs. Bryant was a member of the United Church. She leaves her husband, her mother and two brothers and four sisters. Funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon.

LINDON EUGENE HEPPARD

The funeral of Lindon Eugene Heppard, six months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Heppard took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Bleecker avenue, Rev. C. E. Clarke officiating. Interment was made in Sagonne Cemetery.

REGULAR BAPTISTS SECURE NEW HALL

The regular Baptist Church has secured the hall now occupied by the Plymouth Brethren on Front street, opposite the Upper Bridge. They hope to open the new building on October 5th. Rev. W. S. Atkinson of Toronto, will be the special speaker on that date.

Library Corner

On Monday, September 29th, a reference department will be opened on the second floor of the Glenn Public Library. Here will be assembled all the reference volumes in the library, together with maps, government pamphlets, miscellaneous pamphlets, clippings and pictures. The room is in the northeast corner of the building and is located sufficiently from the rest of the library to insure quietness for research work. The Saturday Night, Mail and Empire and Toronto Star will be kept on file for one month. Back numbers of these papers may be consulted on application to an assistant of the Library. We will endeavour to supply information on any topic and to answer questions submitted. New reference volumes will be added from time to time and it is to be hoped that shortly we will be able to supply reference service to the city relative to its population and size. A few of the volumes which are now on our shelves and may be consulted are: The Encyclopaedia Britannica, Nelson's Encyclopaedia, The World Book, The Canadian Annual Review, Canada Yearbook, Canadian Almanac, Official Postal Guide, The Statutes of Canada and Ontario, Census Reports and Debates of the House of Commons, The Statesman's yearbook, Who's Who, Who's Who in Canada, Canadian Men and Women of the Times, Writers' Register of American Manufacturers, Dyke's Automobile and Gasoline Engine Cyclopaedia, Bailey's Cyclopaedia of Horticulture, Chamber's Cyclopaedia of English Literature, Drinkwater's Outline of Literature, The Book of History, The Canadian Readers' Guide, Haydon's Dictionary of dates, The Times History of the War and Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable. An interesting set of books recently added is Lands and People, published by the Grolier Society under the general editorship of Dr. Bruce Taylor of Queen's University. The seven volumes are beautifully illustrated in colour and include a special survey of the League of Nations by Graham Spry.

The library is rather low in historical material relating to Belleville and the district. Any donations of this nature and also early Canadiana will be very gratefully accepted.

It is useless hoping for the best unless you are also working for it.

WEDDINGS

PURDY — MEPHAM

IRELAND — McCLAREN

A very interesting and pretty double wedding took place at Trenton, Ireland, Blake Lake, situated in Hastings County, on Saturday, August 9th, when Florence McClaren, daughter of Mrs. McClaren of Tyler, Penna., became the bride of Mr. George E. Ireland of Tyler, Penna., and Mr. Arthur Ireland, formerly of Trenton, now of Rochester, N.Y.

The bride looked charming wearing a gown of powdrr blue crepe with baize hose, shoes and hat to match. She carried a shower bouquet of American Poppies.

At the same time Jessie Emily Mepham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mepham of 17 Appleton Ave., Toronto, became the bride of Mr. Lorne William Purdy, also of Toronto. Her bride was beautifully gowned in sea foam crepe, gunmetal shoes and hose, and black hat. She also carried a beautiful bouquet of American Poppies.

Rev. Harold B. Neal of Belleville, officiated. The ceremony was performed on the veranda of Dr. Ireland's summer cottage overlooking the beautiful waters and wooded shores of Bass Lake.

The bridal couples were attended by Mrs. Gertrude McMullen of Belleville and Mr. Murphy of Bass Lake. A very sumptuous luncheon was served on the veranda.

The guests were Mrs. McClaren, of Tyler, Penn., Mrs. Gertrude McMullen of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Merrill of Rochester, Mr. Murphy and William Ireland.

In the evening a huge bon fire was lit on the island, when several of the campers gathered in honor of the happy couples. Among the friends were Dr. and Dr. Lilly Matheson and Mrs. Boyington of Toronto and Mr. Adams of Algoma.

An interesting feature of the wedding is that Dr. Ireland and Mr. Purdy were formerly Trenton boys, who have been life long friends, first at school in Trenton and later at Toronto graduating about the same time in medicine and pharmacy. Dr. Ireland has spent his summers at Bass Lake since early childhood. His father was one of the first to build a cottage there nearly thirty years ago. Dr. Ireland recently spent a year in Japan.

MACHOLD — SCHWARTZ

The wedding took place, quietly, at Christ Church, Saturday, September 27th, 1930, of Kathryn Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Schwartz, of this city, to Mr. Ernest Machold, of Belleville, son of Mrs. T. Machold, of Copenhagen, Denmark. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Clarke.

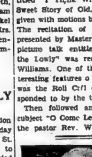
Mrs. J. T. McPherson, of Glace Bay, N.S., stationed at Belleville nearly forty years ago, known as Emaley Bennett, will be the special speaker.

Trinity Y. P. S. Hold Meeting



Meadow, Sept. 27 (By Mail)—Trinity Church Y. P. S. held their weekly meeting on Monday evening with a good attendance, Mr. C. R. Johnson presided during the opening devotional exercises which included the singing of several hymns and prayer by Mrs. Lorne Lesson. Scripture Lesson read by Myrtle Kellar. The vacancies of the executive caused by removal of members were filled. Miss Mildred Brodmore was appointed fourth vice-president and Mr. Raymond Baker, treasurer.

Miss Mildred Vice-President, Mrs. Hulin, then took charge of the program. Vocal duets by Misses Thurston Love and Clarice Dafoe. Jean Wood took the collection and a piano solo by Mr. Dafoe were well received. The latest news from the foreign mission fields was brought by Missionaries to the General Council now meeting in London was given by Mrs. Rivers. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

S. S. Rally Was Complete Success

Cannifton, Sept. 27 (By Mail)—Cannifton United Church held a very successful Sunday School Rally on Sunday evening, Sept. 21st at 7.30 p.m. A large congregation assembled to join in the special service. Miss Rebecca Bird, the Sunday School Supt., led with the special form of service. "The opening number a musical production was rendered by Master Ted Waite. Other choruses were given one by the junior members of the school, entitled "Listen, to the Voice of Jesus". Another by the Trail Ranger class, entitled "be a Hero." Solos were very nicely rendered by Master Jack Thompson, entitled "Jesus Loves Little Child Like Me," the other entitled "I'd Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old" was very nicely given with motions by Miss Neta Bush. The recitation of the evening was presented by Master Elmer Shorey. A picture was exhibited "Jesus Among the Lowly" was read by Miss Doris Williams. One of the special and interesting features of the Rally Service was the Roll Call of each class, responded to by the teachers.

Then followed an address on the subject "O Come Let Us Worship," by the pastor Rev. W. R. Merrick.

No one can deny the importance of having the hair arranged in the style best suited to the individual type. Much of the effect is lost, however, unless the hair is kept soft, shining and lustrous.

A million busy women and girls know the easiest way to keep the hair in perfect condition is with Danderine. One drop application will show you how marvellously it removes the dull, lifeless appearance, gives it life, makes it sparkle with new life and lustre. It's so simple to use. Danderine. All you do is put a little on your brush each time you arrange your hair! The combined use of Danderine will dissolve the worst crust of dandruff; soothe, heal the scalp; stimulate the growth of long, silky abundant hair.

Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It makes the hair easy to manage; holds it in place for hours. "Set" your waves with it and see how much longer they stay in.

PLAIN FRENCH DRESSING

To make a plain French dressing, use three times as much oil as vinegar, with salt and pepper to taste. Six tablespoonfuls of oil and two of vinegar with a half a teaspoonful of salt, and an eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, will dress a salad for six people.

The dressing is made by putting all the ingredients together in a bowl and beating them with a fork or egg-beater until blended. When left to stand the oil will rise to the top and will apparently separate, but this will not affect the dressing. It may be beaten over and used to the last drop.

When used in large quantities an efficient plan will be found in measuring into a mason jar a cupful and a half of the oil, half a cupful of vinegar, three tablespoonfuls of salt and a half teaspoonful of pepper. A vigorous shaking will prepare it for use as needed.

(Recipes will appear under this heading each day. You are invited to contribute your favorites.)

E. L. SARGENT GIVEN WATCH

Bell Telephone Company Honors Former Employee

A tangible token of esteem in which Everett L. Sargent, a former employee of the Bell Telephone is held by the company, was expressed last night in the local office when Mayor George A. Reid on behalf of the executive of the company presented the young man with a solid gold watch and chain. O. W. Proctor, District General Master, A. Drew District Plant Superintendent, P. Dagger, Inspector of Telephone Systems under the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, along with the plant chief of this district, Hall Doolittle, and many employees were present at the function. Everett Sargent will be remembered as having been presented with a certificate of merit in the early part of the year for risking his own life in saving the life of a fellowworkman on the Provincial Highway east of the city one year ago in July.

Mr. Drew was chairman of the gathering and introduced Mayor Worship stated that some time ago he was ask ed to present a certificate of merit to Mr. Sargent, when he heard his life in saving the life of another and although he has severed his connection with the Bell Telephone Company, the company itself wishes to show their appreciation of his heroism and to wish him every success in his new calling. The company regrets that it was not in a privilege in asking you to make this presentation on behalf of the company.

Mayor Reid thanked all for the honor conferred upon him and stated it was a double honor as he once before had the privilege of presenting a certificate of merit. "It has been ta'd in some quarters," said Mayor Reid, "that companies have no soul, that they go on just the same and every employee is just a cog in the wheel that turns the huge machinery but in this case Sargent has left the company and still they are recognizing the act of bravery he performed, while in their employ. This watch has been done each hold good. Th's act is showing to the employees of the Bell Telephone that the company recognizes the highest and slightest ideal of every man."

"It is fine," continued His Worship, "to see boys staying with one company for many years and are missed when they drop out. To you who are assembled I can say that the Bell Telephone is watching you all along the way and probably have your interest at heart more than you have yourself. I now have much pleasure in presenting this beautiful watch to you and we hope you carry this instrument of time may fi make your life roll on happily to a successful conclusion."

The recipient of the watch briefly expressed his grateful thanks and hoped some day to again be numbered among the boys of the Bell Telephone. Mr. Dagger and Mr. Proctor spoke briefly and the meeting was adjourned with everyone present congratulating the young man on his splendid gift.

Crying Babies Are Sickly Babies

The well child does not cry—it is only the sickly baby who cries. The well child is laughing and happy, baby's cry of distress is his way of telling the mother or nurse that he is in trouble. If your baby cries do not delay in looking for the trouble.

Baby's Own Tablets are a safe and efficient remedy for childhood ailments. They are a mild but thorough laxative which through their action on the stomach and bowels banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote healthful sleep. THE STRADIVARIUS

In a quite recent year of grief, said events precarious
There came to light, by fancy chance, a genuine Stradivarius.
The tidings straightway were broadcast by telegraph and,
And everybody talked of it from duchess down to maid.
A royal museum housed, of course, the valuable treasure,
And Joachim wished to use the fiddle and its bow.
The blasphemer was silenced by a most indignant "No."

When Food Sours

Sweeten the stomach—instantly

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomach. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggists.

JONES TO MEET EUGENE HOMANS

Great Golfers in Finals for American Amateur Today

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 27—Twenty-two-year-old Eugene Vanderpole Homans stages one of the most sensational come-backs of golf tournament history yesterday to win and earn the distinction of playing the great Bobby Jones today for the amateur championship of the United States. Five down after the first 18 holes, three down at the twenty-seventh and still two down with four to go, Homans, with a display of sheer grit belied by his frail, studious appearance, won three of the last four holes to beat 18-year-old Charley Lever of Los Angeles, one up, on the thirty-sixth and last green.

Homans' dramatic victory in the semi-finals followed the triumphant onward sweep of Jones, who crushed an old rival, Jess Sweetser of New York, by the lopsided margin of 9 up and 8 to go in the Georgian's most convincing victory of the tournament.

As a result of two matches that scorched with great golf and thrilled galleries of upwards of 5,000 spectators Homans is the only barrier between Jones and a fourth national championship triumph for the year, a clean sweep that would leave King Bobby with no more worlds to conquer and a record that modern generations may never see equalled.

If there was anyone who did not anticipate that Jones would complete his marvelous march of conquest, perhaps including Homans himself, he could not be located, for the Georgian uncorked a brand of golf yesterday that was as nearly unbeatable as anything can be in this sport.

Jones Plays Sub-Par Golf

Jones, despite a bad streak of gun midway in hi morning round, had Old Man Par at his mercy as well at the blond, good-natured lad also outclassed Sweetser, nowhere near the golfer who overwhelmed Jones eight years ago by 8 and 7 at Brookline. The great Georgian was 4 up on Sweetser at the end of the morning round and he shot dazzling golf in the afternoon to end the match on the twenty-eighth green.

Them, as a climax, he almost holed out his pitch from 90 yards, the ball stopping 10 inches from the cup for the third Jones' birdie in four straight holes.

The finalists have met once, in the second round at Minnekahda in 1927, when Jones was the victor over Homans by the count of 3 and 2. Despite his 22 years, Homans has had plenty of golf tournament experience and he gets the fighting courage he manifested yesterday from his father, Shep Homans, famous as a fullback with the Princeton football teams from 1899 to 1902. This is his fifth amateur championship and the fourth in which he has qualified, but never before had he advanced beyond the second round.

The first break of the match in Homans' favor came at the 22nd hole in the afternoon round. The second and really decisive break came at the 30th, where Homans squared the match. Going to the 32nd, young Gene was five down and apparently going nowhere. On this tricky 425-yard hole, he drove to the rough and put his second in a trap while Sweet was getting the way and well on in two. Homans studied his shot carefully then took a newly devised niblick with a concave face and came out perfectly, the ball catching a sidecliff roll and stopping two feet from the cup. It was dead for a four and Homans won the hole when Sweet took three putts.

SEASONED HANDS IN THE OUTFIELD

George Watkins of St. Louis is One Stranger to Series

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 — Only one of the outfielders likely to start world's series games is a stranger to the baseball classic. George Watkins, right fielder of the Cardinals, is playing his first season of Major league ball. The other members of the set-up, Al. Simmons, George (Mule) Haas and Edmund (Chick) Hafey, of the A's, Charles (Chick) Hafey, and Taylor Douthit of the Cards, have smelled powder, before.

Hafey and Douthit will particularly welcome an opportunity to improve upon their past performances. Neither contributed much hitting in the 1926 series, won by the Cardinals from the Yankees.

In the ill-fated St. Louis series of 1928 Hafey hit only .200 and Douthit's performance at bat was so impotent he was benched.

Distinguished Stars

On the other hand, Simmons, Haas and Miller all distinguished themselves in the last series. Simmons' hitting was hard and timely and he scored the winning run of the final game on a double by Miller. Haas tied the score in the ninth with a home run. Simmons' work this year has been even better than that of 1929, and he is the outstanding performer of all the outfielders on the two clubs. His batting average of .378 places him near the top of the American League ranking list and he is an accomplished fielder.

Hafey, troubled for a time with a recurrent eye affliction, was again in his stride in the closing days of the National League and played an important part in the late drive of the Cards. His batting average of .340 is good enough.

Douthit is given the highest praise by his fellow-players can bestow when they say he can "go get 'em." Haas, a rival, has had a comparatively poor year and has been out with injuries. The two centre fielders average about the same in hitting, a few points under .300.

The hitting of Watkins has been a feature of the National League race. The Rochester recruit, conceded only an outside chance in the Spring to force his way into the outfield line-

Today's The Day!

By K.C.W.

Today's the big day in local rugby circles. Both local teams, Albert College and R.C.I. officially open the season today. Albert is at home to the Trenton Collegiate and R.C.I. left at noon today for Napanee where both Junior and senior teams will battle for supremacy.

* * *

Albert College may have a weak team this year but its said that "Red" Jackson, of Gananoque, one of last year's stars, is going to start after all today. If he does—Trenton will have to fight pretty hard to win. If he doesn't, the westerners will get a good break—that's all.

* * *

As far as the Collegiate goes, Coach Shiels is taking one of the smappiest looking teams in years to Napanee with him. In the past two or three years R.C.I. hasn't looked so smart on the field. This year the boys have their dander up and claim they are going to make the rest of the league set up and take notice.

* * *

St. Denis, Metti and Symes are popularly slated by Collegiate fans to be the main offensive today. Jack Graves absolutely is never-dead, either. Whether Champaigne can educate that toe of his to work in a game as well as it does in practise remains to be seen. We hope he can.

* * *

Albert has nothing to fear in this respect. Mel Thompson seems to be up, has batted .363.

Miller Has Experience

Miller, the A's right fielder, is a veteran, making up in consistency anything he may lack in brilliance. Over a stretch of nine years in the American League he has a batting average of .322.

The Cardinals reserves are more numerous. George Fisher, who joined the club from the International League by way of the Giants, has batted .374. Ray Blades, who doubled as a player and coach, is still a great player and Ernest Orsatti holds himself in readiness for outfield or infield emergency calls.

The A's have in reserve the veteran Homer Summa and Jim Moore, a recruit from Texas, who got under the wire just in time to be eligible for the series.

STREET LEADS IN WAR AND BALL

Twelve Years Ago the St. Louis Leader was in Thick of Battle

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27 — Twelve years ago last night a tall, slim sergeant of the first gas regiment was in the midst of the Argonne drive, ordering his company to lay down smoke barrages for the 138th St. Louis infantry.

That man, Charles "Gabby" Street, completed laying another perfect smoke screen last night and the St. Louis Cardinals were safe behind it with the National League pennant secure in their grasp after one of the most uphill fights ever staged in major leagues.

"Gabby" Street, hero of the hour in St. Louis and recognized miracle man of the 1930 baseball season saw his team go out and defeat the hard hitting Pittsburg Pirates in a slugging bee yesterday 10 to 5, to clinch the pennant.

boosting them just as far as ever, if not farther. If Jackson does the same thing Albert may get a nasty surprise. The remainder of Albert's back field are dark horses. They haven't been seen in action yet.

At noon today there was quite a sizable collection of cars gathered at the collegiate in preparation for the trip to Napanee. There should be some supporters on hand for a change.

* * *

Rugby is just like any other sport. It has to have support, and college-astic support, or a team doesn't seem to have the pep to go on.

* * *

Albert College has demonstrated this in past years. Although there are not a great number of students attending each and every one of them would rather lose a finger than fail to turn up at a game. Maybe that's the reason they have done so well. It might help to pull them through again this year.

* * *

The Collegiate, during past seasons, has shown really fine school spirit. The girls and boys would rather go to a picture show on Saturday afternoon than attend a game and cheer their team along. It would be great, Here's hoping matters are rectified this year.

Well, today's the day. It helps a lot to win the first game of the season, too.

Imbibed suddenly with an overwhelming amount of confidence and sheer ability backing it, the Cardinals rose from a mediocre aggregation of ball players on August 19th to sweep through their opponents and rise from ten games behind first place to the championship in a little more than a month.

Estimated Giants

Frankie Frisch, second baseman, and one of the leaders in the pennant drive, believes it was the sudden realization that the New York Giants were a bunch of dubs, and had no business strutting around as if they were going to win the pennant."

Anyway, on the 20th of August, the Cardinals defeated the Giants here 8 to 4, to halve the series and from that times on they have won 30 games and lost but five. On that day Jim Bottomley, who had been mopping around first base and Frisch who was playing far from the great game he is capable of, suddenly came to life. The pitchers followed suit and the hard hitting outfielders found their stride.

Before that game with the Giants, the Cardinals had played but half at home, but disastrous ball on the road. Then came one of the greatest parades since Sir Isaac "Miracle Man" of the Boston Braves of 1914, led his club to a pennant.

The Cards took fire straight here from Philadelphia, went on a short road trip, took two from Cincinnati and split even in four games with the Chicago Cubs. Two more victories from Pittsburg and then home for four straight from Cincinnati.

Face Tough Road Trip

By that time the pennant race had become a four-sided affair. Brooklyn had slumped, Chicago and New York were fighting it out and the Cardinals were close behind. What discouraged St. Louis fans most was that the Cardinals faced a 15-game road trip.

But when the Cardinals arrived home here Wednesday night they had behind them 12 victories on the road and three defeats and they were in first place, Brooklyn and New York had faded from the pennant picture and only the Chicago Cubs endangered. Now, should the Cards drop their last two games and Chicago win theirs from Cincinnati the standing would be

IN MEMORIAM

GOODFELLOW—In loving memory of William Goodfellow, who died September 27th, 1929.
This day brings back a memory Of a sad day long to rest.
And those who think of him today Are those who loved him best.

Folks may think that we have forgotten him
When at times they see us smile But they little know the heart ache That our smiles hide all the while.

The flowers we placed upon his grave May wither and decay But He'll be true to him who sleeps below
Until we meet again.

ALCOHOL AND PROSPERITY

Ninth of Series of Articles by A. H. Lyle, Field Superintendent, Royal Templars of Temperance

Science teaches that even so-called moderate drinking shortens the life span by from ten to thirteen years, and so we must conclude that such a practice is not a good economic investment. Today, it is difficult for a drinker to secure a job in a "big business" plant, and much more difficult to retain the job if he is lucky enough to secure one.

RULE "G"

Gigantic firms like the Ford Motor Co. refuse to hire a man who drinks, however moderate his habits are, and scores of other manufacturers have adopted the same conditions of employment. Rule "G" which prohibits railway employees from drinking whether on or off duty, has made the American Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Fireman the largest total abstinence in America.

AN EXILE

The drunkard finds himself an exile so far as employment in concerned, and the moderate user of alcoholic beverages is but becoming a monkey-wrench in the wheels of industry. In our own city, one of our leading industrial plants has just installed a machine costing $28,000 at one end of which the square plates of iron are fed in, and without being again touched by human hands turns out the completed can—a car load of them each day. Is it reasonable to expect that such a machine is going to be placed in the care of a man with an alcohol soaked brain.

Penalizes and Prematurely Aged Through Drink

THE OLD TEAMSTER

A decade ago, the products of agriculture and of commercial and industrial enterprises were driven by teams and teamsters. A few drinks did not materially endanger the produce or driver because the faithful animals were sober and able to keep to the beaten track. Today thousands of motor trucks are carrying a tonnage that was unthought of in the old days and the intrinsic value of both truck and freight are such today that a tipsy driver would be a tremendous menace.

THE ANCIENT IDEA

Away back in 1840 an abstainer had difficulty in securing life insurance. The records of an English company show that an abstainer who applied for insurance was looked upon as a sub-normal risk, and in one case where insurance was granted the premium was increased 10 per cent. because the applicant "repudiated the good things of God as found in alcoholic drinks."

Life insurance companies today look upon a man who drinks as a poor risk and such a man is able to secure protection only on conditions much more stringent than those imposed upon the abstainer. As far back as 1914 at a convention of presidents, medical directors and actuaries of 43 life insurance companies, the chairman in his report classed "moderate drinkers as decidedly unsafe and exhibiting a higher mortality than total abstainers."

NO PROSPERITY

Thus we see that looking at it from a collective point of view, prosperity could hardly knock at the door of the moderate drinker today, if looked at from the standpoint of the individual we see, too, that he only stands to lose by lowering his mental and physical well-being by a glass or two each day. Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, medical director, Life Extension Institute, speaking on the question, says: "I firmly believe that its greatest menace to society is in its so-called moderate use, which, among the great mass of people who use it daily, but in so-called moderation, results in diverting these people from other resources of upbuilding and constructive character. How much latent capacity for achievement, for adjustment, for business, social, scientific and artistic success has been unrealized and suppressed throughout a whole lifetime by alcohol, we shall never know, but we know enough about its influence to be sure that it has thus maimed and crippled many millions of lives."

Further it is a fact, too obvious to require to be enlarged upon, that money spent for liquor cannot be used for the purchase of the necessities required in the household. If a man of moderate income spends all of his earnings on booze, it usually follows that wife and children have to be satisfied with fewer clothes and shoes, poorer food, less entertainment and have to forego many comforts in the home that might otherwise have been provided.

CAUSES WANT

How many families were deprived of comforts they had a right to expect? How many families suffered hardship and privation because the huge sum of $57,000,000 was spent for alcoholic beverages in Ontario last year? How many men are actually out of employment at the present time because the $57,000,000 were diverted from other legitimate business enterprises, creating a lessened demand for their products, which in turn produced a condition where employees had to be laid off because of this decreased demand for the products of these industries.

BECOMES A MENACE

Total abstinence will soon be recognized as a necessary condition of life in the man or woman who expects to succeed, for as Professor Charles Reiteli, of the University of Pittsburgh says: "Alcohol attacking as it does the nervous system, thus becomes a menace to mechanism-industry. A menace, first, because it lowers and endangers the productive power and organization of our industrial establishments; second, because it increases error on the part of workers which in machine industry means great losses to life and property."

Seven Lives Lost in Gales on Lake

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 27— Seven persons were believed drowned and six were saved as the barge Ralvor went down in a gale on Lake Michigan off Muskegon yesterday afternoon. The top of a derrick on the sunken barge is still visible above the water.

Those believed drowned include six members of the crew and a 9-year-old boy, son of a woman deckhand.

Last night two bodies had been washed ashore, and six members of the crew were in a hospital here in an exhausted condition. Just before darkness fell two others could be seen lashed to the derrick on the barge.

The gale was increasing in intensity and had foiled all efforts to get a line to the wreck, over which waves were dashing, and little hope was held for recovery alive of the two men. Among those saved were two women.

Quick action saves trouble, worry. Keep Douglas Egyptian Liniment always handy. Stops bleeding instantly. Cauterizes wounds. Quickly relieves the cree were in a hospital here in Barber's Itch and Ringworm.

SONIA

By Vida Hurst

"Very well, I shan't say any more."

"If you knew," she said pensively, "how all my life I've longed for beauty and color. How I've loathed the untidiness of our poor little house, littered with scraps from my mother's dressmaking. How happy it makes me to wake up in the morning to harmony knowing that I am free to live my own life. Oh, can't you see?"

"I can, indeed," he replied. "You will proceed to burn your fingers and nothing in the world can stop you. Shall we dance again?"

He held her lightly, easily smiling down in her face. But Sonia gave no answering smile. She was hurt, and a little uneasy.

Why shouldn't she room with Maxine? And what did he mean, burn her fingers?

"At any rate," she said as they resumed their places at the table, they are my fingers."

"They are," he agreed soberly. "And you are privileged to burn there as much as you like."

There was a twinkle in his eyes. 'I might even be prevailed upon to help you, Sonia."

But Sonia was angry.

"I think you are wrong about Maxine," she insisted. And about a great many other things too—"

"All right; granted! You see I refuse to quarrel".

Something in his tone hurt. He had not spoken thus earlier in the evening. Something seemed missing in his treatment of her. Was it his respect? Sonia wondered. Perhaps his cavalier remarks had hurt his pride.

"I didn't intend to be cross," she said penitently. "I was going to be sweet to you this evening. Have you forgotten?"

"I couldn't forget." His voice was caressing now, but yet not the same. "I shall never forget thepicture you made tonight when we came in. Your eyes flashed like jewels."

Sonia's face lighted. Here was the thing she craved. Admiration, praise She could never have enough of them.

But when he attempted to kiss her good-night at Maxine's door she averted her face.

"No!"

"No!"

"You will forgive me" to assist in the absorbing of the little fingers?" Her voice was edged with pain.

"Don't joke about it!"

"I won't, Sonia, please kiss me, just once?"

"I can't, I'm sorry."

The image of Franklin Crane had flashed between them, like a flame, shaming her.

Sonia was awake early the morning of her engagement with Franklin Crane. She stretched her slender body luxuriously. It was glorious to know that she was young and attractive—to have an evening with the only man who had ever stirred her pulses but twelve hours away. She lay beside Maxine, limp with excitement.

"Youth was the gift of the gods," Walter Henderson had said. She could believe that today. Not for all the emeralds in the world would she exchange hers. She was free—free—free! Captain of her own soul!

"Each man's fate is bound about his own neck." Where had she read that? But it wasn't true! She was tied by no laws of God or man. She would follow her fate as she desired, choosing according to temperament only the beautiful and exquisite adventures. Nothing low or ugly!

"You have too much pride to be vulgar," Don had said. She liked to hear men say things like that. It showed they had been thinking about her. But none of them really understood the real Sonia. Sometimes she didn't herself. Don had come nearest. She wondered about him now, whether he would come to Chicago. Not that it mattered greatly. Nothing mattered but Franklin Crane. All thoughts led back to him. Blue eyes, sweet, beguiling mouth, like a young boy's. His charm intoxicated her.

She could have sung over her housekeeping. Life was so entrancing. But it was not more than nine o'clock when she heard Maxine repeating her name, "Sonia, Sonia? Yes, indeed—Sonia." Looking up she saw the smiling, half-tearful face of her father peering anxiously from the top of the stairs. She ran to him.

"Daddy!"

"My little girl!"

"When did you come? Where's mother?"

"Mother didn't come. But I couldn't stay any longer to see you."

She had dragged him inside from desk to desk.

"This is my father."

The girl greeted him with curtsey, but warmly. He was so evidently just what he was—a shabby, bashful little man whose one great joy was Sonia.

Seeing him through their eyes brought a lump to Sonia's throat. A great wave of affection swept her, a desire to protect him from the realties of a world that had always been too stern for him.

"Now, dad you sit right down here and wait until noon. Or would you rather go out and see the sights?"

"I'll go out and look around, I guess. I'll come back at noon."

Maxine came up to them. Her blue eyes were shining with sympathy. "Sonia, would you like to have the afternoon off? I think I can arrange it for you."

Not until then did Sonia dare put the question that was thundering in her mind.

"Are you staying over to-night, dad?"

His face beamed.

"Yes, Sid Owens gave me two days off. I thought that was pretty fine of him."

Sonia's heart sank. Her eyes met Maxine's guilty. Would she have to break her engagement with Franklin Crane? Or tell a distinct lie to her father? Maxine might be able to suggest something for him to do without her. His blue eyes were wistful her desertion.

"You hadn't planned to do anything this evening?"

Now was her chance. But she could not say it, could not bear to see disappointment cloud his watery eyes. Angry at her own weakness and his, he said so much, she answered brusquely:

"Certainly not, dad. Run along I'll see you this evening."

INSTALLMENT IX

"It's a darned shame, kiddie," Maxine said, when Mr. Marsh had left the office. "Can't you get out of it?"

But she had not dreamed that accepting would be so difficult. She went at once to Franklin Crane's desk.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I can't disappoint my father. He's so ridiculously fond of me."

Crane's blue eyes caressed her. She had the feeling of having been kissed intimately.

"It's all right, Sonia. Some other time."

When she came down at noon to meet her father she was horrified to see him standing in the private office of Jed Thomas. She ran to rescue him, but he met with unconcealed.

"I was just telling Mr. Thomas how much mother and I appreciate the way he's looked after you, Sonia."

Jed Thomas, seated at his desk, met her eyes with his customary irreproach able stare.

"We are glad to have been able to give your daughter an opportunity, Mr. Marsh," he replied facetiously.

"Well sir, it's mighty fine of you. We wouldn't have let our girl come just any place to work."

"Dad, please!" cried Sonia.

"What in the world possessed you to go in there?" she asked when they were walking up Dearborn street.

"I thought it would be a nice thing to do, Sonia. Why not?"

She dared not tell him that Jed Thomas had called attention to her since her first day, so she evaded his question by asking about the girls at home.

They entered a small restaurant and Sonia gave the order in a low, forceful voice. She was imitating Walter Henderson. Sam Marsh listened proudly.

"You've become a regular city girl, haven't you, Sonia?"

"I think I always was one under my skin. I certainly seem to belong here more than I ever did at home."

What made her say things like that? Things that made moisture gather in the corners of his eyes. She knew it hurt.

"Oh darling, I don't mean that the way it sounds," she soothed. "You know I was always happy with you and mother."

He brightened instantly.

"Do you remember how you used to run to meet me? I can see you yet, long legs in your plaid stockings, flying down the street. You'd scream a block away, 'Daddy, did you bring me anything?'"

"And you never disappointed me. Samples of breakfast food, tiny cakes of soap, or doll ads and candy."

"Those were the happiest days of my life," he sighed.

In the afternoon she took him to Lincoln park. They watched the seals sleeping on the rocks, fed popcorn to the gulls and sat for a long time in silent companionship, looking out across the lake. At night he went with her to a motion-picture theatre, something he refused to do at home.

The music enthralled him but the morals of the leading lady made him uncomfortable.

"That story was supposed to happen right here in Chicago," he worried. 'I don't like to think of you being in a place as evil as that." With all that wickedness and drinking going on."

"It's no worse than any other city, dad."

"But I hate to think of you living in the midst of such things, honey. Of course, I know you'd never do anything wrong, but it makes me nervous about you."

"You wouldn't be darling. I can always take care of myself."

Next day at noon she shopped for mother, matching samples of material Anna had sent and buying with her own money a neat leather pocket book.

When her father had said good-by, she was surprised to find what a vacancy was left in her heart.

Late that same afternoon she was asked to come to the president's office.

"Miss Marsh," Jed Thomas said, ponderously, "we are raising your salary $5 a week."

"Oh thank you!" breathed Sonia.

"Wait," he continued, "that your discretion will keep you from discussing the matter with any one in your department. That will be all."

Sonia went back to her desk singing inwardly with excitement. But silently! She dared not even whisper to Maxine the news of her mysterious increase in salary.

"Jed Thomas is human after all," she told herself. "He was pleased by the way I looked after dad. And I tried my best to drag poor dad away. I ought to be ashamed."

The knowledge of her secret brought color to her cheeks and made her eyes shine.

Five dollars a week will be $20 more a month," she figured. "I will begin saving for some new clothes."

Her mind was busy with the problem of how many months it would take to save enough for another evening dress. She came back from her reverie to stopping tour to the sound of Bertie's voice.

"Have you even stopped speaking to me Sonia?"

"Don't be foolish, Bertie. You know I haven't."

"You certainly whizzed through the office without seeing me just now." His pale eyes shone with reproach Sonia was penitent.

"I'm sorry. I was just thinking about something else, that's all. This is my busy day, Bertie."

"Every day seems to be busy so far as I'm concerned." He managed to touch her shoulder with one cold hand.

Sonia put down her pencil and leaned back in her chair.

"What's the matter with you, anyway? You look as me like a dying calf every time I come around. I haven't done anything to you that I can think of."

She had chosen her words deliberately, hoping to anger him into leaving her. In spite of her first determination to be kind the touch of his hand had angered her.

"I can't bear him," she shuddered mentally.

"You're regret the way you've treated me! You'll see, my pretty lady! The time will come when you may be glad to accept a favor from even a dying calf."

A shiver of apprehension ran through Sonia's nerves. She should not have antagonized Bertie. She had decided to badly to maintain at least amicable relictions with everyone in the office. But he was always touching her; then in spite of her resolutions, she would lose her head and strike out at him.

"Look here, Bertie," she said again in different tone, "you shouldn't talk like that to me. How can you expect me to like you when you're always getting angry?"

"You try to make me angry don't you?"

Sonia sparred for time.

"Besides all the girls here are watching you. It's awfully embarrassing for you to come up her and jump on me like this."

"Give me a chance to see you away from here, then."

"But why should I? What can you possibly have to say to me?"

"You were glad enough to go out with me when you first came to Chicago."

"I'd be glad enough now. But you spend all the time we're together either criticizing me or my friends."

"I said what I did for your own good. And you'll realize it some day."

"I don't need you for a grand mother, Bertie," she said insolently.

The eyes of every girl in the balcony were fastened upon them. Sonia determined to settle Bertie once and for all.

"I'll meet you at the corner lunch room million room," she said coldly, "and pay for my own lunch. Understand? If you have anything to say you can say it then. I won't have you coming to my desk bothering me."

He was waiting for her when she reached the lunchroom. They sat down at a small table and ordered sandwiches and coffee.

"Now, Bertie," Sonia said sensibly, "I don't want to have you angry with me. You were awfully nice to me when I came and I did appreciate it."

"You did—past tense?"

"I do now. But you can't follow me around quarreling with me. It will get us in bad at the office."

"Who is it you're afraid to have see us? Franklin Crane?"

"I told you before to leave him out of it" she cried furiously. "He has nothing to do with you and me."

"Oh, hasn't he But it's on account of him that you've refused to go out with me again."

"That is isn't, Bertie. It's because you spoke against him as you did. Be kind his back, I don't like gossip."

Bertie's smile was bitter.

"There was no use beating around the bush with me, Sonia, I can read you like a book. I've been crazy about you ever since I met you at Maxine's. And you like me well enough until you saw Crane. You haven't looked at any one else since."

The waiter brought their order, Sonia ate silently. She had begun to doubt her ability to calm Bertie when they had finished she looked at him stonily.

"Do it to be war from now on?"

Ill, pale eyes glittered. He leaned across the table, intuny earnestly.

"Not if you'll be reasonable, Sonia. I admit I've been jealous of Crane, but it's because he's made you treat me differently."

"That isn't true, Bertie. My attitude toward you was just the same until you started nagging at me."

"Then will you forgive me and start all over again?"

"I'll be glad to forgive you—" Sonia hesitated at sight of the fire that leaped into his face.

"But that doesn't mean," she added, "that I'll go out with you. I much prefer that we should be friendly when we are thrown together, but I just don't want to accept anything more from you, Bertie."

"Then your forgiveness doesn't mean a damned thing!"

Sonia rose, taking her check with her

"I was afraid you'd feel that way. But, at least, you must stay away from my desk during business hours."

"You needn't worry," he sneered following her; "you won't be annoyed by my presence anywhere."

In the street they separated. Sonia's heart was heavy as she returned to the office. It was ridiculous to care what Bertie thought or said. But his threats crossed strange fears. A sense of remote disaster hovered over her.

"I must be so silly," she told herself, swinging down Dearborn street. "Bertie can't possibly hurt me. Pooh! If I worry like this at home every time I turn down I'll be a nervous wreck."

As she went through the office she heard Crane's desk and he stopped her.

"Will you stay down for dinner tonight. Just as you are?"

She agreed and went back to her department, but without the joy her first engagement with him had brought. Bertie, in some ridiculous fashion had spoiled it for her.

That night when she and Crane passed through the outer office Bertie met them at the outer door.

"Nighty-night, Bertie," Franklin called to him.

"Good night, Crane," Bertie answered courteously.

His eyes meeting Sonia's, were hate full.

As they left the office and stepped into Dearborn street Crane smiled.

"Poor Bertie seems to be a little off color."

"I wish," Sonia said, seriously, "that you would be more careful around him."

"What do you mean? Sounds like a mystery."

Her eyes clouded with the sense of foreboding Bertie had succeeded in arousing.

"He doesn't like you."

"Nonsense," laughed her companion "But it's true. I'm afraid he'll injure you in some way."

Franklin Crane threw back his head and laughed.

"You silly girl! As if Gertie could hurt anybody! What could he do?"

He slopped, made thoughtful by her downcast face.

"Look here, Sonia has he been talking against me to you?"

Color flooded her cheeks.

"Please, I'm no talebearer."

"Of course you're not. But I can see that he has."

They walked silently, for several blocks.

Then Crane said: "Bertie has always resented my taking time off from the office".

Sonia gasped.

Would he really explain to her the mystery of his privileged absence?

"As a matter of fact," he continued quietly, "I have that sort of an arrangement with Jed. He is an old friend of my family, and it is understood I'm to have time off when I want it. What's it to Bertie? I work on a commission basis."

Sonia said nothing. She was waiting, praying that he would explain himself.

"I told you that my mother is a semi-invalid. There are days at a time when she needs me desperately. And when she does I stay at home."

The fact that he had confided in her and the contrast between his simple explanation and the gossip and interpretation of his absence made Sonia cry:

"Oh, I'm so sorry."

"I see you've heard another version of it."

"Yes, I have," she faltered.

"I don't give a damn what the rest thinks when I'm away. I go not want you to repeat what I have just told you even to defend me. But I do want you to understand that it is the truth. Do you believe me, Sonia?"

She pressed her fingers lightly over his arm.

"You know I do."

He smiled.

"All right then, that's settled. Come, we've talked enough, let us relax on portal and refresh ourselves after the weary day."

Sitting across the table from him, Sonia sighted with pleasure at the sense of well-being he brought her. It made no difference where they ate when she was with him. Steak and "French Fried" were transformed into ambrosia and nectar. He seemed to share her delight. They smiled at each other in complete comradeship.

Lingering over coffee and cigarettes Sonia talked to him more freely than she had ever custom. She made him see her drab existence as a schoolgirl; her longing for beauty and color. She found that she agreed with her at every point. There was no friction. Their minds seemed in harmony as their bodies had been in dancing.

"I have never known any one who felt as I do about all these things," Sonia said shyly

She felt that for the first time in her life she had held her soul up to her hand for another to see. The old reservations which she concealed so jealously from all men she wished to bring proudly to the light for Franklin Crane.

"I suppose people have always told you how different you are from other girls?"

ONE GOOD RESULT

One good result of the unemployment in England is said to be the demand for reading. Publishers are noticing greater demand for books. People content themselves with home and a book. The publishers expect a still greater boom during the fall and winter months, and many firms brought out their autumn list much earlier. More than twenty new books a day are appearing in London, a rate which it is said will increase as the season advances. Fiction leads, but political memoirs and biography are in high favor. There is a big demand for serious books indicating that the unemployed are reading not only for amusement and entertainment but for information.

PHELPS ON GOLF

A golf story that promises to become a classic in the annals of the ancient Scotch pastime, is told by Professor William Lyon Phelps in the September "Rotarian," under the facetious caption "Thirty Years Looking Up."

A professorial friend growing bold, one day challenged Mr. Phelps to a 36-hole match, offering, if he was defeated, to eat and swallow "Tennyson's poem 'Crossing the Bar'."

"Why," comments Professor Phelps, "he selected this particular lyric I cannot say, except that it is a poem of death.

"Well, I defeated him; he left town immediately. But learning his address, I sent him a mutilated copy of Tennyson's complete works, where many passages had been cut out, but where 'Crossing the Bar' remained. It was a copy from I had cut extracts to use on examination papers. I sent a letter with the volume, telling him he must eat his poem, and that the other missing poems had been eaten by other persons whom I had defeated.

"He now has Tennyson in his system; for I'm a good sportsman, he did eat and swallow and somehow digest 'Crossing the Bar,' sending me an affidavit signed by President Paul Moody, of Middlebury College, son of the famous evangelist."

EDUCATION OR DOWRY

According to the New York Times U. S. girls looks more for an education than a dowry, quoting Miss R. Le Clere Phillips who says that they would rather have the education which their parents can provide them than the money that education would cost. They and their parents are repelled by the idea of a suitor who has one eye on daughter's charms and the other on her money. The Times goes on to say—

"Miss Phillips has a Yankee answer to this question of the objection to a man's living on his wife's money. She wants to know why it is un-American to seek a wife with a little ready money, but perfectly innocuous to marry a girl who is going to keep on with her job because any idea of marriage would be quite impossible if she did not. The Anglo-Saxon standard has slipped to the extent of admitting under its folds a couple of million men whose wives contribute to the household expenses from money they earn. But they would not be so acceptable to society if they and their homes were subsidized by a dowry.

"A father who reads Miss Phillip's article may easily be convinced that money is a better buffer against the world than an education for his daughter. But he will have a hard time convincing her. If he is in earnest about it, he must try to find some of the women whom the writer mentions as having used the method now in favor. The dowerless, college-educated woman has been with us long enough to be able to give an account of the system as she found it. The cases cited are most depressing, but no young girl who reads them will ever believe that such destiny is in store for her. Her father is bound to leave her some money anyhow, and she does not think of it as an "old-age pension." She hardly thinks of it at all. She has youth and ambition and her education, and she is going to have a husband and a home and a career too. All the statistics in the world cannot convince her that she has been educated for spinsterhood. And when her bright eyes light on the man for her, she knows that her lack of a dowry will not save him from marrying."

WHERE ROMANCE DWELLS

By Aline Michaelis

"Tell me, Romance,
Where do you dwell,
Down what far ways
Comes your bright spell?
Drifts it from warm,
Exotic lands,
Or where calm seas
Kiss shining sands?

Long have I sought
Your fair domain,
Where blisses bloom
And no joys wane."

"Ah, would you tread
Those happy ways
Where love and beauty
Grace the days?

"Then," smiles Romance,
"I dwell, in truth,
In but one spot,
The heart of Youth!"

WHAT THE LION OF JUDAH WILL WEAR

THE LATEST affirmation of the ancient truth that the sweetest grass is on the other side of the fence comes from Ras Tafari, formerly Regent of Abyssinia, or Ethiopia, and soon to be crowned as Negus Negusti, or King of Kings, Emperor and Lion of Judah. In preparation for the ceremony Bond Street tailors are now at work fashioning lion skins into headdresses for the new monarch and twelve of his highest dignitaries. English armorers have manufactured several hundred bronze swords for the same august occasion.

Whatever might be said for English tailoring in the matter of sport tweeds and formal worsteds, one would imagine that, when it comes to fashioning lions' manes and fangs into awe-inspiring headdresses, Abyssinian native talent ought to have the edge. Brazen swords that shall gleam Etie gold in the sunlight are more easily imagined as being forged by turbaned blacksmiths crouching over charcoal fires in the bazaars of Addis Abeba rather than by automatic machinery in Sheffield. But the Lion of Judah in his Ethiopian fastnesses has heard and bowed to the dictates of British fashions.

Thus it goes. Civilized man in Great Britain and the United States has latterly developed an enormous admiration for the primitive sculpture and weaving of the Congo, for Negro music, for Negro dance, and a well-dressed Emperor of Ethiopia must have his lions' pelts show the cachet of Bond Street.

"I wish you both joy," said an old minister as he gazed at the beaming faces of the young couple he had just united. "You're getting to the end of all your troubles now," he added encouragingly to the bridegroom. A few months later the old minister met the young man. "You look somewhat miserable, my friend," said he. "Well I might!" came the answer. "I thought you told me in the church that I had got to the end of all my troubles." "Ah, so I did," said the minister, "but I did not say which end!"

Q.—What is the correct position when seated at the table?

A.—The figure should be erect, but not rigid, elbows off the table, feet firmly placed on the floor, and the left hand in the lap when it is not engaged.

Q.—Are hats worn at a wedding reception?

A.—Yes, because it follows a religious service.

Q.—Is it good form for a girl to talk about the money her escort spent after an evening's entertainment?

A.—No; it is very ill-bred.

500,000 Volt X-Ray Tube Is Developed

Schenectady Sept. 26—A 500,000 volt X-ray tube, more than twice as powerful as the tube now being used in X-ray therapy has been developed by Dr. W. D. Coolidge, associate director of the research laboratory of the General Electric Company, it was announced here by Ellis L. Manning, physicist of the laboratory.

This increase in voltage and penetrating power of the X-ray tube was made possible by a system of "cascading" or placing tubes end to end, an arrangement devised by Dr. Coolidge two years ago in his work with high-voltage cathode-ray tubes. In his talk, in which he reviewed the development of modern X-ray generating apparatus, Mr. Manning not only announced that X-rays at a half-million volts had been attained in the General Electric laboratory, but he also stated that another X-ray tube is now being developed there by Dr. Coolidge to operate at 800,000 volts.

The 500,000-volt X-ray tube is built in two sections. In Dr. Coolidge's previous work in cathode-ray tube development it was found that tubes would be built for very high voltages by the use of a cascade system, and that by this method there appeared to be no limit to the voltage which could be used. The X-ray target replaces the "window" of the cathode-ray tube so that, instead of cathode rays being emitted by the tube through such a window, X-rays of exceedingly high penetrability are generated by the impact of the electrons (or cathode rays) on the target.

The highest-voltage Coolidge X-ray tubes used commercially at the present time are of 200,000 volts peak capacity, and are of two types — water-cooled and air-cooled, Mr. Manning explained. Both are used largely for X-ray therapy, and the air-cooled type has been used to considerable advantage in industrial applications of X-rays since the high voltage gives the necessary penetration required for examining the heavier metal objects. Industrially, higher voltages would permit radiography of thicker metals, and shorten times of exposures.

Dr. Coolidge also spoke of this new tube tonight during the course of the Caldwell lecture he delivered before the annual convention of the American Roentgen Ray Society of West Baden Springs, Indiana.

Now Possible to Talk to Machine

Schenectady, Sept. 26—It is now possible to "telephone" to a machine, tell it just what you want it to do, and have it inform you that it is obeying your instructions. Moreover a particular machine will respond to its own "telephone number."

This is the newest method of so-called remote control operation of automatic electrical equipment. It has been perfected by engineers of the General Electric Company under the technical name of "audible selector supervisory equipment."

The human operator, who may be located miles away, dials a number on a dial exactly similar to that used on a telephone. The number dialed is a code which designates a certain unit of equipment that the operator desires to put to work. Audio frequency impulses are immediately transmitted to electric switches, known as "selector switches," located in the district sub-station.

These take a position corresponding to the number dialed, so that they will control the particular unit designated and no other. At the same time they start a code-sending device which repeats back to the operator the number dialed, through what is known as a "hearer" located beside the operator's desk. The operator thus knows that the switches are ready to control the exact piece of equipment he has in mind.

He then dials the signal to start the machine, whereupon the control devices perform this function and send back a signal, through the hearer, informing him that the unit is running. If he dials to stop the unit, it stops and informs him of the fact. The "voice" of the machine through the hearer, when it wants to tell the operator "all right I'm running," is pitched in a certain tone. When it stops running it sends a signal in a tone of a different pitch.

Under the previous method the operator moved switch handles which started the remote equipment, and the resulting action of the distant units was indicated by signal lamps.

EXONERATE DRIVER OF CAR WHICH CAUSED DEATH OF RAWDON BOY

Inquest Into Death of Roy Barron Was Conducted

Rawdon, Sept. 26.—The inquest into the death of the late Roy Douglas Barron was held last Monday evening until coroner Dr. H. Alger presiding and the crown was represented by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. Others present were Mr. Harry Potter and son Grant, R. Brownridge, John Barron, Constable Silvester and the jurors.

Following is the verdict brought in by the foreman, Sam Elliott.

"We, the jury empanelled to enquire concerning the death of Roy Douglas Barron, find that he came to his death on the 10th day of September, 1930 while being conveyed from the township of Rawdon to Belleville General Hospital as the result of injuries received when struck by a motor car driven by Harry Potter at the intersection of the Kingsway No. 14 and the fourth concession road in the township of Rawdon, when the said Roy Douglas Barron, while riding his bicycle entered on the highway from the west. We find no blame whatever to Mr. Potter in connection with the death of Roy Douglas Barron."

One of our popular boys in the person of Mr. Frank Hubble who has been residing in Detroit since he returned from overseas was joined in wedlock to Miss Jessie Adeline McKay of Windsor on Saturday afternoon, September 6th at 4 o'clock. The wedding service was in the First Presbyterian Church, Chatham, with Rev. Dr. Larkin officiating.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and palms and the guest pews were marked with white daisies. The ushers were the bride's brother, Mr. George McKay of Detroit and Mr. Edward Clancey of Windsor.

Mr. J. L. Challinor presided at the organ and Miss Jean Hutchinson, cousin of the bride sang "At Dawning" while the register was signed.

The bride looked charming in a princess frock of satin with floor length skirt. Her veil was arranged chapeau style with pearl beads and real lace. She carried white roses and bridal wreath. The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law Harvey McKay of Chatham and she is an only daughter.

The two flower girls, Barbara Terry of Detroit and Ivy Tamon of Windsor looked winsome in frocks of pale yellow silk net with tiered skirts and satin sashes and they carried baskets of orchid and yellow flowers.

The brides attendant was Miss Eva Conley of Detroit, maid of honor who wore a rose taupe frock of lace and net and carried yellow mums. Miss Mildred Bower of Detroit was bridesmaid and was attired in peach net with hat and shoes of a deeper shade. Mr. Frank Terry was the groom's assistant.

Directly after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Ralleigh street and Mrs. McKay wore black georgette with embroidery, a black velvet hat and corsage of sweet peas.

Six of the bride's friends served the buffet, Misses Mrs. Gladys Lamon, Mrs. Fay Little, Miss Hazel Hall, Miss Patricia Primeau, Miss Maybelle Fleming and Mrs. Leslie Lamon, all of Windsor.

The groom's gifts to the maid of honor and bridesmaid were imported French Beauvais bags, to the soloist a string of crystals and to the flower girls, Sterling Silver Chain and Lockets.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubble left by motor for Rawdon and they spent a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hubble and his brother, Mr. and Mrs. Will Hubble, Mount Pleasant. They then proceeded to Montreal, Quebec and Portland, Maine. On their return they will reside in Detroit. The bride travelled in a green covet cloth suit with accessories to match in a darker shade. Many guests were in attendance and the happy couple received many choice gifts. We extend hearty congratulations and best wishes.

HERPAINFUL BACKACHE QUICKLY RELIEVED

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs M. Campbell suffered for years and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

French Village, P.E.I., Sept. 22 —(Special)—"I was troubled for years with backache" writes Miss M. Campbell, a well known resident of this place. "I had tried several remedies, but they did not help me. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes completely relieved me."

It is statements like this that have built up and maintained the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills hold today, as the old Canadian kidney remedy.

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain the poisonous matter of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys, Healing and strengthening them. Some healthy kidneys are absolutely necessary if the blood is to be pure and the body healthy.

STIRLING

Stirling, Sept. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Martin and Mrs. W. J. Morton attended the anniversary tea meeting at Wellman's on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Hitchon of Belleville sang very acceptably in St. Paul's church on Sunday evening.

Our university students have gone to their various places of education, Dorothy Morton, Irene Bailey, Allen Meiklejohn, Clinton McGee and Grant Thain to Queen's University, Kingston and Ned Potts to McGill University, Montreal.

Mr. Charles Dracup has bought Mr. Clayton Tucker's house and lot at Stirling and will take possession in November.

St. Paul's League

St. Paul's League met on Monday evening with one hundred and twenty-eight of an attendance. President occupied the chair for the devotional part, which consisted of a couple of hymns, Russell West reading a portion of a Psalm and Mr. Wm. Pitchett leading in prayer. After which Mary Hinds, Duke of the khaki side, took the chair and after singing another hymn, Mrs. Macklin sang very sweetly and softly "Guard While I Sleep." Miss Rich introduced Mr. Crae-Vile, who has been sojourning in Stirling for some six weeks, and who has been doing an extended tour in forty-nine different countries. Mr. Crae-vile chose as his subject India and spoke for an hour in a most interesting way and held the young folk spell-bound. Beginning at Calcutta and following on to Benares the sacred City and the Ganges, spoke of the pilgrimages, many walking on their knees hundreds of miles and hundreds miles to worship in the temples which latter are simply gorgeous beyond description and are richly overlaid with gold, and others set in diamonds, sapphires, rubies and the like, while the worshippers bring their offerings, incidents of all ages, holy men, Mayyars and such, shouting Sakabee. Bakabee, said he, made the mistake of putting his hands in his pockets and hearing one beggar a few coins, he was immediately surrounded and he found it hard to escape, yet these poor beggars give all their givings to the temple services. He described the terrible cruelties inflicted in humiliance before their Deity to the Temple, spoke of meeting with an elephant, the snakes and ones through ignorance or forgetfulness he foolishly pulled a cow's tail at the entrance of a Temple and dearly paid for it as he was brought up for trial on charges of being a British spy and also for desecrating with a sacred animal. He had also ignored the warning not to enter the territory in which he went. He narrowly escaped sentence of death, but was obliged to remain as a member of the tribe and only through the influence of prominent members interceding for him was he released and escorted by six persons out of the territory into safe quarters. He spoke of Kashmir being the most beautiful country through which he has travelled yet paid a great tribute to Stirling and surrounding district. Mr. Crae-vile is a forceful speaker in English although his native tongue is Malyan. Many parental home being Summatra. He left home with the equivalent of thirty-five dollars in his pocket and has never spent a cent in railway fare, but would often walk forty-six miles in a day. He has been seven years and six months in his tour having visited the following countries: Summatra, Borneo, Philippine Islands, Japan, China, French Indo-China, Siam, Malay States, Burma, India, Tibet, Kurdistan, Afghanistan, Persia, Iraq, Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Portugese W. Africa, South Africa, Rhodesia, Tanganyika, Belgian Congo, Uganda, Abyssinia, Sudan, Libya, Morocco, Algeria, Portugal, Spain, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Germany, Russia, England, Scotland, Ireland, Chili, Peru, Equador, Costa Rica, Mexico, United States and Canada.

When he reaches Montreal he will have girdled the world and in a sense glad to be on the homeward stretch though having had a wonderful time and enjoying it. On this way he has kept himself by securing jobs that enabled him to proceed further.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Sine, Jean and Maxine of Peterboro spent the week-end with the former's parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Sine.

Mr. Alex Hume and son of Burnbrae were very successful at Peterboro Fair having won seven first prizes, seven second, six third and five fourth prizes for their Ayrshire Cattle, also the special prize of $15.00 donated by the Grafton Company for best herd of dairy cattle on exhibition, number and quality to be considered.

Mrs. C. W. Thompson underwent a serious operation in Belleville Hospital on Saturday and she latest reports are quite favourable.

Miss Ruth Eggleton is entering Toronto University with her sister Florence.

POST OFFICE AT MOUNTAIN VIEW WILL BE CLOSED

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, Sept. 26—It is learned here that the Post Office at Mountain View is to be closed in the near future and that the present box-holders will be served by a mail carrier leaving Ameliasburg village Post Office. The number of people served by the Mountain View post office is not large. A number of rural post offices were closed in the County during the Liberal regime, but an exception was made in the case of Mt. View.

Dr. A. A. Pile, Canada's oldest practising physician is able to attend to his duties in Ameliasburg district after being confined to Belleville hospital.

North Bay, nere Consecon, where a big fishing colony is located, is being dredged so that a harbor will be formed to give protection to the fishermen's boats. In the past the heavy seas have done much damage to the boats that on the unsheltered shores of the lake. The work is being done by the Dominion Government and the harbor "blanket" will be built later. The fishermen greatly appreciated the new harbor.

A Household Science judging competition will be held at the local Department of Agriculture in the near future to select five county girls who will enjoy a free trip to the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, as guests of the Ontario Government. Previous to this competition, local classes are being held in different parts of the county. Two hundred girls from Ontario will be given this free trip which includes a week at the Provincial Exhibition, meet pays all expenses and a program of sight-seeing, banquets, etc., has been planned.

A Moose Lodge is to be formed here this month.

A Junior Fair in which $200 in cash prizes is being given, will be held in connection with Picton Kiwanis Karnival next month.

Rock Island and Moline Clubs Show Decided Attendance Gains

Rock Island led the Mississippi Valley baseball league in attendance figures, it has been shown in report of President Belden Hill for the recently completed season of 1930. The team played 56 home contests, 32 in the afternoon and 24 at night. The afternoon contests had only 13,000 spectators, or an average of 407 paid admissions per game. The night contests, nine fewer, drew a total paid attendance of more than 20,000, or an average of 840 per game. The night games, then, were nearly two and a half times as popular with the fans as the daylight games. The Rock Island baseball field was lighted early in the season by General Electric illuminating engineers.

Moline, in the same league and also with its field lighted by General Electric floodlights likewise had more than twice as many attendants at its night games. The daytime attendance averaged 353 paid admissions; the night games averaged 756.

The September meeting of the Stone Church W. M. S. was held in the church with 9 members present. Mrs. B. W. Lloyd presided. The meeting opened by singing "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult" after which all repeated the twenty third Psalm, Mrs. B. Lloyd then offered prayer. The secretary then read the minutes of the previous meeting which were adopted. The delegates named to attend the convention in Belleville from the auxiliary were Mrs. J. McPherson and Mrs. C. Holmes. It was decided to have the Belleville Corr. Sec. Mrs. Irvine the next convention to our church. Mrs. E. Phillips gave the devotional topic followed by readings "A Unique Experience," by Mrs. C. Holmes and "Helps for Mission Bands" by Mrs. S. Lloyd. Mrs. E. Bexmith then gave us a chapter in our study book, "The Christ of Every Road," which was much appreciated. The meeting closed by repeating the Watchword.

The Ladies Aid held a business meeting following the W.M.S. to discuss the Jubilee dinner which on Monday, October 20 at 12 o'clock. It was also decided to redecorate the church and have it reopened on that day, October 19th, it being the seventy- fifth anniversary of the erection of Stone Church. Plans were also made to hold a concert the night of the dinner and serve a buffet supper. During the afternoon the dining hall which has recently been built will be dedicated. All former ministers of the circuit and residents of the community are being invited back for the anniversary services on Sunday and dinner Monday. Several formers residents are assisting with the concert.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Sea Magic

Ethel Willis Hewitt

Arthur Grimes, freshly bathed and garbed in the latest word in summer suits, strolled leisurely out of a first class beach front hotel and wended his way towards the Traymore Hotel.

Those Stella Glenn, cooked according to the very latest in feminine apparel, would be waiting for him, lounging on one of those comfortably overstuffed chairs, looking serene and slightly bored—depending on her mood.

Artie quickened his pace.

"Pardon from your home town," howled a dusky son of a warmer clime, directly in Artie's path.

As if a railroad clerk, having saved all the year in order to visit Atlantic City for a week would be likely to waste a dime on his home town paper.

Far from it. Not when he rubbed elbows with that town fifty-one weeks in the year.

Of course this time was spent mostly seeing life from an office desk, but even that hadn't been so difficult since the next desk was occupied by pretty Mary Carter. In fact it had been so agreeable that Artie had all but forfeited his week of magic in lieu of letting the money go toward an engagement ring for Mary.

There had sprung up between them a sort of wordless understanding that had spread around the office, and everything was understood by everybody.

This state of affairs made work a pleasure and while the two working side by side, benefitted, the railroad company suffered. Likewise did the clerks who checked up that department, but they were decent about it, showing that all the world loves a lover.

Despite Artie's intentions as to how to spend his savings to the best advantage, when vacation time came, he was seized with a fearful spell of sea magic. He felt himself drawn irresistibly toward that glittering play ground, where he could live an enchanted life for one whole week.

Older, wiser men would call Artie's kind a fool—squandering his savings in riotous living. Still Artie's fun was the clean kind. He squandered nothing but his bank account. This time the old sea magic had closed in about him with a vim. This Stella person was caught in it too, a part of every glittering day on the beach and the breath of every mysterious, moonlight night.

Artie didn't feel so much of a cad, because he hadn't committed himself to Mary—in so many words. Funny, how he ever imagined he loved her, he thought, as he approached the dazzling Stella. It was his last day and they'd make the most of it.

This they did, stringing every hour together into a golden chain, and the very last, just before midnight, hung like a priceless pendant. They lingered on the beach, close to the water's edge, Artie holding Stella's hand. The moon looked down on them, rather foolishly. In the silver light all thoughts of Mary were forgotten.

"There are things I want to say," he mumbled huskily.

"Better wait till we get back to town. Nobody's responsible for what they say at a time like this." Stella's voice was enchanting.

Artie slipped his arm around her and drew her up against him.

"All right, but they're there to be said. We're only postponing it," he whispered against her ear.

"Yes—it's nice to know they are there." She gave his hand a little squeeze.

The next morning he returned to his home town. Mary had left on her vacation the day before. That was luck—gone to her aunt, in the country. He was to go up for the week end to see her.

But things were different now. Stella would be back in two days. The idea thrilled him so that not even the two pool pile of waybills waiting for his O.K. could knock the edge off the delightful vacation hangover.

He wrote Mary he was unable to get to the country for the week end. That left him free. The hour to meet Stella arrived. He hurried to the station. He remembered how good it was to look back and see Mary's face against the crowd, shining like a rare jewel in a cluttered heap.

She was a sweet little thing, but the thought of seeing Stella there in his everyday world gave him a choked feeling in the throat. There was the roar and rush of the incoming train, then the iron gate slid back and the hole in the wall belched forth a stream of seething humanity.

Artie watched the line. It would be easy to find her, gorgeous little thing, against that drab swarm. But Artie was wrong. He watched, carefully, until the iron gate was closed. His face brown face showed disappointment.

Then, suddenly, a figure loomed up, slim and dark, a figure that might easily have been any one of the hundreds of well dressed women that pass through the station every day. Could this be Stella?

"Oh, hello, Artie." Thought I'd missed you. Let's have a drink, I'm famished." She drew him toward the soda fountain.

And Artie tried desperately to fit the very ordinary young person sitting opposite him sipping limeade, into his dazzling dream of last week. She was sitting in the chair where Mary used to sit when they'd run in for a soda. There was something childish and adorable about the way Mary sipped soda through a straw.

Artie felt all muddled. Stella had lost her background. Away from that sea magic, she was just one of a thousand other women. Now, Mary—Mary didn't need any magic background. Artie wondered if he hadn't been something of a fool. He was wondering, dazedly, what way Mary pen next, when Stella pushed back her chair and got up. He followed her through the exit marked Taxi. Outside, she held out her hand.

"It's been good knowing you, Artie. As for those things waiting to be said. Think 'em over, then say 'em to some other girl."

He felt a pressure of slim fingers in his palm, and she was gone. He ran an unsteady finger around the top edge of his collar and gave a low whistle.

"Fool, I don't deserve it—being caught in a jam with a girl like that, he muttered, hardly realizing his luck. But with the lightness of a man whose death sentence has been suspended he rushed off to the telegraph office and in a wire to Mary, the operator clicked off his relief.

"See you Saturday. Expect me on 2.30 train.

With Love, Artie."

TRACE TITLE TO SCOTCH CHURCH

Use of "Right Reverend" Debated by General Council

London, Ont., Sept. 26—At the meeting of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, yesterday the question of the use of titles, Right Reverend and Very Reverend, by the Moderator of the United Church was referred to the executive on motion of Gershom W. Mason, K.C., of Toronto, seconded by Sam Carter of Guelph.

Rev. James Endicott of Toronto, a former Moderator, pointed out that the titles had no personal value, but involved the status of the Church. The titles came originally from the Church of Scotland, and were inherited by the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Now that the Presbyterian Church was continued in the United Church, he felt that the titles should not be lightly put aside.

Rev. R. McTavish of Saskatoon was strongly opposed to the use of the titles. In a new country like Canada he held it unnecessary and ridiculous to use any distinguishing mark. It looked as though the United Church wanted to be a State Church.

State Church Not Desired

There was no desire to be a State Church, declared Rev. W. T. Gunn of Toronto, but the question did involve the State. His experience as Moderator when visiting England had been that the King required highest church officers to assume the title when attending a State function.

The titles were necessary to the dignity of the United Church, averred Rev. A. Lloyd Smith of Brampton, but they had no personal significance.

In moving that the matter be referred to the Executive of the General Council, Mr. Mason said there were legal complications to the question which should be carefully considered.

He had been a radical all his life, declared Sam Carter, former M.P.P., but he was ever becoming accustomed to the gowns worn by the Moderator and the Secretary, and he agreed that the question should be left to the Executive.

The number of Commissioners to the General Council should be reduced from 420 to 300, argued Hon. R. S. Thornton of Deloraine, Man. It would mean a saving of $12,000 at the next General Council, he declared, and he felt that this money could be used for the work of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund at home and abroad.

Sam Carter urged the Commissioners to remember that enthusiasm stirred up among them might result in large givings throughout the Church. The Church as a whole would be pleased to learn that the General Council had made some reduction in expenditure, said Elmer Davis of Kingston. In his opinion it would stimulate the support of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund.

Hon. Dr. Thornton's motion that representation be reduced was carried by a standing vote. It was suggested that Presbyteries be given one Commissioner for every twenty-seven members, instead of twenty as at present. The method of changing representation was referred to the executive of the General Council.

BEEF EXPORT

The current Live Stock Market Report of the Dominion Department of Agriculture carries an item of more than ordinary interest relating to the resumption of the export cattle trade with Great Britain after a lapse of more than a year. The Manchester Guardian tells the first overseas shipment of 128 head. These cattle were purchased in the Toronto yards and were the type known as Blue Manchester feeders, averaging around 1,100 pounds in weight. Another shipment of some 200 head is now reported as being on its way to England from Alberta for direct slaughter shipment. "This enterprise on the part of the producer, trade and steamship companies should invite a renewal of confidence in the market, and indeed is already having a good moral effect," observes the report.

COVER THE CANES

Much of the annual winter loss to raspberry plants can be avoided by proper care in protecting them from frost. Horticultural experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture advise bending the canes over and covering them with sufficient earth to hold them down. As a two-man job this is easily and quickly done at little labour cost. While one gathers the canes and bends them gently to the ground with a fork the other supplies sufficient earth to hold them firmly to the ground. On the prairies the best results are obtained when the canes are entirely covered with soil; most of the types of covering can be done by horse labour—hence the desirability of having rows about eight feet apart.

VERY LITTLE

In these days when fertilizer is rapidly growing in importance as a plant food in Canada one is inclined to think of Canadian consumption of fertiliser as fairly considerable. Canada is fortunate in that the quality of fertilizers marketed is assured under the provisions of the Fertilizer Act, administered by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. However, a comparison of fertilizer consumption on a world-wide basis places Canada twenty sixth in volume in a list of forty-two fertilizer-using countries wit a net annual consumption of 51,000 tons. Germany using 1,834,000 net tons is the heaviest single consumer, while the United States with 1,448,000 net tons comes second. Great Britain uses 274,000 net tons, while Cuba, at the bottom of the list, uses only 2,500 net tons.

A NATIONAL MARK

The use of a national mark for identifying the quality of meats and farm products in Great Britain is proving very satisfactory states the current report of the British Ministry of Agriculture. The Red and Blue brands on beef are the national marks of quality in Canada. The Beef Grading Service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture establishes the quality of beef and marks it with an official brand for the protection and convenience of the consumer. In buying beef one should order by grade—Choice or Good—and watch for the brand mark—Red or Blue. You will enjoy eating Graded Beef.

British fruits and vegetables are said to retain their flavour better when canned than the produce of any other country.

Hardwood Man Forges to Front W.N. Gilroy's Place in Industry

(Canadian Lumberman)

W. N. Gilroy, of Coe Hill, Ont., who is both a lumberman and general merchant, is widely known through his forest products operations in the central section of Ontario. Born in what is known as Carrying Place, Prince Edward County, he was five years old when the family moved into the northern part of Hastings County where a clearing large enough to build a shanty was made. After making a small homestead, Mr. Gilroy, Sr., passed away when W. N. Gilroy was only thirteen years old. The latter continued on the farm until 1911 when he left and began business for himself. As he had not received any public school education he found it rather difficult to get ahead; however, in spite of handicaps he made progress and nineteen years ago purchased some lumber and poles from the S. L. Purdy Lumber Co. on a commission basis. For the past fourteen years Mr. Gilroy has been operating on his own behalf beginning in a small way, and steadily expanding. First he hired his sawing done and later bought a mill. For the last few seasons he has been cutting quite extensively. In 1928 his output was between two and three million feet of lumber, with about 25,000 railway ties. This year his cut is around four million feet, with some 40,000 ties. A member of the local municipal council for twelve year, Mr. Gilroy for the last five has occupied the position of Reeve. He is a member of the Loyal Orange Lodge and the United Church of Canada, having been superintendent of the Sunday School for eighteen years. He is also a member of the National Hardwood Lumber Association which held its annual convention in Toronto this month.

THIN THEM OUT

Sowing from 6 to 9 pounds per acre of the best grade mangel seed and thinning the plants out to nine inches apart gives the highest yield per acre according to Field Husbandry experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. These deductions were arrived at after a series of studies in planting and thinning carried out over a period of five years.

BEAUTY AND PERFORMANCE FAR BEYOND THE PRICE

in these brilliant Sixes and Eights

You will find it extremely interesting to drive one of the excellent new Willys Sixes or Eights. Their action on the road, on crowded street or steep hill, shows what great engineering progress has been made with lower-priced six and eight cylinder motor cars.

Willys cars reach a speed of well over 70 miles an hour—a speed which is easily and comfortably sustained. In second gear, speed as high as 48 miles an hour assures the sparkling pick-up so necessary in modern traffic conditions.

The engines are rubber insulated against vibration.

Superb riding qualities result from extra long springs and four double-acting hydraulic shock eliminators The internal four-wheel brakes are fully enclosed, protected from dust and moisture.

And only in cars of much higher price would you expect to find such beauty of design and interior luxury. Inspect the new Willys line at the showroom of your nearest Willys-Overland dealer.

Woman Killed Near Halloway In Upset As Axle Collapses

Mrs. Miles O'Neill of Trenton, Returning from Funeral of Brother

RUSHED TO CITY

Others in Car Thrown Out But Escape Serious Injury

When the axle of the car in which she was a passenger, collapsed last night at 11.45, one mile south of Halloway on the Madoc Road, Mrs. Miles O'Neill, 55, of Division Street, Trenton, was fatally injured. She was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, but died before her arrival here. Death is directly attributed to a fractured skull but her body was badly crushed and bruised. An inquest has been ordered by Coroner Dr. Tennent while Provincial Constable Bert Hamner is investigating the fatality.

Her husband and two sons who were in the car escaped with minor injuries although thrown from the wreckage. The car was reduced to a crushed mass of wood and steel. It was towed to the city.

Mr. Miles O'Neill, who is employed by the Timber Products Company of Trenton, speaking with a reporter last night, stated the family were returning from Bancroft village where his brother, Andrew, was buried on Saturday afternoon. Gerald O'Neill, son, was driving the car and Mrs. O'Neill, Sr., was in the front seat while her husband and another son, Bernard, were in the rear. As they rounded a turn one mile south of Halloway, the steering gear failed to respond to the wheel and a cracking noise was heard beneath the car. Mr. O'Neill stated that it sounded as though the axle had broken. Although they were travelling at a moderate rate of speed the driver lost control of the car and it plunged into the ditch on the left side of the road. All in the vicinity were hurled through the top or windows of the sedan. Most of the glass was shattered in the impact.

Another son, Eugene O'Neill was driving directly behind with another party and as he rounded the turn, he saw his automobile with the occupants flying about the grass. He assisted his father and brothers from the scene and his mother, who had ended up was unconscious. He rushed her to Belleville General Hospital and Dr. Ross Wallace was called. Later he arrived the woman was dead.

Dr. R. W. Tennent, coroner, and Constable Hamner were called. The remains were removed to the Tickell and Brown mortuary parlors where a post mortem examination was made.

The late Mrs. O'Neill had lived in Trenton for some years where she was well known. Her death was a shock to the community. She was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and funeral will be made in Trenton cathetery.

Mr. Miles O'Neill was prostrate following the accident as his brother died only on Thursday of last week. None of the other occupants were seriously hurt, although the latter suffered from numerous abrasions while Bernard and Gerald were bruised. They were treated at the hospital.

Besides members of the family already mentioned Mrs. O'Neill is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Stella Flynn of Chicago, Ill., and Mrs. Kathrine Gallagher, of Bird's Creek.

After accepting preliminary evidence into the death of Mrs. Myles O'Neill, who was killed in a motor accident near Holloway late last night, the Jury unpanelled under Dr. R. W. Tennent, Coroner for this county, adjourned today to meet on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock in the police court room.

The jury was composed of Charles L. Wallers, foreman, Charles A. Mott, George A. Bennett, Jesse W. Barton, J. C. Panter, Frank Walshe, E. T. Cherry, Robert Webster and W. A. Woodley. K. C. Denman, Crown Attorney, attended and interrogated the several witnesses.

Sergt. Detective Truaisch, who had charge of empanelling the jury told the enquiry the jurors were qualified to act and that the investigation had not been completed. C. E. Brouse, funeral director, stated to the court he was in custody of the body and by blodds gave evidence of the cause of death stating the woman had received a fracture of the skull. The husband,

These countries have been objecting, it was said, to approval by the assembly of preferential tariff rates in Europe for the European agricultural produce.

Myles O'Neill, gave evidence of identification and after this evidence was given the court adjourned until Wednesday night. The body was later released to the family by order of the Coroner and was taken to Trenton from thence interment will be made.

Britain to Import 66 Per Cent. Wheat from Dominions

New York, Sept. 29. — The New York Times in a London despatch today says the Conservative party has put forward a suggestion that the importation of wheat into Great Britain be placed on a quota basis. The allotment of the market, the Times says, would be sixty-six per cent. to the Dominions, and nine per cent. to foreign countries. The remaining 25 per cent. of all wheat consumed would come from domestic sources.

Mission Circuit Observes Rally

Rally Day services were conducted in three Sunday Schools by the Rev. J. S. McMullen on Sunday at Centre Street Mission in the morning, Rosemore in the afternoon and at Dundas Street Mission in the evening. There was a good attendance at all the services. At Dundas Street meeting Mr. William Moore of this city gave an address on "Worship" which was well received. Contributions of the day were on behalf of the missionary fund to aid in poorer schools in the outlying districts of the province. The regular form of service for Rally Day was followed.

Harvest Home services were held last evening at Centre Street Mission, the Rev. A. Farnsworth preaching the sermon on this occasion. Pastor, Mrs. McMullen and Mrs. Farnsworth sang two duets during the service.

INVESTIGATION LED TO FINE IN COURT

Four young men touring about the city last night in a Pierce-owned car in what seemed a strange manner led to the investigation by the police and today in police court, two charges under the Liquor Control Act were laid against the occupants of the car. Harold Leavitt was fined the usual for being intoxicated and Norman Sulish, who is the owner of the car, but who was not driving the vehicle at the time of the search was fined $100 and $7.00 costs for having liquor in an illegal place as a part bottle of wine was found in the car. The fines were paid.

Atonement Day Begins, Observed by Jewish Population This Week

The most-sacred of sacred days for Jews starts on Wednesday evening next, at sundown, continues until sundown on Thursday evening. Rabbi Gerstel told the press this morning. Yon ha-kipurim which ends the ten days of repentance is known in English as Atonement Day.

The Books of Life and Death are opened on Rash ha-Shanah and are sealed on Atonement Day. The righteous are inscribed for life on the very opening of the Books, the wicked are sentenced to death and the indifferent are given time to repent before the books are sealed.

Every form of pleasure, Mr. Gerstel reported is forbidden on this day. Eating, drinking or anything that is comfort, such as smoking, is also forbidden. There shall be no work done on this day. The whole day shall be spent in prayer and part of the night.

Jews from the entire surrounding district will assemble in Belleville for this great occasion. The Torah, or scroll, is read twice.

APPREHENSION SAVES STORE FROM THIEVES

Russell White Disturbs Thieves on Way Into Store

BRICK WAS USED

Timely Visit of Merchant to Store Early Sunday Evening

Apprehension as to the security of the stock over the week-end owing to a break-in in another store which occurred in the city last week, Russell White, manager of the White Hardware Company, arrived at the store shortly after nine o'clock last night in time to frustrate a break-in, which probably would have resulted in a serious loss in stock.

When Mr. White entered his store he picked up a flash light from the counter to make his way around and the would-be burglars fled and were not apprehended. The owner promptly called the police and Constable Izard and Evans answered the call and made a thorough investigation.

The parties responsible for the attempted break-in had first thrown a brick through the large pane of glass over the rear door. A barrel was placed near the door on which was placed a box upon which to stand in order to shove back the bar and bolt on the inside. An old mop handle, used for this work was found by the police. The handle worked for the outside rear door had been opened and coming to another door, securely fastened, they used an old board to break the glass in the transom. About the time the parties had broken through this door Mr. White arrived on the scene and the would-be burglars made their exit by the door they had forced. The inside door had not been unlocked. Broken glass was found all over the floor by the police. The till in which several dollars had been left on Saturday night was still untouched and Mr. White, making a quick inspection of the stock, stated he believed no goods were taken.

Saskatchewan Asks Three Million Dollars

SASKATOON, Sask., Sept. 29—CP—An initial $3,000,000 grant should be forthcoming for Saskatchewan out of the Dominion's $20,000,000 unemployment relief budget, believes Premier J. T. M. Anderson. On the basis of schedule of work submitted to Ottawa, this figure would e required to cover the province's needs, he announced.

ARM WAS FRACTURED

Arthur Broadworth, of Rawdon township in Belleville General Hospital with his forearm which was sustained in a friendly scuffle at Stirling village on Saturday afternoon. Broadworth was wrestling with another young man when he was thrown to the ground, his arm striking a stone. He was taken to Dr. Zwicker's office and later removed to the hospital, where X-ray photos revealed the fracture. He will be taken to his home today.

KNEE WAS INJURED

Miss Anna Madden, a member of the dressmaking staff at Sinclair's is resting at her home following an accident in the gangway leading to the new ladies' cloakroom and showroom. Miss Madden was returning to her home when she slipped and fell her knee striking the ground. She was unable to resume her duties today and her physician states that she will be confined to her home for a short period.

IMPORTS TO CANADA FALL OFF 20 PER CENT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.— Imports into Canada from the United States fell off during the first six months of 1930 as compared with those of 1929 but did not drop as much as the Dominion's imports from the United States. The figures given by the United States Chamber of of Commerce for the decline in trade are, Canadian exports 11 per cent, Canadian imports 20 per cent. These are on the dollar basis.

HOUSE TOOK FIRE LOSS VERY HEAVY

Chisholm's Mills Building With Contents Wiped Out

Mr. Frank Tracey a farmer residing at Chisholm's Mills, one mile from the community of Roslin, suffered a heavy loss on Friday night when his home with practically all of the contents was totally destroyed in a disastrous fire. The building, a frame structure was quickly consumed despite the combined efforts of neighbors who formed a bucket- brigade. The origin of the fire is unknown and part of the loss is covered by insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Tracy had left home and the hired man had gone to bed. Hearing a noise he rushed out, and was met in the hall by a wall of flame. He called assistance on the telephone but the flames carried great headway before their arrival. Nothing remained but the foundation

Welcome is Given Mr. MacLaurin Today

Students of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School honored their Principal, Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, with a wedding gift of a beautiful candelabra, and the handsome gift was waiting at his home when he and Mrs. MacLaurin returned from their wedding trip on Saturday. This morning at the assembly of pupils in the auditorium, Mr. MacLaurin expressed his thanks and took the opportunity for voicing the appreciation of himself and his wife for the many telegrams of congratulation and good wishes which they received from Belleville on the day of their marriage. Messages had come from the staff of the school, the Board of Education, officials of the Baptist Church while the Kiwanis Club of the city sent a basket of roses in honour of the occasion.

Mayoralty Race Is Likely to be Large

Mayor Reid, Ald. French, Hyde, Wotten and Others Mentioned

WARM CAMPAIGN ?

Slightly over two months remain for the nomination of candidates for "old kettle" is already commencing to boil and sputter. Street talk has lately veered to the possibilities for the mayoralty for next year, and casual observers who have been taking notes of the situation, predict a tough battle when the guide of the ballots is fought.

This year has been a particularly heavy one insofar as capital expenditures are concerned and ratepayers are looking with apprehension into the future concerning the rate to be struck next year. One new bridge has been built, another is under course of construction while approximately two hundred thousand dollars will be devoted to the new filtration plant. The two bridges were imperative in view of the reports submitted by engineers and who stated that both were unsafe and dangerous for travel while the filtration plant was absolutely necessary.

There is little doubt however that all of these may be important factors in the campaign. The council however has been practically forced to spend the money but the fact is a matter of their movements are endored by the ratepayers, remains to be seen.

A minor expenditure has been the installation of a new lighting system on East Dundas street. There has been no opposition talk regarding this move as it is felt that the main arteries of the city have been neglected so far as lighting facilities are concerned. The same system will be inaugurated on Highland avenue, North Front St. and Canniffon Road.

From present indications four present members of the Council may toss their hats into the ring seeking the Chief Magistrate's chair. Mayor Geo. A. Reid told The Ontario Intelligencer today that there is a strong possibility that he may be a candidate, if he haven't declared myself, but there is considerable work under way which is not completed and I may seek another term," he said. Mayor Reid admitted that he has been seriously considering the matter but is withholding a definite decision for the present.

Ald. Chas. Hyde, who has spent five years around the municipal board, is almost a sure starter. He practically announced himself during his last aldermanic campaign: "It's my intention to run for mayor unless something unforeseen occurs," was his answer to the reporter's query.

Ald. Russel Wotten is another who is seriously considering" the mayoralty. Many of Ald. Wotten's friends have urged him to seek the chief magistracy and unconfirmed rumors have him in the fight.

Ald. O. H. French could not be reached today but it is known that he has his eye on the post now occupied by Mayor Reid. He has enjoyed a most successful career in the council and as one of the older and wiser heads he has been particularly interested in city finances.

Although Ald. J. D. MacMillan has been in the council but one year, he has served faithfully and well, and Dame Rumor says he may be in the thick of the fight for mayor. Others have been mentioned and the contest promises to be one of the most lively in the history of the city. Dr. Bell, pastor of the church, was chairman, while Joseph Shortt, superintendent of the Sunday School, extended a welcome on behalf of that department. Elmer Dixon and Miss Edna Mitchell spoke on behalf of the Young People's Society. During the evening solos were rendered by Mrs. McKinnon and Mr. Fred Sprague. H. W. Ackerman and W. B Deacon invited the boys to take part in all church activities, and especially urged for the staff and students of the college. "Ted" Carr was introduced by Mr. Shortt. He will assume leadership of Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers groups. At the conclusion of the affair lunch was served by the ladies of the church.

Will Add Dozen Men to the Pay Roll of Contracting Firm

It was announced today by Walter Patterson that the Patterson Construction Company has been awarded the contract by the Department of Public Works of the Ontario Government for the alterations to the steam mains and pipe trenches at the Ontar io School for the Deaf. Work will commence tomorrow morning and about one month will be consumed in completing the job. "How many men will be employed?" the press asked. "About twenty-five or thirty," Mr. Patterson stated. He said that local labor would be employed. "Have you enough on your pay roll at the present time to carry on the work?" Mr. Patterson said that a dozen extra men will be taken on for the job at the school.

Harvest Services at Christ Church

Harvest Thanksgiving services were held in Christ Church yesterday with the Rector, Rev. C. E. Clarke, occupying the pulpit at both services. The church was dressed for the occasion, there being an abundance of flowers on the altar, with grains and vegetables placed about the auditorium. There were large congregations out to render thanks under the Giver of good things during the past year and to enjoy the bountiful harvest that have gone before. The choir under the direction of Miss LaVole gave an appropriate service. Mrs. LaVole rendered a solo in her usual brilliant manner. Rev. Clarke spoke from the text, "Now, found in the 12th chapter of St. Luke and verse 15, which state "a man's life does not consist in the abundance of things he possesses." Today members of the congregation will distribute to the sick the flowers about the altar and the vegetables will go to those who are in need.

CHURCH WAS REOPENED

An interesting event took place at Bethany yesterday when the United Church which was redecorated during the summer months was officially reopened. Rev. W. R. Tanton of Cobourg, was the special speaker for the day.

MOTOR-CAR PITCH-IN

A motor accident occurred at the intersection of Bridge and Front street Saturday afternoon doing considerable damage to the cars involved. Leslie Adams, Thomasburg was driving his car east on Bridge street, at a moderate rate of speed according to Constable Izzard, who investigated and when over the intersection was hit by a car driven by William Clarke, from the rear. The Adams' car was smashed in the body, the spare tire was knocked off and the rear left fender was bent. Clarke's car was badly damaged about the headlights, front fenders and radiators. No settlement was made at the time.

LEAVES FOR MONTREAL

Mrs. A. P. Blakely for many years a resident of this city, left today for Montreal. She had been contemplating moving to Canada's greatest city for some time. Her many friends in Belleville testified to the esteem in which she was held here by the succession of teas that were given for her. Her son, Ronald, who has been working in Sudbury, Ontario, is home for the removal.

MOVES TO GALT

Col. John French D.S.O. of Picton, who has accepted a responsible position in Galt with a brewery firm moved his family to that city today. Both Mr. and Mrs. French took an active part in the civic and social life of the Prince Edward County town and will be greatly missed.

HIGH PRAISE FOR ORGAN

George J. Forban, manager of the Bella Theatre, is of the opinion that although the organ in his picture show sounded fine before, it is nearly perfect now as anything can be. Mr. A. R. Kitt, organ expert of the Warren Organ Company, has been in the city for the past four or five days saving the giant organ a complete overhauling, installing new parts and doing away with some that are worn out. Mr. Forban thinks that he has a fine sounding organ as can be found between Toronto and Montreal at the present moment.

RALLY DAY SERVICE

Sunday was Rally Day for John St. Church Sunday School and the services were well attended. Mr. F. A. Dickie, of Albert College, was the special speaker and he gave an inspiring address. The primary department is to be devoted to the aid of new Sunday schools in the outlying districts.

WINS BUICK CAR

Harry Gilbert, of Sudbury, Ont., well known in this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gilbert, ex-proprietors of Gilbert's bakery, must be the favorged of the "gods." Harry had $1.50 in his pockets one day last week. He wandered into the barber shop to get a haircut. Fifty cents vanished into thin air. Not knowing what to do with the remaining dollar he invested it in a raffle for the benefits of Great War Veterans, not expecting to win anything. The only thing that he won was a nice, new Buick straight eight sedan, value at over $1500.

SPECIAL PROGRAM SUNDAY

Rally Day at Victoria Ave Baptist Church was a successful event yesterday, well attended by members of the Sunday School. A splendid program was given, including exercises by the Primary Department, a reading by Miss Audrey Rowland, solo by Mr. Frank Hitchon. The address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. H. B. Neal, pastor of Holloway St. United Church. An interesting part of the programme was the presentation on behalf of the church officials and congregation of a dinner wagon to Mr. and Mrs. P. C. MacLearin whose marriage took place last week. The presentation was made by Deacon Loneberry.

VILLAGERS AND COUNTRYSIDE AT BRIGHTON'S FAIR

Fine Weather on Saturday in Every Phase of Fair's Activity

SPEEDY RACES

Some years ago a reorganization in the directorate of the Brighton Fair was made and on Saturday result of that reorganization was noted, when many from the immediate district and surrounding communities witnessed one of the best exhibitions of the home and field ever to be gathered in the old grounds. Royal Quick, the efficient secretary, has worked for some months planning on the best way to make the residents interested in their own fair and the results were better than expectation. From upwards a troop of boy scouts headed by the village band marched to the fair grounds to open the proceedings and from then till late in the afternoon there was always something doing.

The exhibits especially in the general purpose and roadster class was the best that have been shown in the district this year. Brighton was always known as a horse community and Saturday the judges had a heavy task picking the ones to wear the red ribbon. Col. Urchman carried off many of the roadster prizes, when he showed early in the day had been a consistent winner at the Royal Winter Fair. This mare is still young and closely-hitched and will take some beating in any show ring. The cattle exhibits were heavy with Holsteins and Jerseys leading strongly. The poultry of the home were housed in a tent on the grounds and all the afternoon the tent was filled with people looking the fine exhibits. Thomas Ford owned by L. Bennett of Fort Hope injured himself in the second heat of the free for all when he struck a hole and lamed himself. Della Wilber the consistent pacer from Smith's Falls won the race after a stiff battle with Dick Graham.

Joe Vasseau has been around to the races for many years and in Peter W. he has a junior colt that will make some of them step with more experience. Saturday he won the 1-2-3 class as he glanced and at the end was looking for pacers. George O. Thoe handled the bell in the stand and good order which few stores resulted. The summary:

Radio Fans Corner

Reception was good last night, the touch of colder weather is bringing us better reception at any rate, even if it also brings us thoughts of empty coal bins. However that is beside the point, we very much enjoyed last night's programs.

The Wrigley All-String Dance Orchestra is one the air tonight for the first time at 8.00 so we'll expect you all to listen in on its premier. It will be hooked up with the Canadian network and heard locally through CKNC. It is an orchestra of 25 pieces under the direction of Geoffrey Waddington. The program for tonight includes "Classical Island of Dreams," "I'm Needing You," "Oo Home and Tell Your Mother," "Here Comes Love," Sun," "Singing a Song to the Stars," "I Remember You from Somewhere," and the signature song "Magical Island of Dreams."

I note that Duke Ellington and his Cotton Club Band are on the air tonight but owing to the return of Standard time, due to larger cities we'll have to sit up an hour later to hear him. Midnight will be the hour fans the station is WJZ only.

Missed Amos 'n Andy last Saturday night. I wonder if they have finished their picture and are heading east again. Dunno, maybe. I think they will be back on the air tonight, though. It was announced Saturday night that the program would be resumed tonight.

General Motors Family Party from WEAF tonight at 8.30 and at 10.30 the Sign of the Sheik, Jack Albin and his Hotel Pennsylvania orchestra are scheduled to appear from this station at 11 and immediately after Bernie Cummins and his Hotel New Yorker orchestra. Plenty of dance programs tonight.

Maytag orchestra which includes Hotting and Platt, Raymond Knoth, baritone and Fred Waldner, tenor, Real Folks at 9.30 from WJZ and Duke Ellington, as I mentioned before, at midnight.

CAN FIND MANY JOBS

How advertisers see a means of relief of some of the conditions surrounding unemployment is indicated in a series of advertisements appearing in some papers from the Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine, Canada, Limited of Paris, Ontario. Their advertisements with particular reference to their own products call for 50,000 jobs for men who need them. The appeal is to those who can at this season of the year aid materially in having work performed for a few dollars, not only beautifying but also adding to the value of the owner's property as well as giving employment to men, who need the work.

This means of creating business and of stimulating demand for employment is a novel way but it is also one of the most reasonable for the man who spends gets full value and the earner is given means of livelihood.

Practically every home has a job of some kind about it requiring attention if the owner will but decide to proceed with the work. Some of the falling-off of work is seasonal and some cannot be cured except in a general upturn but far more than people think is due to the psychological factor. What the psychological factor has meant falling business, the same element can be made for the improvement of business if individuals will but get the proper viewpoint. It is the duty of those who can afford it to see that nothing they do will reduce the demand for employment and it is a duty to see that work be created. Best of all it is done in a spirit of love for our fellowmen.

CANCER TREATMENT

Cancer, the modern scourge, particularly of civilization, is attracting the attention of governments more and more. Once it was left to the medical world to fight the disease and a great deal of information has been gathered by scientific research with regard to the malady, but today the world is awake to the ravages of the disease, in the heavy death rate which it lays upon the population. Every effort will be bent to make it possible in the Province of Ontario for early treatment by radium for those afflicted with the disease. Premier Ferguson has announced a decision as to the establishment of a great radium institute at Toronto for this province.

Governments everywhere must become alert to the need of relief. This will lead to many cures and improvement in the conditions of the victims or at least will stay the progress of the disease.

Meantime research will continue in the effort to get at the heart of cancer's baffling secret—what cancer is.

FRANCO-ITALIAN SITUATION

"Fascist Italy means war."

Il Duce, openly throwing down the gauntlet to France and exalting Italy's armed destinies, has gone too far."

Will the spark of European war conflagration start this time, not in Bosnia, but in Albania, or perhaps Nice or Tunis?

It is Mussolini's Kaiserlike claim to "a place in the sun," with his Italy apparently hypnotized, that leads such seasoned American war correspondents as Frank H. Simonds and Scott Mowrer to conclusions quoted above. They reflect not only European opinion but emphasize the actual preparation for another and the conflicting interest behind the war alarms. Mussolini advances to the forefront the inevitable battle speaking tour of northern Italian provinces, reviewing troops and crowds that cry "Down with France," when he declares:

"It was I, myself, who ordered this review, because words are a very fine thing, but muscles, machine-guns, airplanes and guns are even better, because right, if unaccompanied by night, is a vain word.

"There are beyond our frontiers sects, groups and parties of men who would not be adverse to unleashing a war against the Italian people, whom they consider guilty of remaining faithful to the Fascist regime.

"We are ready for them."

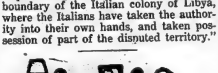
"I make no vague affirmations.

"We are sufficiently well informed of what is being prepared elsewhere, and of the dominant spirit among certain of our neighbors."

Whereupon Premier Tardieu of the French Government is moved to deliberately address his countrymen, so distinctly that Mussolini across the Alps may hear, saying:

"France, today is in a position which frees her both from the need to fear or to boast."

"As before the World War, we wish peace through stability and organization, with the will to remain in all situations masters of our destiny if there should rise unexpected difficulties."



What real issues of war or peace lie behind such official trumpeting?

"France and Italy are separated today by grievances are real, and a rivalry as keen, as separated France and Germany twenty years ago," declares the Manchester (N.H.) Union, which explains:

"In a nutshell, the problem is the old one of expansion.

"With 37,000,000 people, and a population rapidly increasing, Italy finds herself with limited African possessions. France, on the other hand, with 40,000,000 people, and a population at a standstill, has a vast colonial empire in North Africa over 5,000,000 square miles. To obtain Italy's co-operation in the World War, the Italians claim that France promised to make them concessions, that were later refused. Since then this matter has been a subject of dispute and conflict.

"The recent upheaval in Abyssinia was at bottom a Franco-Italian clash. A dispute has gone on over the southwestern boundary of the Italian colony of Libya, where the Italians have taken the authority into their own hands, and taken possession of part of the disputed territory."

A SHIP NOW OUT AT SEA

Some far-off day a Ship, now out at sea,
Will reach these lands. Still hidden 'mong the stars,
Nor west the sun, it has young gods for tars,
Who scrub their wings and whistle blithe and free
Amidst the smoke of Satan's canonry . . .
And tempests rage . . . So there'll be many wars,
And kingdoms fall, before it cross our bars,
With reefed sail, and safely anchored be.

O Ship at sea! come soon, lest in our eyes
There grow despair. Long have our tents been cast
On shifting sands. And still our seers arise
Who tell the future, but know not the past.
O Ship at sea! what are such prophecies?
Only the gods can bring the truth at last.

Martyrs' Devotion Based Upon Faith Says Mgr. Nicholson

Life Story of Canadian Jesuits is Told Congregation

BEARING CROSSES

Loce of Christ and Love of Souls Upheld Them in Sufferings

In St. Michael's Church on Friday evening last, some five hundred persons listened to an able discourse delivered by Very Rev. Mgr. Nicholson, V.G., the occasion being the celebration of the feast of the eight Canadian Martyrs, who lost their lives among the savage Indians in the seventeenth century. The Reverend pastor of the church took as his text the words of the Book of Wisdom, "The souls of the just are in the hand of God and the torment of death, shall not touch them. In the eyes of the unwise they seemed to die, but they are in Peace (Wisdom 3, 1-3).

It was a quality inherent in human nature, to cherish the memory of the glorious past of one's country and to venerate those men who had sacrificed all for its welfare.

The Catholic Church had played its part in the early formation of Canadian life. The dawn of our history is illumined by the faith and devotion of those Jesuits, Franciscans and Sulpicians, who armed with nothing but the Cross, penetrated the wilderness with all its terrors, to bring the message of light eternal to the pagan redman. Canada owns its first impulse to civilization and Christianity to these men. They led the vanguard of explorers. It has been said that "not a cape was turned, not a river entered but they led the way." There is no grander page in history than that which relates the deeds of the Martyrs of New France, in this province. A non-Catholic writer states that "no greater devotion to the cause of Christianity has been displayed since the days of the Apostles than was manifested by these men of God, who suffered at the stake in their attempt to christianize the Indian tribes of this country."

On June 29th of this year, the Church had placed in the Calendar of Saints the names of eight Jesuits who had perished at the hands of red savages.

They were canonized after an investigation into their lives and the miracles wrought by their intercession. This judicial process lasted for three centuries.

The Rev. Pastor reminded the congregation that they were singularly fortunate in having here, on this occasion of the Martyrs' feast, relics of three of these Friends of God. Veneration and respect are due these precious remains since the bodies of the just have been the temples of the Holy Ghost and on the day of General Resurrection will be glorified in Heaven. In honoring the saints, honor is given to Almighty God, whose instruments, they were. By the consoling doctrine of the communion of saints, members of the church, assist each other by their prayers, and secured works to the intercession of those who have won the Palm of Eternal Victory is Efficacious before the throne of God.

The Jesuits came to Canada three centuries ago, not to seek wealth or earthly fame but to win souls to Christ. Some of them were men of noble birth and all of them could have occupied positions of dignity in their homeland, but they voluntarily gave up refinements and comforts of civilization to spend their lives among the untaught natives of the wilderness. They concentrated on the Hurons who dwelt in the vicinity of Georgian Bay. They preserved in spite of discouragement and apparent lack of success, among a people whose habits of life and modes of thought were abhorrent.

On March 16th, 1640, the Iroquois, hereditary enemies of the Hurons, stormed the town of St. Ignatius (now what is now the town of Midland, Ont.) and two of these intrepid Jesuit Missionaries, Revs. Father Jean de Brebeuf and Gabriel Lalement, fell into their hands. These good shepherds had remained to die with their flock. Father de Brebeuf had come to Canada in 1625 and had been sixteen years on the missions. He was a man of commanding appearance and powerful physique and had earned the admiration of the savages by the manner in which he bore the arduous life among them. The Iroquois subjected him to every torture they could devise "to break his indomitable spirit. His body was mutilated, scalding water was poured on his head in mockery of baptism but he continued to encourage the native christians who were his fellow captives. Red hot hatchet heads were hung about his neck. A belt of bark soaked in pitch was bound about him and set alight and still he spoke of God. So they cut off his lips and drove a flaming torch down his throat. They bared the bones of his legs of their flesh and still he uttered no groan. When he was no longer able to stand they scalped him and completed their cruel work by tearing out his heart and devouring it, hoping thereby to share in their victim's bravery. Others drank his blood with the same thought in mind. What was left of the Martyr's body savages threw upon the fire. His charred remains were found later and taken to Quebec. He expired at three o'clock in the afternoon. And so the story of the Chief of the Canadian Martyrs rings down the ages. The torture of his companion, Father Gabriel Lalement began at six o'clock in the evening and lasted until nine o'clock, the next morning. Father Charles Garnier was put to death some months later. All of the Martyrs suffered death like Father de Brebeuf and some of them endured as much before death came to them. Their example is a lesson that Religion means Sacrifice. No other motive than their faith could have been so strong, as to enable them to face their torturous deaths, following as these did on laborious and agonizing lives amid savage tribes. Many in the world today with only joy and happiness and seek to put aside everything that is painful. But the teaching of Christ who died for us upon a Cross, the most painful of deaths, is to overcome suffering by sacrifice. Only by the free use of the little pains and torments of human life but to accept and conquer them. Keeping before our minds the vision of the cross of Christ, as did these Martyrs, for in that Cross is our salvation. Men cannot escape their Crosses, they will come unbidden, but again nothing by running away from them, but they gain all, by steadfastly facing and bearing them, for the Love of Him, who bore the Cross for mankind.

After Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, which followed the sermon the Veneration of the relics took place, the faithful filing to the altar rail where Monsignor Nicholson offered the Reliquary for respectful salutation.

The musical part of the service was well rendered by the mixed choir and consisted of "O Salutaris," a solo "Ave Maria" by Mr. Jack Fahey, "Invocation to the Martyrs," by Mr. Edward Brown, the "Tantum Ergo" and "Laudate Dominum" Mrs. James Grant presided at the organ and played the national anthems, "O Canada" and "The Maple Leaf" at the conclusion.

PROSPECTS FOR HOCKEY BRIGHT

Belleville Teams Will Commence Road Work on Nov. 1st.

CONTENTIOUS MATTER

Three New Players Here According to Rumors — The City League

Hockey will start in Belleville earlier than usual this year and the fans are already discussing the prospects for the approaching season The arena directors have announced that the rink will open November 15th, when the hockey terms will commence practice sessions. Stan Burgoyne will be here with his bagful of tricks late next month. Dame rumor has it that Belleville will be represented by a smart team and the fans are hoping to see some good hockey.

Eddie Thomas who has been Manager of both the Junior and Intermediate Clubs here since 1916 holds the franchise to operate while the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association which had its birth among the Arena Directors, signed Mr. Burgoyne to a contract to coach the team. Veiled discussion concerning the assertive rights to control the local hockey situation has gone the rounds since the B.A.A.A. was resurrected.

It is expected that the Association will appeal to the O.H.A. that the Association in the matter. It is stated that Mr. Thomas has been approached regarding the franchise of the Belleville to the B.A.A.A. and it is indeed a peculiar situation. Mr. Thomas has the franchise and no place to play, while members of the B.A.A.A. are largely composed of Arena Directors and possess all the facilities for giving the fans what they want.

We have been led to believe that a hockey war may develop here providing satisfactory negotiations are not completed. We have a fine new rink here and a legion of fans who have always been loyal to the club. The utmost harmony must prevail if the game is to receive the success that it deserves.

Eddie Thomas has given Belleville hockey when no one else would shoulder the burden. He had his lean years when the financial returns were nothing to brag about, but no one heard a whimper. Then again he turned out some fine teams, the crowds were larger and the gate receipts were encouraging. That was his good luck. It is the general contention that Eddie Thomas should be shown consideration. The forever holds the whip hand red unless W. A. Hewitt, Secretary of the O.H.A. hands down his ultimatum, the control of the situation, trouble may possibly ensue.

There appears to be some new material here, Goodfellow and Montgomery who played with Iroquois Falls have been in Belleville since last spring and both hold repetitions. Burgoyne knows them both and will no doubt recommended the pair as capable performers. It is said that a lad named Moore who played for the Toronto Intermediates is here ready for service. Scouts a Junior roster hails from Cobourg.

Ken Davis who played for Stirling in the Trent Valley League last year is working in the Canada Cement plant and will line up with their City league team and in unsathentic story states that Fred Ingram who played for the same team, has signed a contract with the Boston Tigers. This story however, has no verification.

The City League will probably get under way as soon as the Arena opens continuing until the New Year, resuming operations at the conclusion of the O.H.A. season. This plan has worked successfully in Kingston, and other cities and officials believe it will work to better advantage here.

Street gossip says that Salon's will be represented by a classy outfit in the City League. Newton Wilbur is Manager and he has been working up some clever hockeyists including the Canning Brothers, Johnny Hibbard, Whalen and others.

The T's Men semi-finalists who gave Point Anne such a run will be forced to find a new left-winger to fill Army Armstrong's shoes but the remainder of the team will be intact.

The old hockey pot has already started to boil and it will simmer merrily until the teams take the ice and get under way for the 1930-31 season.

TRENTON LEADING BAY OF QUINTE RUGBY GROUP; ALBERT COLLEGE BEATEN IN LOOSELY-PLAYED GAME

Thompson Scored Touchdown for Locals—Chronic Fumbling

Trenton Collegiate sprung the first surprise of the season on the fans on Saturday afternoon with Albert College team playing the role of victims. The Trenton team was not considered much of a threat in the Bay of Quinte section of the Central Ontario group, but they demonstrated that they will take some beating. This morning they are sitting astride the top rung, leading all comers to push them off their perch. The score was 7-6 and it was not until the dying moments of the game that the College broke into the scoring column.

But two minutes remained to play, and the college lads been pushing their way toward the Trenton goal by a series of line bucks until they placed the ball within the shadow of the goal posts. Thompson went over for the touch which was converted. It was not enough and the visitors took the first victory of the season.

The wind played havoc in Saturday's game which was featured by chronic fumbling by both teams while a distinct advantage over the visitors in this regard.

Cadham, the bouncing red-head, from Napanee, leads the assault for the College from the backfield and his dashing attack brilliant runs were the redeeming features of a somewhat drab and listless affair. Thompson and Edwards gave him some nice help and both will come along for coaching.

Wyma was the star for the Trenton team. He and Reynolds shared most of the work, although Chambers cut in with some pretty dashes during the afternoon.

Carr handled the Albert team well and his generalship is unquestionable. Martyn, another lad from Colborne Collegiate, Ottawa, turned in a nice game.

Wind Played Havoc

Trenton was on the defensive at the opening, but Chambers ran back a long spiral. Play shifted to midfield and Trenton made a long drive. Carr fumbled and Atkinson brought him down on Albert's twenty-yard line. The latter was hurt in the melee and was replaced by Baker. Joe Reynolds hoisted to Albert's dead-line and Jackson kicked it back ten yards. The wind was playing hob with the long punts. Thompson of Albert, fumbled and Johnson pounced on the ball thirty yards out. Albert was on the defensive as the period ended.

Jackson punted to Weyms who took it back twenty yards. In the play that followed Reynolds kicked over and Jackson failed to run it over to give Trenton the first point. Albert then forced the ball to the Trenton end, the harassed visitors hooted it out of the danger zone. Jackson made a pretty catch of a long spiral but three Trenton tackler nailed him in his tracks before he got away.

Shortly after the second half opened Trenton was thrown for a loss and Thompson tried to boot it out but the kick was blocked and things looked bad. With a field goal made-to-order, Reynolds drop kick was blocked but Weyms recovered. Trenton again punted over the dead-line and Edwards was brought down for another point.

After a nice recovery by Albert, Thompson brought the trickster fans to their feet with a beautiful thirty-five yard run. Reynolds, however, retaliated by skirting the line to take it back twenty. Albert tried every resource at their command and the wind played the mischief with a well-timed forward pass. Trenton kicked over the line and an Albert man tried to scoop it up but failed and young Proctor coming in like a flash, fell upon the ball for a touchdown which was not converted.

Trenton finally took the ball over for five points for Albert and it was converted but only a short time remained and while Albert were desperate they could not score the equalizer.

It was not, by long odds, an exciting game to look back, but it served to add custom the boys to the molesking again and the next game will doubtlessly be more interesting.

The Lid's Off!

(By K.C.W.)

The lid popped off the local rugby season on Saturday when Albert entertained Trenton on their field and took a 7-6 beating while the College lads made a valiant fight. Spear on the easterner's field and the collegiate juniors rolling up a nice 26-1 score over the Napanee Juniors.

There is no denying the fact that Coach Shiels has a pair of mighty promising teams this year. He has unlimited material for his backfield in the senior section with, Champagne, Mott, Byrnes, Philp and Graves. The juniors have three star stalwarts in Follwell, Campbell and Barrage.

But both teams will have to display a better brand of rugby than they showed Saturday if they want to pull into the finals. True, the juniors' score looks nice and convincing, but it could have been much greater. Costly fumbles kept it down.

It's not sure what is the matter with the seniors. Anyway, they didn't click on Saturday. With a team like that they should have walked over Albert, but they didn't. As the season advances the college will be a real threat.

Philp looked swell in practice. He didn't do much in the game, but will probably come into his own as the season advances. Champagne was kicking nicely and he had one tough wind to buck most of the time.

Napanee has two star performers in Allen Gray and Cadham. Both are good at the kicking, looks nice, and Almey who uses Jack Yaill's old trick of punting, will probably get his neck broken before the season is over.

There's a lot of credit coming to the Collegiate line. They were smashed back against their own goal more than once but each time held like iron and stayed off disaster. Particularly does Garnet Bowman look nice. Garnet is a beefy boy but he moved with incredible speed on Saturday and twice, to the writer's knowledge, he caught the Napanee runner flat-footed behind his own line and threw him for a loss. Twiddy, when he hits the line makes something give. He knows how to throw his hundred and eighty-odd pounds.

St. Denis, for the seniors, was in there every time, and, incredible to relate, didn't lose his temper once. Renee has a great future ahead of him. Maraska looked nice on one or two end runs.

Coach Shiels tried the forward pass only two or three times and it didn't work. If it had—but that would have put a different ending to the game.

Barrage is the white-haired boy for the Collegiate. He made Napanee look goofy on Saturday and they couldn't seem to stop him. Incidentally Chick Fellowsl was kicking as well as any of the senior men.

From reliable information it is said that Albert is a lot stronger than it looks on paper. They succeeded in holding Trenton to a 7-6 score on Saturday and have vowed vengeance against the westerners in the next game. "Mac" Acheson went into the game when he didn't even know the signal and yet was by far the best behind that Albert had. As the season advances the college will be a real threat.

Undoubtedly Weyms is Trenton's best bet. He made consistent gains on Saturday and is as nice a looking player as has been seen here in some time.

Collegiate line up with Picton on Wednesday. After what Coach Shiels had to say to them on Saturday at the completion of the game at least they looked as though he was going to say plenty) it looks too bad for Picton. The boys will go in there fighting mad.

All local eyes are turned to Saturday when the two local teams meet up. Albert and the Collegiate clash for the first time this season on Saturday and it should be a good game.

Peterboro Loses To Ingersoll Nine, 6-1

Peterboro, Sept. 29—Ingersoll, Western Ontario champions, defeated Peterboro here Saturday to take the first game of the O.B.A.A. intermediate final series from the Peterboro G.O.E. Eastern Ontario champs, 6-1. For seven innings it was an airtight pitching duel between Ray Rose Peterboro's veteran right-hander, and Judd, Ingersoll's tall southpaw star, and when C.G.E. scored the first run of the game in the eighth inning on Ramey and singles by Johnston and Les Hollingsworth, the only counter looked big enough to win. However, the Westerners, who have been held in subjection for seven frames, broke loose in the eighth, scoring five runs on four hits, a passed ball and an error, and added an unearned marker in the ninth to win handily. Rose struck out eight batters, but fanned thirteen of the Peterboro's batsmen and held them to three hits although he walked four and hit two batters. The hitting of Odell, the ingersoll catcher, who was the only player on either team to get more than one hit, and the fine fielding of Johnston, Peterboro's veteran second baseman, were features of an interesting game with a smattering of football weather on a wind swept field.

The second game will be played at Ingersoll next Saturday.

The prize winners were Miss M. Pomeroy for the ladies with 236 for high single; for the gents Mr. S. Crawford was the winner with a high single of 252.

B. C. I. SUCCEEDS IN TYING THE EASTERNERS BY A SCORE OF 2-2

Collegiate Machine Looks Ragged on Saturday Against Napanee

JUNIORS WIN

Collegiate Youngsters Roll up 26-1 Score Against Rivals

Belleville Collegiate Institute has a pair of nice teams, junior and senior, but one would never guess it to have seen them on Saturday. True, the Juniors rolled up a 26-1 score on the Napanee Juniors, but strictly speaking it should have been 46-1. The Juniors were up against a rugged, picked-up-at-the-last-minute team and if it had not been for numerous fumbles on the part of Belleville the tally would have been much larger.

There is no excuse for the seniors. They succeeded in holding Napanee seniors to a 2-2 score, but they are lucky to do that. B.C.I. has the greatest looking threat in years this season, a wonderful machine, but some of the cogs in the machine need oiling.

The seniors should have won their encounter by a score of at least seven or eight to two. In the first quarter they had a terrific wind at their backs and could have kicked five or six points, instead they garnered but two, and that only after by dint of hard work.

If it had not been for young Jack Graves the seniors would have gone down to ignominious defeat. Graves, short of foot and a lovely open field runner, carried the ball out of danger again and again. Byrnes, playing against the doctor's orders, was not so hot. He seemed to have the same faculty he had last year, of running hard and getting nowhere. Mott, a new man at quarter this year, performed his part well. No blame can be attached to him, but he doubtless gave Napanee one of their two points when, with but a few inches to go, he called for a kick to get out of danger instead of backing the line and getting three more downs. The punt finished, Napanee was right on top of Bellville's goal and kicked for their first point of the game.

For the juniors, "Si" Barrage was about the nicest looking. Barrage had Napanee guessing and time and time again made beautiful runs. Follwell's kicking, too, is deserving of unstinted praise. However, the juniors were up against a very motley-looking organization. How they will look against the Trenton midgets is another matter altogether.

The senior game requires but brief telling. The collegiate opened the first quarter looking like a championship team and finished up the last three quarters looking like a million cents. Champagne kicked beautifully shortly after the first quarter started to draw first blood in the game and one point. Graves opened up shortly afterwards with a lovely yard run which looked like a touchdown. It resulted in another point when Champagne kicked again.

That was all of Belleville's points. The second quarter had just nicely started when Jack Moore, who subsequently played the nicest game for Napanee, booted the pigskin for Napanee's first counter. There was no more scoring until the last quarter, when Moore once again kicked to tie the game.

If the game could have gone on for another two or three minutes Belleville would undoubtedly have won. They had started a triumphant march down the field and with a little more the whole eastern organization could not stem. But the whistle blew and the first game of the season ended most unsatisfactorily to the locals. It can safely be asserted that when they meet again Napanee will be beaten, and badly beaten at that by improved teams.

The junior game was an entirely different affair. The youngsters conducted their attack like Napoleons, Flanked with cyclonic speed, succeeded in scoring point after point. Napanee did not have a chance. Outweighted, outplayed, they went down in defeat fighting grimly.

Follwell opened up the scoring in the first quarter (three twenty-minute periods were played) with a rouge for one point. Shortly afterwards Ed White carried the ball over for a touch. The convert failed. It was only a minute afterwards that Campbell smashed over the line for another touch and this one was converted. Follwell kicked again at the end of the period for another point.

The second period opened auspiciously for the juniors when Morgan got another touch, It was not converted. In this section, Napanee got its only point on a rouge.

The final period saw another touch for the locals when White carried the ball over the line for the last few minutes of the game. Follwell nabbed two rouges in this period.

Belleville—Touches 4 (twenty points) Converts two (two points) and rouges four (four points), making a total of twenty-six points.

Napanee— Touches 0, converts 0, Rouges 1, Score 2-1.

Nick Altrock's World Series View

BY NICK ALTROCK

Washington, Sept. 27—Your Uncle Mick has laid in his quota of squint and is all primed to expert the world series. I will describe how I do my experting. First, I open a can of alphabet soup. My ground floor is a wet bet soup with a bowl of cold consomme, I get a cuba board. From then on I just gets alphabet.

This year I will have a private body guard. That is to prevent anybody from kidnapping me and pouring pasts into me against my will. My expert against Connie Mack, Gabby Street, Calvin Coolidge, and other experts who will be covering the series. If I don't go around accompanied by burly bodyguards, I could be seized and plied with liquor from now till the end of the series. Of course, I do not have these bodyguards with me 24 hours a day, as they have to get some rest. They lay off guarding me from sundown to midnight, and in case any of my rivals are planning to kidnap from midnight to sun-down is front of the post office to-night at 8 p.m. It is easier to ply me with rye than Scotch, but I will even take gin. In case I should get by the post office safely tonight, I will be down there again tomorrow even at 8 o'clock and give the kidnappers another chance.

Take Precautions

This gives you an idea of how the real experts have to be safeguarded When I am at the series I also have to take precautions, as a rival expert might kidnap my spelling primer and then where would I be?

Many admirers are interested in how I arrive at my conclusions in doping a series. Ii is easy when you know how. First, I compare the rival pitchers of the contending teams, and then each man a percentage of what he uses down to the sixth decimal point. Then I compare the rival catchers and keep on jostling down figures of strength and weakness until the two teams are compared. I then add up the totals of both teams and examine the cards with a microscope. Then I take out my Old Farmer's Almanac (which is not to be confused with the Hotel Almanac) and study what the weather conditions will be. For instance, if the weather is going to be damp and clammy Flint Rhem might be taken with a chill. So I substract 17 1-2 per cent of the Card's pitching strength till the sun comes out again and Flint is back on his feet.

Close Boosts Stock

If the almanac says the weather will be dark and cloudy, I would bet Larry Greene's fast ball will be more effective, so I jot down 11 3-4 per cent extra for the A's. I take all these things into consideration, except the golf courses, and that is why my expert dope is so good.

Finally, when all the figures are computed, and I am pretty well exhausted from comparing strengths with weaknesses, etc., and managerial brains and all that-family, when by this data is before me, I flip a coin to decided which team will win.

That is the expecting system I use and it's a good one. The old law of averages always work and I am only wrong 50 per cent of the time, which puts me in first place ahead of the other experts. Some of them are so far below zero they should be covering the Antarctic with Byrd instead of the world series.

Diphtheria Left With Very Weak Kidneys

New Brunswick Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills with Great Success

Mrs. Bernard McKinley was hardly able to walk

Alma, N.B., Sept. 29—(Special) — "About twenty years ago I had an attack of diphtheria which left Mrs. B. McKinley, a well known resident of this place. "When I got up my kidneys were all I could desire. Finally, I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and after using about half a dozen I finished the first box before I was almost well, but I took the whole. I am the mother of a large family and never have a pain in my kidneys now."

Dodd's Kidney Pills strike right at the seat of the trouble, the kidneys. They are no cure-all, but simply and purely a kidney remedy. They relieve the work of the heart by putting the kidneys in shape to strain all the impurities out of the blood. Pure blood carried to all parts of the body means new health all over the body.

How to Relieve Catarrhal Deafness or Head Noises

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm drops in your throat and you are caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels, you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist a bottle of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and 1 level sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easier, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the toning action of the treatment. Even cases where defective hearing and mucous dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms of catarrh, where the presence of catarrh and which have defied other methods, yield to this efficacious treatment. If nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh, there must be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple home treatment.

WEDDINGS

MACLAURIN — DOW

A profusion of gaily hued autumn flowers intermingled with ferns formed a charming setting for the marriage of Doris Lucille, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dow, 201 South Syndicate Ave., to Peter Crawford MacLaurin, B.A., only son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. MacLaurin, Vankleek Hill, Ont. Dr. H. R. Grant, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, officiating.

The marriage ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and at the appointed hour the charming bride, who was given in marriage by her father, descended the stairway, accompanied by her maid-of-honor, Mrs. F. W. Edwards, and to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal march from Wagner, played by H. H. Brown, took their places at the artistic floral arch before the flower-decked mantel.

The bridegroom was supported by his brother, J. L. MacLaurin, B.A., of the Port William Collegiate staff.

The lovely bride was becomingly attired in an attractive Weiss model in eggshell tones. The bodice was of fine imported Alencon lace, pearl beaded and the ankle length skirt of fine silk net fell in graceful folds. Lace-mittens edged with pearl beads to match autumn brown tones added much to the effectiveness of the lovely model. She wore a becoming picture hat in the rich brown velvet with brim of chenille on malino. An exquisite shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley was carried. Brown suede shoes and hose to match the gown were worn.

Mrs. Edwards, the matron of honor, looked stunning in her Hollywood model gown, in wood rose brown velvet with gown materialized in the new close fitting long lines, the bodice being made of rich Chantilly lace over net and the skirt was of fine silk French georgette. The matron of honor also wore the lace mitts to match the gown and carried with transparent velvet in cameo blush tones. Her hat was a Beauport shape model in velvet to match transparent velvet caught with a fetching buckle. Her shoes were tinted brocade and hose to matching tones in brown. Her bouquet was composed of shaded roses and carnations.

The marriage register was signed by Miss Mabel Moore sang sweetly "O Flower of All the World," accompanied by H. H. Brown, who also played soft nuptial aire during the reception which followed.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held for the immediate friends and relatives. Little Miss Eleanor MacLaurin, niece of the bridegroom opening the door for the guests. She looked sweetly pretty in her frock of apple green satin and georgette lace.

Mrs. Thomas Dow, the bride's mother, received with the bridal party. Her gown was in the season's new dark green tones, in Elizabeth crepe romaine with hat of felt in matching tones and she wore a corsage of greenier roses. Mrs. J. L. MacLaurin also assisted in the receiving line. Her gown was in the French beige shade with hat to match. She also wore a corsage of roses.

The bride's table was particularly tractive, being centred with the bride's cake and arranged with pink asters in silver holders and vases of Sweetheart roses and ferns. During the honors at the tea and coffee urns were Mrs. Alex. McDonald and Mrs. Kenneth C. Shaw. Mrs. F. J. Moore cut the fcs. The services of Miss Helen Kelly Society, the guests were Mesdames Donald Dow, A. Pudic, J. F. Mark, W. Morrison, Malcolm McDonald and Allen Walker. The dining room was effectively arranged with pink and white streamers and flowers.

The toast to the bride and groom was proposed by E. E. Wood, M.A., principal of Port William Collegiate and Vocational School and ably responded to by the bridegroom.

Many handsome gifts were received and included silver, linen, china and flatware. Among the gifts was a handsome five piece silver service including the coffee urn, the tea pot, cream and sugar and tray from the staff of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, where Mr. MacLaurin is principal. The bride was feted at showers, bridges and teas prior to the event. She is a graduate of the McKellar General Hospital and after her graduation here took a post graduate course in the Manhatton Eye, Ear and Nose Hospital, New York. Later she was on the staff of the Tarrytown Hospital, New York.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was a white gold wrist watch ,to the matron of honor an aquamarine dinner ring set in white gold; to the soloist a Chinese crystal choker, to the best man white gold cuff links, and to the organist a silver cigarette holder, and to Eleanor MacLaurin a pearl bracelet.

Amid the felicitations of a host of their friends Mr. and Mrs. MacLaurin left on the Assiniboia for Port Mc-Nichell en route to Belleville where they will reside at 229 Dundas St. east.

Going away the bride donned a stunning model gown in English green crepe romaine, with pearl beaded neck line. The gown was fashioned on long Princess lines. With this was worn an imported velour coat in the same tones with trox collar and loan model hat of transparent velvet in shaded mist grey tones. French petticoat was arranged on the pretty model. Green suede and reptile shoes with matching hose and bag in green suede completed the lovely bridal travelling ensemble.

A LONG LETTER

Halifax, N. S.— A Detroit lady who is visiting in Halifax knows now that some men keep their promise to write long letters. When she was leaving her home, the lady asked her father to write her all the news to Halifax, and that gentleman, who is 75 years of age, promised he would. His daughter insisted that it be a really long letter, and Mr. L. W. Warren, the father, answered quite gravely that he would send a long letter. The letter arrived. It was written on 1-4 inch ribbon paper, 23 1-2 yards in length.

It is said that bee culture is essential to successful farming because the bees furnish the soil with nitrates.

Holloway St. Church Celebrates Harvest

Rev. Harold B. Neal Pays Tribute to Farm Life

TILLS OF TODAY

"These visible tokens before us are mute but eloquent evidences of the bountiful mercy of our God, and of the daily care of our Heavenly Father," said Rev. Harold B. Neal, preaching at harvest festival services at Holloway Street United Church last evening. Before him on the communion railing, and on the pulpit platform was the produce of the garden and the field, the rich luscious fruits of all kinds, the corn, wheat and oats, the vegetables, exulting in their glory of color and sustenance for man. Mr. Neal prayed for those who till the fields and made the earth produce, and for those who due to unemployment cannot enjoy the richness of produce which they and their families require. The organ and choral music was full festal in character, Mrs. R. P. Hagerman and Mr. Herbert Wrightmyer sang solos in keeping with the thanksgiving service.

Ancient Festival

"We are following a very ancient but worthy custom when we set aside one day for harvest festival or harvest home. The idea stretches back into early history, latest was asked to set aside the first fruits of the field for the Lord," said the minister.

Today the bounteous gifts of the members of Holloway Street congregation were distributed among those citizens about the city who are in need of such food.

The texts of the sermon were Psalm 103, "Bless the Lord" and St. John's Words". And Jesus lifted up his eyes and said: "Father I thank Thee."

The front of the church was adorned with every product of the field. Large stalks of corn, and sheaves of wheat and oats formed as it were pillars with which were the rich emblems of harvest. In the centre was a large loaf of bread, emblematic of human labor and of the reward of labor in the physical realm and also in the spiritual sphere.

Agriculture First

"Shall gifts remind us," said Rev. Mr. Neal, of the great blessing of labor and skill in the agriculture realm. We do not think enough of Those who till our fields and our prairies and unfailingly toil from year to year. There are few men who can be dispensed with on the farm. We could do without skilled labor perhaps in other walks and we would suffer for lack of the products of their labor, but if the labor on the farm were withdrawn, the world would soon be in harvest waste and life cease to exist. We are depending upon the work of the masses on the farm.

Jesus and Nature

"This occasion reminds us that Jesus was a great lover of the countryside. How He loved to stroll across the country lanes. How he drew illustrations from the field: as the grain of mustard seed and the fowls of the air. He loved the lilies too for He spoke of little children playing in the market place but oh, how He gloried in the great outdoors!

"The Psalmist says, "Bless the Lord" as he attempts to express the deepest instinct of life when he stands in the presence of the bountiful harvest from that country is exporting its wheat.

"Daily bread is grown year after year. It is not like the minerals stored up. We boast of civilization, of learning, of chemistry, but with all the learning we cannot make wheat or bread in a laboratory of science. We have to go back to God, the giver, the back of the wheat are the soil, the sun, the shower, God.

Friends

"As we go through life we realize the importance of friends, and something of the joy of trusting and of being trusted and understood, of looking into the face of father, mother, brother, sister and family, and see the relationships which come within the scope of our social life. Now Jesus realizes the value of fellowship and expresses gratitude for those whom God had given Him in the world.

"Jesus gave thanks for revelation. He was thankful that the great truths of life were realized by the disciples who were not worldly wise. Do we stop to realize the debt we owe to those who have grasped some of God's truths, in every realm of science, in industry and commerce. We ought to thank God every day for the men and women who gave themselves to reveal God to us, and made provision for our enjoyment. At the tomb of Lazarus Jesus realized that the Father's door was ajar and all the spiritual and material were not far apart. Jesus saw His father and heard his father's voice and said — "I thank Thee that thou has heard me."

In the afternoon His Honour Judge Dieroche addressed the Sunday school at the rally day service. One hundred and fifty years ago the Sunday school idea was launched and today there are thirty-three million young people and children enrolled in Sunday schools of the world.

the Father of all. We talk highly of our modern literature but for deep and majesty think of this psalm where in the Psalmist thinks of the broken body, the help and power of God through nature and other agencies. He thinks of the lost redeemed and of the great gifts of kindness and infinite mercy, and of the redemption of the slave, and he sits that Magi's harp and quot table as he sings in a great paean of praise for the beneficence of God.

MAN FORGETS

"How meagre is our praise" remarked the preacher, how stilted our gratitude! how thoughtless we are! We somehow take the years of plenty for granted and seem to forget them in years of drought and famine. We forget the years of health, but when we are laid aside even for a time we complain. We are driven in gratitude to God when we have barely escaped some calamity. We may thank God if we escape an earthquake or famine but somehow we feel not called upon to thank God unless we barely escape. Rarely do we thank God for the things that do not come in our way."

Christ's Gratitude

Speaking of gratitude the minister asked, "Are we thankful as He was thankful?" He took the story in the gospel of John one of the gems showing us the heart of the Master, for all things wrapped up in the heart of Christ have universal application. Jesus gave thanks for physical and material benefits, for, social joys, for revelation into the world of truth, for great spiritual blessings. Before the crowds He gave thanks for daily bread. God has given the blessing of daily bread. Today it is said there is overproduction but there is no over production; there is not proper distribution. Tonight as we sit here, tens of thousands of children are starving to death in China and Russia, while Abstinence is Urged by W.C.T.U.

Mrs. H. Pearsall, 25 Queen St., opened her home for a W.C.T.U. Parlor meeting and gave a gracious welcome to her guests. Mrs. (Dr.) Cronk, Supt., of this department of W. C. T. U. work, presided in her usual capable manner. The program opened with the hymn "O Saviour let me walk with Thee" and prayer by Mrs. Farnsworth. Mrs. Cronk read a selection from a lover of nature, setting forth the lessons to be learned from the beauties of September. Mrs. Houston contributed a vocal solo while Miss Laura Lavoie was pianist. Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop was the speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Bishop delivered an interesting address on how true temperance means abstinence from everything that is harmful to body, mind and soul. She said that Christ came to give life—more abundant life was held to mean abundant life was held to mean temperance. Miss Gartley and Mrs. Hunter expressed the thanks of the audience for the address. The approaching convention was again emphasized and progress was reported in the arrangements of this event. The social hour which followed the program, when light refreshments were served, afforded an opportunity for those present to get acquainted and to discuss questions of mutual interest along the many sided lines of work of the Society.

SONIA

By Vida Hurst

"Of course."

"Well, you are, but it's because you are years ahead of the average. You are not 'queer,' Sonia. But you are so wonderfully yourself. . . ." And I like you just as is."

"Then I shan't change ever," she promised.

When they had left the cafe and were in search of her car, he asked when she would have to be home.

"No particular time. Why?"

"Let's take a long ride, shall we?" Snuggled beside him in his open car, Sonia threw back her head to the wind and stars. It was a clear night. The lights of the city receded like snuffed out candles blinking into dark nose. He had insisted on wrapping a heavy coat of his about her and the rough warmth of it embraced her like his arms.

'I'm getting sentimental," Sonia confessed to herself, but I don't care."

How wonderful to fly out the same road she had taken on Sunday with Bertie, to know that instead of Bertie's cigar smother, she was cuddled beside Franklin Crane.

"This makes me happy—happy," she sang.

Me, too, Sonia. I could ride for hours on a night like this. But I even like to ride in the rain."

She thought she might, too, if it could be with him.

Miles away from the city he stopped the car Sonia tingling with his nearness and, judging by all past experiences, felt, dimly, that he would kiss her now. She waited him to kiss her. She ached to be held close in his arms, just once.

But he made no attempt to make love to her.

She agreed with him, softly. In a moment now he would turn and seize her as Don and Tom had done.

He pushed his gloves, flexing his tired muscles, then drew out his watch "Golly! do you see what time it is? Well have to go home to get you back."

"I'm not at the Y.W. now" spoke the daring Sonia.

He laughed but started the car. A sense of disappointment came over her

"But I wanted him to" she thought "I didn't want the corners to end their chat."

A dreadful thought flashed through her mind! "Perhaps I'm not so attractive any more."

The charms that had proved so irresistible in Muncie might not be so potent in Chicago. For the first time in doubt of her charm she sat, quietly. Could he possibly have seen how much she cared?

"Why so silent, Sonia?"

Suddenly her mind cleared. He should never have reason to believe that his lack of caresses had made a difference in her. She faced him, smiling. She laughed and sang. And she found him as gay a playmate as she had ever seen. He shouted in response to her wit.

They recoiled Maxine's at a quarter to 12.

"Will you come in?" she asked perfunctorily.

"I will. Don't you think I want to see where you live?"

She led the way to the door, ringing before she tried her key. There was no answer.

"Maxine must have been stepping out to-night," she explained.

She lighted the glowing orange lamps, bringing out the sheen of the draperies. Chinese brass bowls, filled with flowers, stood before the fireplace Splashes of color in cushions, prints and hangings leaped from the darkness. Overcome with the joy of possession,

Sonia stood quite still The coat he had loaned her hung grotesquely from her shoulders. She flung out her arms in a grand gesture.

"Isn't this beautiful? Do you blame me for being happy here?"

"Sonia, you darling!"

His arms were about her. His lips quivering against hers.

INSTALLMENT X

Stunned she faced him. Unresolved

"Sonia, you aren't angry?"

She said nothing, but drew herself lightly from his arms.

"Should I be?"

"Certainly not! Why look here, you're crying."

"I never cry," she said with heavy dignity dabbing at her wet eyes.

"But you are, Sonia, do you care so much?"

"Certainly not! I don't care at all." She threw off the heavy coat and held it out to him.

"Here's your coat. What's you're hurry?" she asked flippantly.

But he let it fall to the floor, came to her slowly and held her face up between his hands.

"You blessed little liar."

This time she did not resist him.

"You're wonderful."

He raised her face to him now, shaken, dizzy with happiness.

"Oh, I didn't dream it would be like this."

"Don't tell me you've never kissed any one before."

"Never any one like you," she answered seriously.

He drew her to him tenderly.

"Sonia, you combine all the witchery of a wood nymph mixed with the charm of a little girl. Where did you get your wisdom?"

"I don't know. Born with it."

Her voice was ragged with emotion.

She felt that she could not endure that piercing sweetness a second time!

"Sonia, you'd better go before Maxine comes."

"Cruel Sonia to make me leave now."

She smiled.

"But don't you see? We have years ahead of us. I can let you go to-night."

"Do you love me, Sonia?"

"I love you so much," she answered, "that all my life has been wasted with out you."

Alone she gazed at her mirrored figure. A new Sonia beamed from the glass. No cold-blooded model from a fashion magazine now, but a girl glowing with joy and the radiance of being loved.

She left her clothes lying in a heap on the floor, stepped into the white gown and in bed drew the covers up to her chin. Hugging her memories to her she fell asleep. She didn't care. Could she doubt the hunky, broken quality in his question: "Sonia, with out charms of evasion was either side of the gulf, in a golden mist of dreams she pictured them stepping down the years together. Young and strong and beautiful. No one else in the world so fluted her ideal of a man.

Where Maxine tiptoed in Sonia closed her eyes and feigned sleep. Even Maxine should steal any tiniest fragment of her dream to-night.

She woke at dawn, tingling with exhilaration. No other day in her life would ever be so happy. How she knew why she had felt so restless in Muncie. Love had come and all alive until she met Franklin Crane. But to be one tiny part of him was sheer physical satisfaction. Maxine would be sure all of her life, never anything but kind, even to Bertie. Her thought bounced away from him like a rubber ball. Bertie did not expect Franklin to be at the office when she arrived. But she longed for the moment when he would come. She knew her green eyes were wistful and sweet that morning as they had never been before. She sat straight and proud in her plain dark dress. But she was shivering with expectation.

At noon he had not come.

"A customer outside," thought Sonia the glory of her morning dimmed a little.

She went to lunch with Maxine, listening vaguely to a monologue on where she had been the night before, what the other women had worn, how Mac had said she 'hid them all skinned' when she came to looks.

WHOOPING COUGH

"Eyes, hair, figure, 'n everything. . . .Say, Sonia, do you hear what I'm saying?"

"I do! Hair figure and everything". Well don't look so far away when I'm chatting about my boy friend. I'll think you're in love with somebody."

Sonia laughed in sheer delight at an excuse for the laughter that was surging through every vein

"Who's in love? Not me! Guess again!"

But her lips were curving in ecstasy at the memory of his excited eyes, his mouth against hers, sweet, intoxicating . . . . She walked the street to the music of unseen choir, sublime, stately transcendent. But when she returned to the office he had not come. Down slipped another tiny cloud of glory. His desk remained closed all day and although she lingered after 5 o'clock she had no glimpse of him.

That night lying cold and lonely beside Maxine she wondered if his mother were ill whether he could not telephone.

Next day she waited with a lump in her breast that felt as if her heart were petrified. He must come, Any moment she would look up to hear his voice. "Did you miss me yesterday?" By 5 o'clock she had a splitting head ache.

"I think I'll fix me something to eat at home" she said to Maxine as they were putting on their hats.

"What's the idea? Sleeping together?"

"No!"

"Well come on with me. I'm going to meet Jack at 6 o'clock and go to a movie. You might as well come along."

Too dreamy to refuse Sonia followed She sat in the darkness on Mac's other side. Conscious that he was holding Maxine's hands. The thought of the dignified Mac being sentimental failed to impress her. She came to her eyes Every other girl in the theatre seemed to have some one more protective male slumping in the seat beside her. Mad she had no one.....

"Am I getting sorry for myself?" she asked scornfully. "I never thought I should do that. Besides I have nothing to feel badly about. He explained to me where he is when he is away."

"But why did he call! Surely there must be some moment when he might slip away from the most exacting of mothers.

When she was back in the apartment and Maxine and Mac had for a ride she went to the telephone. His number was engraved on her mind. She started to take the receiver down, then hesitated. Supposing when she called he should be annoyed?

The idea of Sonia, who had never pursued any man, telephoning him!

"I should die," she decided fiercely. "I'm going to settle this thing. Perhaps he is ill instead of his mother The least I can do is to call and find out."

She gave the number in a determined voice heard the faint buzz of the ring, then a low voice, evidently a servant's. But she flew from the telephone panic-stricken, without answering. She felt that she could not endure it if he should reply coldly.

Saturday afternoon as she left the office for the third day of his absence her eyes met the vacant desk. met Bertie's. The smile he met was her malignant, almost venomous. Sonia bowed her head and stared back at him. And the insolence of her green eyes must have reached him, for he turned away.

Late that night as she sat reading but dully conscious of the words, the telephone rang. Her first thought was of Bertie. Her tone was icy.

"Yes?"

"Sonia, I must see you tomorrow. The voice was Franklin Crane's.

Years rolled from Sonia at sound of that voice. Life came beating up into her tired limbs. She became young again. Her voice sang over the wire.

"Your mother is better?"

"Yes, much better. About tomorrow, you'll see me?"

"Of course. What shall we do?"

"I'd like to get away for a day. Let's go to the beach somewhere. I'll bring the food."

"Let me," begged Sonia. "You've had so much to think about. I can run out early in the morning and get something."

"That will be fine, dear."

She replaced the receiver, quivering All the blue days were erased from her mind as if they had never been. Like a child who is to be rewarded on the next day for having been very, very good, she climbed into bed and closed her eyes.

In the morning she rose before Max one was awake and slipped out to a little store near by. She purchased cheese and potted meat for sandwiches fruit and little cakes. The delight of Sonia shopping like a housewife made her smile.

"Perhaps some day you may be doing that very thing," she told herself.

It was the nearest she had approached any plan for the future. The web of a girl's first love is too light a guarantee for the heavy threads of reality.

By the time he came she had every thing packed in the car. In picnic mood she had worn old clothes, a heavy sweater and skirt, a crimson tam

"Hello schoolgirl!" he called.

"Hello yourself!"

He carried the basket to the car and they were off.

"For a whole day," he said joyously. "And you look as if you needed it," she sympathized. "Your eyes are so tired. Have you had any sleep at all?"

"Silly Sonia! As if that matters now. With all the hours ahead of us. Let's talk sense, darling. Do you love me all this morning?"

"Um!"

"As much as Wednesday?"

"Three times more."

"Also girl!"

Hilariously he stepped on the gas and the car roared out Stoney Island boulevard.

"I'm taking you to the dunes. Do you promise to be good?"

"I'll be perfectly promised," laughed Sonia, tossing her head.

The day was perfect. No mental cobwebs could resist the clean sweep of the wind. Sunlight transformed the world into gold and silver. When they had left the city behind both were silent until they reached the dunes. He helped her down the sandy path into fairyland . . . .a corner of the world for them alone. Secluded, with only a vast expanse of lake to share their secrets.

They threw themselves on the sand, laughing with laughter and their swift descent.

Then he put his arms about her, whispering "I've dreamed of this for weeks, Sonia."

Their kisses were joyous and as clean as the water booming on the beach.

"I love you, Sonia."

"Do you realize that is the first time you've said it?"

"And it will my eyes the night I saw you first."

"Was that what you were saying? I wasn't sure. Be careful. Don't tell Bertie we haven't been introduced."

Her voice was broken and sweet. She had been right, then, about that first night.

"I felt that way about you, too." she admitted. "When I stared across at you thought I'd give anything in the world to know you."

Her dreamy eyes said, "Stranger come hither" . . . . .

"And you came".

"I came. I saw. I conquered."

He put his arms about her.

"Didn't I, Sonia?"

She answered him, without words as he had wished.

Golden hours, fairly footed, slipped away. Sonia had no idea of the time. They ate sandwiches and figs and bananas, like children, wherever they were hungry. They tore off shore and waded in the cold water, shouting at the waves that splashed Sonia's knees and soaked her skirt.

"You'll take cold," she cautioned.

"I never take cold," she retorted, plunged in deeper and swaggering like a naughty child.

When they were tired they buried their feet in the sand and ate more sandwiches.

While she was shaking the sand from her stockings he leaned over and buried one bare white foot. The color rushed higher in her already glowing cheeks. But she made no protest.

When they were fully shod they returned to the shelter of a curved dune and watched the sun sink into the painted west. A gorgeous color-streak ed pagan ceremonial; Sonia drank in the beauty of it. When it dipped suddenly from sight the barren grayness of sky and lake made her shiver. She sought refuge in his arms.

On the way home he leaned over to pinch her cheek.

"Why so quiet?"

"I was just thinking what a wonderful day it has been."

"It was perfect, wasn't it?"

"Oh yes!"

"I suppose," he said gloomily, "we'll never be quite so happy again."

"Why, Mr. Crane?"

"Sonia a girl doesn't tell a man she loves him passionately and address him in the next breath like that."

"Franklin, then, I insist on calling you that very pessimistic remark."

"It isn't pessimistic. It's God's truth. Few things in the world are perfect, Sonia. You ought to know that. And the relations of men and women, or men and darling little girl like you, seem peculiarly subject to disaster.

She felt as if an icy wind had blown upon her heart.

"You're borrowing trouble. What could happen to us?"

"What couldn't? How much chance for instance, do we have of duplicating a day like this?

"I don't see why not," she puzzled. "A million reasons. Business my brother, fate.—"

"Fate," she scoffed, but in bravado "I take mine in my hands and twist it to suit myself. I'm captain of my own ship."

"No one is that. Sonia. Influences that we never dream of are at work shaping our destinies even before we are born."

"Don't say that," she begged. "It doesn't sound like you. And I don't believe it."

"Believe it or not," he said grimly, "you're likely to find it out one of these days. Let's talk of something pleasant."

But, although she smiled at him, her eyes were clouded with sadness. Her heart ached with a poignant, tragic sweetness. So close is ecstasy to the border of despair.

When he left her at the door she felt that she might never see him again. A night's separation might put years between them.

"You'll be sure to come to the office to-morrow?"

"Sure I will."

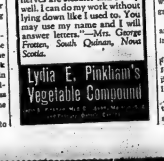
"And you'll come to my desk some time during the day?"

"Will I You watch me. Sonia. as if I could keep away."

"So that I'll be sure you still love me," she whispered, half laughingly.

"Never doubt that, Sonia. I'm afraid I'm going to love you too much."

Months afterwards she remembered this warning But now she drew his face down to hers, breathlessly.



"You couldn't do that."

INSTALLMENT XI

Sonia sat at her desk in the Thomas tal estate office like a queen on her throne. She would not have exchanged places with any monarch in the world that morning. Love had bodded well for her best. What was a crown compared to the white fire of her lover's kiss?

He had promised to come to her desk, so after 9.30 her fingers worked mechanically. Her mind was on the stairs which he would presently climb to her doorway. Not like Juliet's but in spite of the frigidity of the real estate office it had become perfumed and haunted with romance.

About 440 new books were added last year to the National Library for the Blind, the library circulates the volumes which charge among 10,000 sightless readers.

Better in Many Ways

"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as Change of Life is advertised in a booklet. That is how I came to take it. It has helped me a great deal, especially a pain in my side. My appetite is better. My nerves are steadier and I sleep well. I can do my work without lying down like I used to. You may use my name and I will answer letters."—Mrs. George Frontes, South Quinan, Nova Scotia.

INTELLIGENCE TESTS

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Before the Great War, intelligence tests were interesting new wrinkles but comparatively few persons had heard of them and still fewer took them seriously.

Nowadays everybody knows about intelligence tests or wants to know about them.

They are employed in the psychological laboratory, in schools and colleges, to grade pupils and in lieu of entrance examinations.

They are also used as aids in employment, in factories, in department stores—everywhere they are gradually making their way into businesses of various kinds.

In testing recruits for the army and navy during the war—often thousands a day—intelligence tests demonstrated their value beyond question.

Intelligence tests are also known as mental tests.

They set out to determine whether an individual is of average below average, or of superior intellectual capacity.

By means of these tests, feeble-mindedness, mental retardation, mental deterioration etc. may be discovered.

The most famous of the tests are the Binet-Simon (French) and the Standard Revision of the Binet test, (American).

Each of these scales according to years, from three up through eighteen.

A number of questions are listed under each year and a normal person is supposed to answer correctly all questions under the year of his actual, physical age as well as all questions listed under the years preceding it.

Gifted individuals can of course, obtain a higher score than their age would indicate. In other words, a ten year-old may be able to answer questions that only a child of twelve or thirteen years is supposed to.

The feeble-minded on the other hand usually score three or more years below their physical age. That is, a mentally defective child of ten would probably not score a mental age greater than seven.

When the difference between physical and mental years is less than three, the case may be only one of mental retardation, although in the higher types of mental defect—the so-called "morons" and border-line cases—the difference may be no more than one or two years.

Great as have been the strides in all kinds of mental tests, whether its test mentality is such or whether they be employed to test ability or capacity in a certain line, the future will undoubtedly prove "their even greater usefulness.

Intelligence testing of all kinds is an interesting study and it is worth investigating.

However, as I have mentioned before in these columns, wrong inference may be drawn if one is not expert in giving tests and in interpreting them.

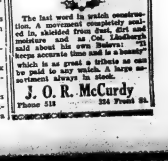
It has happened scores of times that a principal, a teacher, for instance, did not score as high as a pupil in the school. Such a result nevertheless, is not a criticism which can justly be leveled against tests, in instances like these either the right tests were not chosen or they were not interpreted properly, or both.

Tests for children are not suited for adults or vice versa.

Tests can lead one far astray if not handled scientifically.

Tests must be selected correctly to obtain the information desired.

BETTER QUALITY



While present indications point to a lighter apple and fruit yield than last year, a crop of much better quality is also indicated. The latest forecast by the Dominion Department of Agriculture estimates a total of some 3,000,000 barrels, or 61 per cent below the five-year average. Production prospects in Eastern Canada are lighter than last year while British Columbia expects a heavier pack than in 1929. The general prospect, however, is that while yield may be lighter fruit will be of good size and well colored. Extensively dry weather in Ontario and British Columbia has reduced estimates of production for plums, prunes, peaches and pears, although yields are expected to exceed the 1929 figures.

MARKETING GEESE

The time to prepare geese for market is when the weather turns cold in the fall, state poultry experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. They should then be taken off pasture and those selected for market should be placed in confinement. They should be provided with plenty of water and grit and kept clean. They should be fed heavily on whole corn, the last few days before killing. Twenty-four to forty hours before killing time should be starved, but given plenty of water. Care should be used in plucking, the dry or steam methods being recommended, for the reason that the feathers are particularly valuable, bringing as much as 60 cents per pound. The dressed bird should be cooled over with a damp cloth and set aside to cool. The twelve-bird box makes a desirable market package.

Advice to Lovelorn

Dear Miss Fairfax: We are two young girls and are considered good looking. We have quite a few boy friends but we go out with two college boys we like very much. They are better educated than we are and consequently think themselves above us. Do you think we should waste our time on these boys or go with those of our own class?

Two Anxious Girls.

Dear Girls—Keep down in your hearts. I am sure that you know the answer to your problem. If your college friends as your letter indicates, try to impress you with their superior knowledge and make you feel uncomfortable when with them, don't you think you would enjoy yourselves much better with some of your other friends?

Wonder if She Has Forgotten Him?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 8 and have been in love with a boy of 20 for two years. I have never gone out with him as my folks did not approve. He was employed in an ice cream parlor he is always over. I see him every day. The family sent me away for four months to forget him, but it didn't work. What's worrying me is this—about a month ago the folks agreed to let me go with him and we've seen so much of each other during that time, that it seems I don't care as much as I once did. Is it possible that I am forgetting him, or don't I care any more. When he talks of going away I want to hold him.

ANXIOUS.

You are too young and inexperienced to know your own mind at present. When your family didn't want you to go out with this boy, it seemed the most desirable thing on earth to you. They have now given their consent, and you find he doesn't interest you as much as when he was forbidden. Yet—when he talks of going away you want to hold him—don't you see that what you want is something you can't have, and till your judgment is a little more mature it would be very foolish to think seriously of anyone. Other girls parents might have a very valuable lesson from this girl's letter. Isn't it the forbidden which always attracts?

Good Manners

For 13th Fairy (?)

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman?

I have been calling on a young lady for the past five months and we intend to announce our engagement.

1 How often is it proper to call on her?

2 How often would you suggest that I bring her something—and what?

3 Do I introduce her to my family before the engagement party or can the party serve as a means for the meeting of both families.

4 Does my family present her with one gift?

Reader.

1 That is a very delicate question for a third person to answer: I think that you and the young lady will have to decide that. It depends upon your own two hearts how busy you both are, socially and professionally, and many other things that only the two people concerned can decide.

2 This depends upon your pocketbooks as well as upon your inclination. Unless you do not intend to figure closely on the financial side of life, you should both be saving for the new home and these plans should be engaging your attention and your purses. Before a young man is engaged to a young lady the only gifts

By LUCILLE

Dear Readers: Lazy days that call for sports and here an insert for sports and here an important detail of the costume comes into its own—the shoe. You can't go for long enjoyable walks, or ramble about looking the last word in chic if your shoes are uncomfortable or dowdy. So let us see what the season's vogue is doing about shoes.

A famous French shoe designer says this about the importance of the shoe in the costume of the well-dressed woman, "The shoe, in a carefully created costume, should be noticed only by accident. It should never strike the eye in blatant fashion, but once it is noted, it should be of such good taste, and so suited to the wearer that it will receive careful attention."

Let us consider first of all shoes for street wear. Oxfords are the most popular, and the models this year are more subtle than before, probably because of the use of suede. Ripple skins, combined with kid or suede, are very smart in oxfords. Heels for all shoes have a tendency this year to be lower while the pointed toes are the latest development in fashion. The stub toes and very short thick heels are not for the slender foot.

Grundy allows are flowers, candy, books and music. After the engagement is announced the young man's gifts may be anything that he can afford, except wearing apparel or anything that comes under the head of "masculine."

3 You should bring about the meeting of both families as soon as you can possibly arrange it. Good taste and good judgment demand this. It would look very awkward to have to present the families to each other at the engagement party. The gala party is a fashionable way to them no closer than your relationship to your mock fiancee friends.

Ask your fiancee if you may bring your mother and father to tea on a Sunday afternoon or else, or if that is not convenient to call on a specified evening when it will be convenient to call. Form demands that your family should call on your fiancee's family, not hers or yours.

4 Yes, that would be a delightful thing for them to do. The engagement gift must be a very personal one—something for the bride herself and not for the new home, as is a wedding gift. Perhaps they would like to combine financial forces and give the bride-to-be a dressing set with her monogram on each piece.

A Correct Pronunciation

By Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correct way to pronounce "aunt"? It seems to be different in this part of the country, P.W.

"Mrs." should be pronounced "missis." The accent is on the first syllable. The "i" in both syllables is short "i" as in "admit."

Correct Calling Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me re visiting cards. Is it permitted to write one's own name on the plain card or must it be engraved or printed——When calling at a home where the sister of the hostess is also living how many cards should be left? Should a card also be left for the husband also? When the sister is unmarried should she leave a card for her brother with whom she lives.

What is the correct size in cards for women?

I enjoy your remarks in the Ontario Intelligencer very much. You give a great deal of useful information.

Sincerely Interested.

Engraved cards of medium size and pearly square are the prevailing fashion. A lady's card is about three inches long by two wide, or two and a half long by one an three-quarters wide. A written card is never used, man's gifts are to be nothing that he can afford, except wearing apparel or anything that comes under the head of "masculine."

When calling at a home where the sister of the hostess lives a card should be left for each one. In the case mentioned you would leave two of your cards, and three of your brother's, one of his being intended for the husband of your friend.

For your other question, please send a stamped addressed envelope for a reply.

If the Lady Travels by Car

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If a gentleman is visiting at home in the afternoon or evening, should a man put her on the car?

Self so should he also pay her fare? If either is correct which is most generally used?

THANK YOU.

1—It is polite for him to do so. 2—Not necessarily. But most men try to hand the fare to the conductor as unobtrusively as possible while he is assisting the lady into the car. He must be very busy and deft at the game then.

"Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.

INSPECTED FRUIT

The shipping point inspection service administered by the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is doing more than anything else to improve the quality and extend the market range of fruits and vegetables in both the domestic and export markets. Providing as it does a neutral determination, the certificate of the federal inspection service is accepted everywhere as the criterion of quality. The service applies to the growers as well as the fruit dealers and the housewife buying canned products in Canada knows that she can get what she buys when she buys by the quality mark—Choice, Fancy or Standard—which appears on the label. The quality determined by inspection is the basis for fixture grades into the cans before the label goes on. The Federal Grade marked in the container is the consumer's safeguard and the assurance of quality.

Elaine And Her Ideas From Paris

THE COMPLEX RETINA

By Lou's E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

In the rear of each eyeball and occupying about half of the globe of the eye is that most delicate and highly complex structure, the retina.

For the most part is looks even and smooth. About in the centre, however, is a slight depression called the "macula lutea," or yellow spot, because it is slightly of that color.

Away from this for some distance, and toward the nose, there can be seen the entrance of the optic nerve, the fibres of which spread out into the retina. This nerve connects with the brain.

The retina is made up of eight layers of pigmenta cells, some of nerve fibres, and there is also a layer of so-called "rods and cones" which have to do with the ability to perceive color.

The means by which the retina helps to convert stimuli from the outside into sensations of light is a most complicated mechanism.

Suffice it to say that light stimuli set up in the optic nerve and retina certa in changes which are carried to the "Visual sensorium" of the brain, which then recognizes or feels, one might say, the sensation of light. In same marvelous manner, however, the eye rise to and carry light sensations which however, the visual sensorium actually produces and perceives as such.

The rods and cones mentioned above have to do with the perception of color.

It is supposed—although even this theory has not been expanded and proved in all respects—that all our color sensations come from the ability to perceive only three primary colors, namely red, green and blue.

When red is perceived, for instance, it means that the rods and cones of whatever nerve structure goes with them are stimulated.

If all three colors—red, green and violet—are stimulated then the sensation is that of white. Various stimuli of varying intensity from any one or all of these three primary colors would then account for our perception and recognition of all the other colors and shades in existence.

Now then, if rods or cones are deficient in the light-perceiving layer of the retina we get persons who can not distinguish red and green or both —in other words, they are "color blind" for certain colors.

There are also those who are color blind only for certain shades, although it is very rare, who are unable to perceive colors at all.

Many more men are affected with color blindness than women.

It really has no serious significance, although color blindness is a source of danger in driving automobiles, for engineers running a train, men aboard ships, etc.

Since the eye is so delicate, especially the retina and its adjacent structures, it is obvious that any difficulty in seeing or any inflammatory condition would at once call for attention and expert attention.

The eye cannot be trifled with or neglected.

And like every highly organized mechanism, when it gets out of order it is harder to right again than in case with a simple and tough structure.

The "Tough" and the "Tender" Minded

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

The late William James—one of the world's greatest psychologists—divided people into two opposing groups. One he called the "tough-minded." the other the "tender-minded."

By tough-minded he meant those who push forward, often rather ruthlessly, and actually accomplish things.

Under the tender-minded he grouped all those sensitive and retiring people who are thinkers rather than doers.

Take an invention, by way of example. The inventor himself—the one who through genius brings something new into being—is usually a rather timid and retiring type of individual who is shut up within himself and his ideas and knows comparatively little about the ways and harshness of the world.

If it were only for such a tender-minded person, however, no invention would ever, perhaps, be marketed and exploited. The people at large would not profit by the invention no matter how useful or revolutionary it might be.

So along comes a tough-minded individual, a keen business man who knows all the tricks of manufacture and competition. He puts the invention "across" as the saying goes.

Both kinds of minds you see have their uses. The world could ill afford to do without either.

In using the terms "tender" and "tough" Prof. James surely meant no disparagement to either. "Tough" in this sense merely signifies a certain degree of force and strength of character so necessary these modern days if an individual is not to be snowed under.

Perhaps better terms are those same opposing types are those of the psychoanalytic school of psychology employs.

The tender-minded they call the "introverter" the tough-minded are called the "extroverter." The word "verter" means "turning"—that is turning inwards or outwards.

And so it really is. For the introvertent tend to turn their emotions inwards and to shut themselves up and away from people and their doings while the extroverten turn their emotions outwards and take delight in the battle of life.

Introverts are inventive sensitive, thoughtful, romantic, idealistic, imaginative and often religious.

Extroverts are rash, gregarious, bold materialistic, self assertive and robust.

Surely civilization needs both kinds of the need poets, novelists, dramatists, scientific research workers, inventors, painters, sculptors, etc, etc. But we also need builders and engineers bankers, manufacturers and all the other extrovert types.

No one is either wholly an introvert or an extrovert.

Perhaps the ideal would be a fifty-fifty character—half introvert and half extrovert.

At any rate, it is interesting to interpret what people stand for in the light of this scientific principle. It is also interesting to observe yourself and your friends.

Most of us are too much one way or the other and an attempt at better balance would be desirable.

THE BACON CYCLE

The production of hogs in Canada at the present time is at the low point in the production cycle, state the Live stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Current supplies, and supplies in prospect are much more than sufficient to meet the very active home demand. It is noted however, that there has been very little falling off in hog production, but rather that supplies have failed to keep pace with a growing domestic consumption. There are signs at the present time that the corner of this year may show a substantial increase in bacon production while at the same time the readjustment in prices may result in the resumption of bacon exports.

Five Million for Ontario Relief

OTTAWA, Sept. 27 — Ontario will receive not less than $5,000,000 of the $20,000,000 Federal appropriation for relief of unemployment.

A portion of this money will be handed over by the Provincial government while some of it will be expended in direct relief to meet emergency conditions in certain localities, in which the Dominion Government will provide one-third of the cost of taking care of the unemployed where suitable work cannot be obtained. In organized districts the Federal Government will pay half the cost of direct relief. The machinery of the Provinces will be utilized in the distribution of funds. For example, work on the section of the trans-Canada highway in Ontario will be carried on by the Provincial Government organization, and the Federal Government will simply hand over to the Province its share of the money.

CURING PORK

Temperature is an important factor in the home curing of pork observe experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The meat reases to have salt when the temperature falls below 36 degrees Fahrenheit. Therefore, dry curing to be successful must be done in a room in which the temperature does not long remain below this point. In brine curing care must be taken to avoid fermentation which occurs when the temperature rises above 45 degrees F., and also to see that the temperature of the room does not drop below 35 degrees F. It is also well to freshen brine frequently as this tends to prevent fermentation. Detailed instructions in the home curing of pork and other meats is available free of charge on application to the Department at Ottawa.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Passion Fire

Ellsworth Davis

Sam Johnson shuffled wearily toward his small home in the Bedford mill district after a long day at the shuttle. He erected a lone pipe from his mouth by a penny postal and muttered profanely.

A car drove into the yard and John-son stuck the card into his pocket without reading it then got down to the machine in which he had been sitting.

"Hello, Brooks."

"Hello Johnson." I drove over to tell you that you've got to get off the farm. That mortgage is long overdue and I'm going to foreclose," stated Brooks curtly.

"How wait, Brooks. Give us fellow time. Maybe I can raise the money," mumbled Johnson, instantly grasping at a tall, loose jointed straw over the head of Brooks car.

"You've had plenty of time to raise the money. You're letting the farm go back every year. That west forty needs fertilizer and you haven't used any, as I told you to. You're corn isn't in and here it is almost June. The farm would be worth a lot more to me than it is to you on the market. I'll let you on it another year. You've heard me," snapped Brooks and started his engine. He drove out of the yard, wiped a back-ing look, leaving Johnson to stare mournfully at the machine until it topped the hill and disappeared from view.

Johnson glanced over his farm, a desolating look in his shifty blue eyes. The mortgage was for four thousand and the farm was worth double that amount. Farm lands had declined in value but Brooks wouldn't lose anything by foreclosing as Johnson well knew.

But to let a young whipper-snapper like Brooks get the best of him in a horse trade? Not show the young rip. His pale blue eyes suddenly ignited as an idea struck him. He smiled and knew he had been for-tunate thousand. And the insurance was made out to Johnson and not to Brooks—an oversight on Brooks' part. Johnson hated and exposed ready yellow teeth. Brooks wasn't a smart alec all.

Johnson took a chew of tobacco and made his plans. The house was half back from the road and at least a half mile from the nearest neighbor. A fire started in the attic—with the wind in the south—would take the house and outbuildings. Le-brooks fo ahead and foreclose. "The buildings will be an ash heap and Tll have the money," he thought gleefully.

He slapped a tank high spiritually. Early tomorrow night there would be a community gathering in Bedford and all of his neighbors would probably go there. The fire could get a good start before anyone discovered it—then it'd be too late to save the buildings.

Before craftily aided Johnson's plans. The following day there was a strong south wind that would carry flames from the house to the other buildings.

Using the excuse that he was going up to the attic to get seed corn which was stored there Johnson climbed the stairs and carefully closed the attic door. An old mattress filled with husks, rags and other rubbish provided kindling for his intended fire. The window had a broken pane and it had been draped with an old blanket which would effectually conceal the fire until the interior of the house was well ablaze.

"Pa, oh pa," called a childish voice. Johnson hastily stepped out of the attic, closing the door after him.

"What do you want, Jim?" he snapped at the tow-headed youngster who stood at the foot of the stairs.

"Pa, Mr. Johnson is going to town now and says he will take us kids along. Kin we go?"

"I guess so."

Johnson chuckled good humoredly. Everything was going the clockwork. Jolson would keep the kids in town until after the meeting. They'd be out of the way. That only left he and his wife to be there when he set the fire.

He hurried through his chores after supper, changed his clothes and drove his rickety car around in front of the house.

"Aren't you nearly ready Martby?" he called impatiently.

"Yes, I'm coming, Sam," called his wife, darting hurriedly out the front door. She got into the car beside him.

"Oooh—forgot my money", exclaimed Johnson, slapping his hip pocket. "I'll go get it."

He leaped out of the car and entered the house. It was the work of a few seconds to touch off the piled-up rubbish in the attic. A minute later the old car clattered toward town.

When Johnson and his wife reached the community hall in Bedford the place was crowded. He seated himself and began a leisurely inspection of the audience. One by one he picked out his neighbors. They were all there—no chance of one of them seeing the fire—until it was too late.

The meeting began. Johnson was entertaining, but from time to time Johnson stirred uneasily in his seat. Supposing—no, one happened along the road and discovered the fire before it got a good start? It'd put a crimp in his plans.

It was a full half hour after Johnson had entered the hall when a man ran down the aisle excitedly calling to Johnson.

"Your house and buildings are afire. Everyone out to help save what we can," ordered the newcomer.

The meeting broke up in hurry-up and cars roared toward the scene of the conflagration. The Bedford fire engine, an antiquated hand pumper was there but its single, feeble stream of water was making small impression on the flames. The house and outbuildings were raging inferno and the heat rove back the fire fighters.

Two hours later the farm buildings were smoking heaps of ruins.

Johnson sat on a box, trying to appear down-hearted.

"Tough luck, Sam," sympathized Jones, the Bedford fire insurance agent. Man, why in the devil didn't you renew your insurance?"

Johnson stared at him dumbly. "Renew my insurance. Oooh, I didn't know it had run out."

"But I sent a card. You must have got it yesterday," reminded Jones.

Johnson groaned. That damned penny postal was the notice. And he hadn't even read it.

"It's too bad for Brooks, too," said Jones.

"Dlets again, Jones," said Brooks joining the two men. "You see this other insurance was made out to Mr. Johnson. So when it ran out, I re-insured the buildings in my own name, with another company. The law gives me that right, you know."

FASCISTS FAVOR ARMY CONTROL

Hitler Declares for Trial of Men Who Started 1918 Revolution

Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 26.—Adolph Hitler, dark-haired man of medium physique and sallow face, took the witness stand at the treason trial of three army officers here yesterday and outlined the plans of his powerful Fascist party for evasion of the Versailles Treaty and nullification of the constitution of the German Republic.

Hitler said illegal as well as legal methods would be used to accomplish the goal of the Fascist party, which became the second strongest in the Reichstag at the recent elections.

The suave Fascist leader said his party would seek to triumph complete ly after two or three more Reichstag elections. He said the party would then change the constitution, "scrap the treaties imposed upon Germany and establish a new Federal court to try "the instigators of the criminal revolution of 1918", which resulted in establishment of the German Republic.

"Then, indeed, the decapitated heads may roll in the sand," Hitler said, and spectators in the court room and among the riotous crowd outside raised a cheer, despite the warning of the president.

May Mean Dictatorship

The general reaction to Hitler's testimony which he did not mention specifically the Versailles Treaty or the Young reparations plan, was immediately noticeable. Combined with a the army of the Olks party not to compromise with the strong Socialist party information of a cabinet that might be able to command a majority in the Reichstag, the Hitler exposition of Fascist party aims renewed with more strength than ever before the speculation on establishment of a "strong semi-dictatorship" to solve the present parliamentary crisis and protect the republican constitution from external party attacks. The latest parliamentary developments have greatly diminished hopes of solving the crisis without resort to some type of dictatorial government.

The revelations of Fascist work in strength of the party in the new Reichstag, coupled with Hitler's testimony, have caused Government leaders virtually to abandon any plans for permitting Fascist participation in the cabinet and also have changed the attitude of many industrialists who believed the Fascists would moderate their policies if given a measure of power.

IMPORTANT CROP

The rapid increase in its use for human food and medicinal purposes makes the barley crop one of growing economic importance, Cereal-ists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture state that barley to the extent of upwards of 140,000,000 pounds is used annually as food or in medicines. As food it takes the forms of barley flour cream of barley, pearl or pot barley as well as being used in its natural state. It is particularly valuable in some form of malt in proprietary medicines because of its frvalry for turning its starches of foods into maltose, a form of sugar, making them more readily assimilable.

Ashley's team won two out of three games, while Watson's also had two wins with a plus nine, which put it in the semi-finals, and these men were the winners of the second prize which is beautiful silk eiderdown.

On Friday evening an alarm was given that the store at Crookston was on fire. Several from Madoc went to help fight the fire, but both buildings were destroyed with very little saved.

Mr. Grant Cronk has only recently purchased the Blue Store at Crookston, and suffers very heavy loss as a large stock was carried, which was only partly covered by insurance.

The fire started about ten o'clock when Mr. Coulter tried to extinguish a large gasoline lamp which hung over the barber chair in the store, when it exploded and immediately the building was in flames. Mrs. Coulter, who was in the building adjoining escaped with her child, who was sleeping upstairs but very little of the contents of the two buildings were saved.

Mr. Coulter was slightly burned while attempting to save part of the contents.

GO AFTER BUSINESS and GET IT!

"THESE days of business complexities demand foresight and courage.

"General business conditions in Canada are fundamentally sound. They are perceptibly improving, and provision must be made to capitalize the opportunities of to-day and to-morrow.

"Manufacturers and retailers who advertise to-day are reaping good returns.

"Money is not 'spent' in advertising; it is invested.

"Folly whispers in the ears of executives: 'Cut down your advertising and save money'.

"Timidity suggests the use of the blue pencil and the consequent loss of a market won by years of intensive cultivation.

"Improve your product, give good values and the Canadian people will buy them."

Every man, every woman and every child is still a consumer.

Are they consuming your goods?

The effective, economical and sure road for gaining consumer acceptance is the daily newspaper.

Every advertisement in The Daily Newspapers is an item of news. Every page is carefully read---because the newspaper provides information of the markets of the world---the change in prevailing modes---and the current prices of our daily needs. ALLEGE REVOLVER WAS POINTED AT THURLOW COUPLE BY E. MARTIN

Martin Arrested at Madoc, With Wife Held as Accessory 'After Fact'

CLOTHES AND BILL

Allegation Made That Martin Backed Farmer and Wife Into Room

After an exciting chase by the Provincial Police, Eric Martin and his wife, Hazel Martin, were arrested by Provincial Constable Hill of Madoc, late yesterday afternoon and today both appeared in police court before Magistrate Millet charged with committing common assault by pointing a revolver at Charles Miller and his wife at their home on the fourth concession of Thurlow earlier in the afternoon. As the investigation has not been completed by the Provincial Police a remand for one week was requested in both cases, which was granted by his worship. The husband was sent to the county jail for the interim and the wife was allowed out on her recognizance and will stay with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin have been living at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, for some time and yesterday they decided to move to Vouchers Valley. When the decision was made and Mr. Martin informed Miller of their intention, it is alleged that Miller refused to allow the clothes belonging to Martin and his wife from the house until a certain board bill had been paid. Martin took exception to this procedure, it is alleged, and pulling a gun from his pocket, backed Mr. and Mrs. Miller into a [illegible] room while Mrs. Martin ransacked the clothes in a trunk and brought it down stairs. Under cover of the gun they left the premises of the Millers.

Shortly after they had left, the Provincial Police were notified and Provincial Constable Bert Hanmer hurried to Miller home only to find no trace. Some mention was made of Madoc in the conversation between Martin and Miller and information was sent to Constable Hill at that village, who picked up the two. Constable Hanmer proceeded to Madoc and brought the couple to the police station. It is against the Criminal Code to carry a revolver without a permit and probably an extra charge will be laid.

BRITISH AVIATRIX ON MYSTERY FLIGHT

Mrs. Victor Bruce, noted British aviatrix, left Heston Aerodrome in her single-seater Bluebird aeroplane, on a flight, the destination of which is veiled in secrecy. A report credited her with the intention of flying east across Europe to Persia, India, China and Japan.

HYDRANT OPENED POLICE ON CLUE

Court Action Likely to Tampering With Waterworks

If the person who opened the hydrant at John Street and Victoria Ave., flooding a large area of that district is apprehended by the police a serious penalty will probably follow and the police are bending every effort to find the person or persons responsible. Shortly after midnight a resident on his way home on arriving near the corner saw the water gushing from the hydrant. An instrument was found lying near the hydrant which had been used to open the valve. The police were notified and an investigation made, the instrument used being taken to the police station for evidence. Turning on this hydrant may have caused a serious conflagration had a fire started for the pressure would naturally be lowered. These hydrants are private property and placed about the city for resident's protection and in no way should be opened unless by an official of the Waterworks Department.

JAMES L. WALSH TAKES POST AT PORTLAND, ME

General Foreman at Belleville Shops is Given Transfer

MEANS PROMOTION

Is Well Known Belleville Citizen and Member of Curling Club

Announcement was made yesterday of the transfer of James L. Walsh, General Foreman of the Canadian National Maritime Power Department here to a similar post in Portland, Maine. The change becomes effective immediately and he will leave at an early date to take charge of the shops at Portland. Twenty-nine years of his life have been spent in the service of the old Grand Trunk and the Canadian National Railways, the last seven in Belleville.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh here will regret to learn of their transfer, but they will be pleased to know that the foreman's services here and elsewhere have been recognized in the promotion. He commenced his railway career at Palmerston in Western Ontario, as a "call boy," and constant application to his duties has resulted in his appointment to one of the largest terminals of the Eastern Lines. He was for some time stationed in Richmond, Quebec and later at Lindsay as Locomotive foreman. He was then made General Foreman at Belleville where he has not yet been named by the officials.

While in Belleville he was affiliated with the Belleville Curling Club besides having been an enthusiastic golfer and quoter. He is also a member of the Masonic Lodge in which he took an active part. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh attended St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and both were prominent in the activities, the latter being a member of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Walsh served as an officer of the Canadian National Baseball Club and was a keen follower of all branches of sports. He was popular with those who served under him at the Belleville shops and the best wishes for future success go with him in his new field. Mrs. Walsh will remain in Belleville for a few weeks before taking her departure.

NAVIGATOR DIES

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 30.—CP —Capt. John Taylor, former superintendent of the Dominion Marine depot at Prescott and well known navigator, died suddenly at his home in Prescott today.

Speaks on Value of Education in Battle Against Deadened Interest

Friday evening last the annual rally of the Royal Templars was held in their quarters in the Odd fellows' building, Front.

Though the elements of the equinoctial weather mitigated against a full attendance, nevertheless a number believed the date and by no means was the evening a dry affair either, Desoronto council of Royal Templars journeyed up and assisted in manning some of the officers' chairs for the proceedings. Local select councillor Fred H. Henry presided. After regular business matters were disposed of reports upon several new names for membership in the fraternity insurance privileges and benefits were dwelt upon. Then provincial Field Supt. A. H. Lyle of Hamilton addressed the assembly upon temperance activities urging against deadened interest because of some unfavorable legislation on behalf of prohibition. Lantern views of a travelogue nature were exhibited by Mr. Lyle also those of educational value regarding scientific temperance and instruction for youth

Fraternal addresses were made by Brother Ostrander and Select Councillor Irwin of Deseronto and Sister A H. Lyle of Hamilton, Ont.

Sandwiches, pickles, cakes and tea furnished a fine climax to the affair.

The Royal Templars here are combining again with the local prohibition unions in further public meetings. On Friday evening October 17th in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Rev. Dr. McTavish is to give a travelogue recent committee program discussion in Toronto and Mr. H. W. Ackerman will present the up-to-date aspect of the economics of temperance.

Earl of Birkenhead Dies Prosecutor of Casement

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP) — Frederick Edlin Smith, the first Earl of Birkenhead, statesman, died just before noon today after an extended illness. He was 58 years old.

His noted political life included him as the prosecutor of Sir Roger Casement, the Irish leader, who was hanged after conviction for treason.

Physicians today gave notice of his death. It said: "The Earl of Birkenhead passed peacefully away at quarter past eleven this morning."

FROST PROMISED FOR WEDNESDAY

It is hard to believe that yesterday was warmer than to day, but the pump-house thermometer registered one degree more warmth yesterday than today. Here are the official readings: — Yesterday 58, 48; To-day 57, 42.

Probabilities are for cooler weather with frost to-morrow

CONFERENCE IS READY TO OPEN

Canadians Arrived Today for the Imperial Conference

LONDON, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press Cable)—With the arrival of the Irish delegation, the assembly of the Imperial Conference was completed today save for the absence of the Canadians who reach London this afternoon.

English newspapers commenting on the declarations of Hon. J. H. Thomas yesterday seem to suggest that the Secretary of State for the Dominions had been successful in not imparting any real information. The emigration question, on paper points out, is a matter which will be settled before a settlement can be arrived at.

CANADA HOPEFUL OF IMPERIAL CONFERENCE SAYS BENNETT LANDING

Canadian Delegates Make Study on Voyage of Empire Problems

SELLING OF WHEAT

Anthracite Coal Cited as Instance for Empire Buying

Southampton, England, Sept. 30.CP Cable—In the name of Canadians whom I represent, I desire to express hope and confident belief that the important questions which may come before the conference may be disposed of to the common advantage of all parts of our Empire," said Mr. Bennett.

During the voyage the four delegates from Canada went further in the study of the Empire situation. If Canada has wheat to sell it is felt by the delegation that the Dominion can also make increased purchases within the Empire without prejudice to her own industries. Anthracite coal is cited as a case in point.

Mr. Scantlebury is Stricken in Store

C. H. Scantlebury was stricken in his store on Front street shortly before noon with apoplexy and was rushed to the General Hospital in a serious condition. He has been suffering for the past number of years from heart affliction but friends believed him to be on the mend. The press was informed late this afternoon that he was in a very serious condition and that the family Mr. ScanUebury had all been notified.

DRASTIC CUTS IN GERMANY ANNOUNCED

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 30 CP—Drastic slashing of government expenditures, involving salary cuts for public officials and employees beginning with President Von Hindenburg himself, a halt to the upward march of taxes, and deliberations to hold a conference on the nation's financial future, were the outstanding features of Chancellor Bruening's financial program announced publicly today.

Reference Department at the Public Library is Opened for Use

Open today for the first time, the new reference department at Corby Public Library offers great assistance to those who have to search out information for addresses, papers, debates or who are engaged in other research work. This department is to be found on the second floor, in a quiet secluded room. Thick volumes on all matters line the walls and a long table has been provided at which patrons can work.

In addition to the extensive range of reference books the librarian, Miss White has been making a collection of pamphlets on matters of interest, which, with the numerous government publications to be found on a rack in an outer room, will prove very helpful. The library will endeavour to supply information on any topic requested and answer any questions asked.

TRANSFERRED TO LOCAL BRANCH

James MacGillivray Comes to McIntosh Bros. from Napanee

Mr. James MacGillivray, who for several years has been manager of McIntosh Bros. Napanee branch store, has been transferred to Belleville and he commences his duties here this week. Mr. MacGillivray has been in Napanee for the past eight years. He has always been keenly interested in sports and was one of the sponsors of lacrosse in that town some years ago while he was instrumental in the formation of the horse-shoe pitching club which is now flourishing. Mr. MacGillivray took a prominent part in fraternalism in Napanee and was an active member of Napanee Lodge No. 88, I.O.O.F. He is being succeeded in Napanee by Mr. William McIntosh, who has been associated with the Belleville store for the past five years. The latter will now make his residence in Napanee.

STORY OF MOON PAROLED FOUND TO BE UNTRUE

Warden Ponsford Sets at Rest Rumor as to Liberation

STILL IN PEN

Ontario Intelligencer Learns from Warden Over "Long Distance"

Warden Ponsford of Portsmouth Penitentiary Kingston, flatly refuted rumours circulated here today, that Arthur Moon, convicted here in 1926 and sentenced to life imprisonment in that institution had been given his freedom on parole. The Ontario Intelligencer was informed that Moon had been given his freedom for good behaviour, name to Belleville, where he was killed by his son, the pair proceeding on to Southern California. Warden Ponsford was promptly communicated with, and stated that Moon is still in the prison and is considered well-behaved "I would be the first one to know, about it if the Parole Board took any action on his behalf," the Warden said.

It is known that frequent rppeals have been made for Moon since the trial here, which created unusual excitement and was heard by a crowded court-room. However it is certainly unlikely that he will leave the penitentiary for a good many years as he was given fifeterms to run concurrently for a double shooting which occurred in a local store in August 1925. Moon was well-known and his subsequent arrest and imprisonment were followed by the general public with great interest.

Arm Was Broken in Corner Crash

Walter Soules, 94 Queenston St., St. Catharines, sustained a broken arm in a motor accident, which occurred at the corner of Bleecker Ave., and Bridge street east yesterday afternoon. He was taken to the Belleville Hospital, yesterday where an X-ray was taken and the fracture reduced by a local physician. Cecil Thompson was driving a delivery truck west on Bridge east, when Soules was driving north on Bleecker avenue and by his own admission did not bring his car to stop in time to collide with the rear of the Thompson truck. Soules was thrown forward and his arm hitting the truck, the bone was fractured. The Thompson truck had a bumper arm broken, axle bent while the front of Soules' car was damaged. Constable Peter Thomson investigated the accident and made a report to police headquarters.

BRIEF CASE RECOVERED

Some Line Fences Trouble

Some time yesterday afternoon a brief case was stolen from a car parked in the market square and owned by M. C. Pedlar, 98 Manor Road, East, Toronto. The theft was reported to the police and the brief case was found on Foster avenue early today and returned to the police station.

BEGIN WORK ON FRONT ST WALK

The Public Works Department today began the replacement of the concrete walk on the west side of Front Street south of Bridge street corner. This is one of the jobs which has been in view for some time on account of the uneven surface of the old walk which had warped and heaved, and cavities were left which caught water and made walking uncomfortable in wet weather and dangerous in icy weather.

MARKET WAS SMALL

Today's market was small despite the fine weather. Vegetables maintained the same price as on Saturday. Eggs sold this morning at thirty-five cents the dozen, and, in one case, at thirty-two cents the dozen. Only six or seven producers had taken their stand this morning.

FISHING STILL GOOD

The fishing is a long way off being over in Hasting village judging by the two fine Muskies landed this week by anglers. Norman McKelvie landed one weighing 27 pounds and measuring 50 inches, while Dix Clapper of the Boston Bruins hockey team, got one that tipped the beam at 30 lbs. and measured 47 inches. Both fish put up strenuous fights and are the finest caught here this year. Both fishermen are having their catch mounted.

WELCOME NEW TEACHERS

The members of the Teachers' Federation of the public schools of the city assembled Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. Potter, 276 Charles Street for the purpose of welcoming the new teachers on the different staffs. Miss Nora Teit, president of the Federation, welcomed the teachers and Miss Aull poured tea. Miss Helen Potter proved a most charming hostess. Upon leaving, the new teachers expressed their delight at being able to meet the other teachers and get acquainted under such pleasant circumstances. Belleville has an exchange teacher from Edmonton on Queen Victoria School this year, while Miss Teather is spending the year in Edmonton. The teachers join in wishing these new teachers a pleasant and profitable year among them.

COLLEGIATE TEAMS PLAN DRIVE

Four teams of Collegiate students met today at the Y.M.C.A. to lay plans for the annual membership drive sponsored by that institution. The Senate group met last night and the instructions were divided into two teams captained by Allan Dempsey and Bennie Ritchie.

MUST CONNECT SEWERS

The Board of Health held a regular meeting in the city hall yesterday and after discussion, it was decided that several prosecutions against persons in Belleville who have failed to take the necessary steps for sewer connections will be proceeded with at once. Property owners are required by by-law to have the sewers laids where connections are provided.

Y'S MEN GATHER

The Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting last night heard a splendid report of the International convention at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., from the President Bob Brown of the Belleville Club. Mr. Brown gave a splendid account of the proceedings dealing with the various phases discussed all of which are of vital interest to every member of the club. International President Newton Thompson also spoke briefly. Mr. Thompson was signally honoured in being re-elected to head world Y'dom for a second term. Plans were laid for the participation in play by chorus men here under the auspices of Christ A.Y.P.A. early next month. A chorus lead by musical director Ross Hunter will render several numbers. Norm Edwards reminded the members of the return trip to Peterboro while the newly-elected President "Al" Walters spoke of co-operation in promoting membership within the Y.M.C.A. and the Club. Mr. H. W. Ackerman of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. solicited the support of the club members in the membership and financial drives which will be held shortly. Joe Sheets and Ben Lander rapsices of Christ Church matters pertinent to the Association.

Harry St. John Philby, an Englishman with a distinguished career in the Indian civil service, has embraced Islam and recently visited Mecca.

Marmora Village—R. Collins.

Marmora Township—Wm. J. Douglas.

Carlow Township—Henry Hartwell.

Of the list of Wardens selected, Messrs. A. F. Wood, S. Rose and J. W. Pearce were entitled to have Mr. P.P. attached to their names. The late Mr. Thomas H. Thompson of Madoc Village, all ex-Wardens was for some time M. P. for North Hastings and Dr. A. T. Embury of Bancroft village an ex-Warden is the present M. P. for Hastings-Peterboro.

PROFIT MOTIVE IS DOMINANT

Denunciation of the profit motive and the utter lack of a sense of moral obligation are the two great troubles facing the Christian Church today asserted Rev. Kelly Ross Hall, pastor of John Street United Church who occupied the pulpit at Bridge St. Sunday morning. In a powerful sermon Rev. Hall discussed the characteristics of a Christian. "The important thing is not whether we believe in some creed or that creed or this dogma, or whether you take the Sacrament, he said in answering that vital question. "What is a Christian?" "A Christian is one who is like Christ in conduct and spirit. Those are the things that will make shape and mould your life and mine. The outward appearance is no indication of the inward reality. Christianity is not a matter of getting a personal experience, and a Christian is not one who performs every routine of specific acts and neither one who does the ordinary things of life in an extraordinary way."

"How does one get the spirit of Christ manifest itself," he asked. "The future which stands out in the life of Christ, was His utter unconcern for His own personal safety. There would be more followers of Christ if he did not make such exacting demands for it will countenance no peers or equals in the human heart often we feel that self interest is the one channel to success. The basic argument for Christianity

You need never be ashamed to acknowledge your identity with the Christian Church, said Mr Hall and the chief trouble today lies in the fact that so many people are afraid of the afterglow, basking in the deeds of our forefathers. The lack of that spirit responsible for great achievements, but we must confess that the lust for personal gain, has invaded even our noblest enterprises today. The road to turns inevitably to for personal gain usually meets his waterloo

Rev. Hall observed that the younger element are so engrossed in the gain self-indulgence that they are oblivious to the service that lies before them. "There are no unhappy Christians, and the happiest of all are the most consecrated. Why is it that we are so timid and reluctant in the secret of our hearts, there never was a day when our services were more in demand than they are today? There is a strange, mysterious ferment going on beneath our life which leaves a glorious prospect for co-operation in the Church of God." In conclusion he pleaded with his listeners to accept the torch which has been thrown to them.

Mrs. Stobo, Mrs. McKinnon and Miss Florence Barber were heard in vocal numbers during the services with Prof. Hunt at the organ

Sunday evening Prof. Francis Deane of Albert College was heard in John Street. He dealt briefly with the aftermath of the world war, touching on the generation killed overseas and pointing out that the present young men and women have been buried a torch which they must carry high. Prof. Deane noted that many young brilliant and aspiring artists in various fields met death in Flanders which left a gaping hole for the present generation to fill. He referred particularly to the deaths of Sanderson, that apt young British educationist and Rupert Brooke who was destined to become one of the leading poets of the age. He urged that time be taken in this fast-revolving age for meditation and prayer.

THE WAR VETERANS' MEMORIAL

To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer:

Sir—In view of the fact that Belleville is building two bridges and a filtration plant this year it seems unreasonable to me to expect a war memorial additional. The small admittance at the meeting Friday evening seems to show a disposition of our citizens to balk at this overhead. Why not do as I suggested months ago and dedicate our new bridge to the Veterans and call it

THE SAGONAKKA WAR VETERANS MEMORIAL BRIDGE

The name Belleville Bridge is no name at all, everybody knows it is in Belleville, its beautiful and majestic appearance on the King's Highway insures that. The beautiful Indian Sagonakka is a name fitting for such a beautiful and majestic structure. I suppose when our other bridge is completed it will be the Belleville bridges, neither will them have a name at all. Our Indians have fought and by side with our troops on three occasions when Uncle Sam tried to annex us and certainly deserve recognition in every way possible for saving us from such a calamity. I also were they not the original owners of the soil of the country. When we consider they named our river Sagonakka long long before the white man came we must consider the moniker is the Red man when we renamed it to please Lord Mara. Let us give both Bridges an Indian name some one more might suggest one for our bridge now building. Let a large tablet be placed on either end of the bridge with a list of the names of the gallant men who made the supreme sacrifice for us.

PROFIT MOTIVE IS DOMINANT

Domination of the profit motive and the utter lack of a sense of moral obligation, are the two great troubles facing the Christian Church today, asserted Rev. Rush Hall, minister of John Street United Church who occupied the pulpit at Bridge St. Sunday morning. In a powerful and convincing sermon Rev. Hall discussed the characteristics of a Christian. "The important thing is not whether one belongs to the Church of such a creed or this dogma, or whether you take the Sacrament," he said in answering the question, "What is meant by a Christian?" "A Chfistian is one who is like Christ in conduct and spirit. Those are the things that vitalized Christ and made His life and mine. The outward appearance is no indication of the inward reality. Christianity is not a parade of piety nor personal advertisement, and a Christian is not one who performs certain outward specific acts but rather one who does the ordinary things of life in an extraordinary way."

"How does the spirit of Christ manifest itself," he asked. "That nature which stands out in the life of Christ, was His utter unconcern for His own personal welfare. There would be more followers of Christ if he did not make such exacting demands, he is the embodiment of every ideal in the human heart. Why is it that we are so timid and reluctant to open our hearts, there never was a day when our services were more in demand than they are today? Local Resolutions Will Have Results

John Elliott, Belleville's Delegate to Chambers of Commerce of Empire, Tells Rotary of Meetings, Presents Figures Showing Trade and Commrece Growth — Graphic Chart of Figures and Facts Read at the Luncheon.

John Elliott, popular retired manager of the Standard Bank in Belleville and delegate to the twelfth congress of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire held in the Council Chamber at Guildhall, London, May 26th to 30th, was the special guest speaker at the Rotary luncheon yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Elliott said of the four resolutions that were introduced by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. "These resolutions have appeared in the press before and there is no reason to repeat them but it is due in no small part to Mr. Elliott's hard work that they were put through.

"The passing of these resolutions, in Mr. Elliott's opinion, will have far reaching effects on the Imperial Conference that is meeting in London this week."

Belleville passed four resolutions, Toronto two, and Brantford one, so Mr. Elliott may well be proud of his work overseas and the city takes pride in having such a representative to bring the name of Belleville before the delegates.

Here is a portion of the report on the conference that Mr. Elliott has compiled after considerable work on his part:

British Empire comprises 1-4 of the earth and one quarter of the population of the world.

Radio Fans Corner

Reception last night was perfectly splendid but it will be a few days at least before the majority of the fans get back to the idea of standard time but when they do there will be no more confusion and missing of their favorite programs.

Lowell Thomas replaces our old friend Floyd Gibbons on the Literary Digest programs now, it was announced, in fact the change went into effect last night. Floyd must be a rather busy man, he seems to be in demand everywhere and he has plenty of radio engagements to keep him going for a long time yet.

As the Sharkey-Campolo fight has been postponed indefinitely there will of course be no broadcast on Friday, October 3, but an announcement from O. W. Johnstone to the Globe says that if a broadcast of the fight is scheduled to appear at a later date, further information will be sent to that paper. Too bad we're gyped out of our fight.

The Florsheim Frolic from station WEAF this evening at 8.30 E.S.T., of course, and at 9 the Everready program with the orchestra under the capable direction of Nathaniel Shilkret. Happy Wonder Bakers at 9.30, WEAF with their load of fun and song and at 10.15 the new program of the Lucky Strike orchestra.

If you were listening in to Lucky Strike dance orchestra Saturday night, you'll remember that they announced a new program going on the air on Tuesday night. That means now that we have a Lucky Strike dance program three times a week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Well, it certainly isn't a hard program to listen to.

Duke Ellington and his Cotton Club at 11 from WEAF tonight and at 11.30 Vincent Lopez and his Hotel St. Regis orchestra, more good music. Did you hear that smart program that Capt. Jack Albin and his orchestra put on last night? Without a doubt his orchestra is one of the best I've ever listened to.

Principal Has Faith in Canada

KINGSTON, Sept. 30 — Dr. William Hamilton Fyfe, new Principal of Queen's University, declares himself a believer in the future of Canada and its people. He said:

"Canada is a land of golden opportunity and while it has not yet had the time for development that some other countries have had it presents magnificent opportunities. I believe that it is a great country for young Englishmen to emigrate to and I was partly influenced in making my decision to come here by the thought that my own children would grow up with this young country."

He referred also to Canadian universities, and stated that he believed that they were making as rapid advancement as those in any other country. He was anxious to become acquainted with Canadian life and Queen's life. He wished to make him self a part of them and assist in any way he could toward their advancement. He declared he was anxious to learn Canadian ways and play a part in developing the opportunities which lie before the Canadian people and Canadian universities. Dr. Fyfe remarked that it was not his intention to attempt to force Oxford ways and systems on Queen's University because he was an Oxford graduate. He was anxious to maintain the standards of Queen's and become a part of its life.

The fall of a meteorite from the sky is not an infrequent occurrence, as is evidenced by the fact that a London museum has six hundred specimens.

FITTER ACCIDENTALLY IS KILLED IN SHOP

KINGSTON, Sept. 30.—Late Monday afternoon John Blaney, 78 North Street, was killed in the Canadian Locomotive Works where he had been for years employed as a fitter. An engine had been lifted by a crane and put on blocks. A piece of the crane slipped and a transverse section flew around striking Blaney on the head. He was thrown against another iron section and his head was badly crushed. Blaney was 55 years of age. He leaves a widow and several children.

SKS AID ...M PROVINCE ON NEW BRIDGE

Extra Cost on Bridge to be Made Basis of Appeal

HELP UNEMPLOYMENT.

"That this council petition the Provincial government for assistance in the cost of construction of the new upper bridge over the River Moira and also for assistance in any other public works that may be undertaken by the council with a view to relieving the unemployment situation in the city of Belleville," was a motion introduced by Ald. Woodley and Ald J. D. MacMillan and passed unanimously at, the first regular meeting of the city council last night since adjournment for the holidays was called on June 23rd last. Had the council met regularly through the summer months there would have been five meetings but owing to the construction of the new lower bridge and then the decision to construct the upper bridge, the council held ten special meetings in that time. Last night the council accepted the minutes as read for all the special meetings and went on with the business before the council.

Construction Bylaw

A large amount of concrete sidewalks have been laid during the year and last night the council passed the bylaw to authorize these construction under Local Improvement Act. The sidewalks which were incorporated in the bylaw were Front St. (east side), Bridge Street to the north line of lot 32, Front St. (west side) from Bridge St. to westerly production of Campbell Street, East Bridge St. (north side) from William St. to west line of Lot L, Evans Street (north side) from North Front St. to Grier St., Bronk St. (south side) from James St. to King St., Campbell Street (south side) from Church St. to approximately 30 feet west of west line of Lot 32. Another bylaw to oil certain streets in the city was passed as well as a traffic bylaw changing back from straight to angular parking on Front Street.

Ask for Sewers

Two requests from citizens in the form of petitions for the construction of sanitary sewers with all private drains and gas main connections under the Local Improvement Act was passed. The streets included in these recommendations were on Baldwin St. from St. Charles St. to Lot 26 and also along Grier Street to Elmer St. and along Elmer to Frank to Yeomans Street and southerly along Frank from Purdy to a point 400 feet southerly. Walter Evans also requested by letter that water service at the Lodge at the corner of Hanover Ave. and Queen St. be installed and this matter was referred back to the Waterworks Department for consideration.

Prosperity Week

Belleville will take part in the Canada Prosperity Week, which will be held from October 11th to 18th and Manager George Pothan of the Belle Theatre, requested the council to allow him permission to erect signs on Front Street for advertising the week. His request being granted.

The gas standards on the corner of Church, John and George Streets on Sunday Street will be turned over to the Parks Board by a recommendation introduced by the chairman of gas. Letters were received from the Seagrave Fire Engine Ltd. and, the Bickel Fire Engine Ltd. respecting new equipment for the fire department and without discussion these letters were turned over to the special committee of the Fire Department for consideration.

DIZZINESS

Caused by Blood pressure

Doctor ordered Kruschen

"Five years ago this month I had a serious attack of dizziness, and my medical man ordered me to take Kruschen Salts daily. Evidently I am a stubborn subject, because I use every morning a small teaspoonful, and a half in a glass of hot water, and this acts splendidly and keeps my head right. If I don't have the salts mentioned, I feel odd, stupid, and liable to fall from dizziness. Therefore I can't do without my Kruschen on any account. Some time ago I had some other salts which were cheaper, but they pained me so much that I had to stop them. There is no pain with Kruschen. I have told hundreds of my little wonder-working bottle."—(S. C. Ferguson.)

Dizziness is a symptom of a deeper seated disorder. It is one of Nature's danger signals—her urgent warning of an impure blood-stream which, if not attended to in time, may wreck the entire health with some dangerous, indeed lifelong, disease. The six salts in Kruschen keep the blood-stream pure and vigorous by ensuring the complete elimination of poisonous waste matter from the system every day.

PETERBORO THUG HAD THE GOODS

PETERBORO, Sept. 30 — Foiled in an alleged attempt to burglarize the premises of Charles Brewer, automobile dealer, a man who gave his name as William R. McIntyre, of Chatham, was arrested in the early hours of yesterday morning by Police Constable Leonard Matthews. He had in his possession a burglar's outfit amazing in its completeness, included among which was a bottle of fluid, strongly suspected to be nitro-glycerine, in quantity enough to cause the complete destruction of a large portion of the city should it be inadvertently mishandled.

Hypodermic needles were also included in his ultra-modern cracksman's kit, which prisoner allegedly used, with which to administer dope to himself.

The prisoner, an unkempt looking individual, of medium build, attired in brown pants and vest with a khaki shirt, glowered at Magistrate O. A. Langley, before whom he elected to be summarily tried, on a charge of attempting to enter the premises of Charles Brewer to commit a felony. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded in custody till Monday, October 6th, on the application of the crown.

RADIUM DEPOSIT IN HALIBURTON

Extent Not Known Until Ore Field Has Been Developed

For the past three years the Provincial Government has been aware that a radium ore deposit exists near Wilberforce in Haliburton County; got eight hi've made inspections; an exhaustive report is now at Queen's Park

But it cannot yet be said definitely that there is a possibility it will supply all the needs of Canada and perhaps the British Empire as it was stated in a Toronto afternoon newspaper yesterday afternoon.

"We do not know its extent—no one can tell until it has been completed" said Thomas W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, last night. "We know there is a deposit there—it's been known for years. But I wouldn't go so far as to say that its output would supply so much."

Dr. Gordon E. Richards noted radiologist and head of the X-ray Department of the Toronto General Hospital, said last night that a company has been operating for the last three or four years, and that geologists have made inspections. Both Dr. Richards and Mr. Gibson said that the deposit is of good quality.

Special legislation gives the Government power to expropriate, if so desired but this phase had not yet been considered. Hon. Charles McCrae said last night. Hon. George S. Henry Acting Premier, said the question of radium production in Ontario control would come before the Cabinet for consideration.

Ontario Liberals to be Organized

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—Leadership as well as policies will be thrown to open discussion at a Provincial Liberal convention to take place during the first three weeks of December.

Announcement of the impending gathering of Ontario Liberal leaders and workers was forthcoming last night, following an all-day session of the Management Committee of the Ontario Liberal Association. Liberal members of Federal and Provincial Houses and officers of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association.

Revitalization of Ontario Liberalism into the potent fighting force it has been in former days is hoped for as a result of December's conference. Will Ham E. W. Sinclair, K.C., Ontario Liberal Leader, is in full accord with the proposal).

Impending Provincial by-elections came up for consideration at yesterday's gathering, and it was left to a small committee to decide whether Government candidates are to be opposed in all instances. Some delegates favored allowing acclamations to the new Ferguson Government Cabinet Ministers. Others, however, were for fighting all along the line.

Fully 13,000 publications, including reprints, appeared in England in the last 12 months.

BANDITS LOST AS THEY KIDNAP MOTOR OWNER

Come West and Turn Around at Shannonville Subway

CUTHILL'S STORY

Very tired and all first very unwilling to tell his story, Wilfrid Cuthill, the victim of the sensational hold-up which was narrated in the papers of a few days ago, related in detail his movements from the time he left Napanee on Tuesday night up until his return home in the early hours of Sunday morning. Cuthill is at the home of his father-in-law, Mr. Percy Johnson, about four miles southeast of Napanee.

According to his story, on Tuesday night, Cuthill, who started in the taxi business in Napanee about ten days ago was approached by two men who wished to hire a taxi to drive them to Belleville. This is in contrast to the story which at first appeared in the press, as it was stated that Cuthill was hired to drive the men to Montreal. Cuthill consented using his Marquette car. There were three in the party.

The party proceeded towards Belleville, and when reaching Marysville about seven miles from Napanee, Cuthill was told to take a side road which he did. When about one-quarter of a mile north of Marysville Cuthill was told to stop the car when the two men got out.

Cuthill was ordered out of the car, and told to stick up his hands, one of the men keeping him covered with a gun. At the same time he was ordered by hand over his money with the gun still pointing at him he readily complied. The party then got into the car, and after being approached by the district became lost After travelling for some time the party again came onto the highway at Millford a mile east of Shannonville. Driving east, the party proceeded on, reaching Montreal about 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

During the distance from Millfown to Montreal, Cuthill was in the back seat, one of the men sitting beside him and keeping him covered all the way. On reaching Montreal, the party remained for a short while after which they left for Quebec. They then proceeded to Rimouski reaching that city at 7 o'clock. Wednesday night. Rimouski is about 600 miles from Montreal.

Before leaving Montreal the men ordered the Indian girl out of the car and told her to go to Ottawa, which she did. The two men and Cuthill stayed in the hotel at Rimouski, one of the desperados making sure that Cuthill would not get away. They left Rimouski the next day and returned to Montreal. However before reaching Montreal the two men held up a service station, ordered the proprietor to get into the car, took $85 from him and when about ten miles from the service station, stopped the car and put him out.

The car travelled at such a fast rate that it plunged into a mud bank, and it was with much hard work that the car was freed from its predicament. The party reached Montreal again in the early hours of Friday morning. The men got out and ordered Cuthill to stay in the car.

When the opportunity arrived to escape, Cuthill was not long in doing it and at once communicated with the police of that city. In the meantime the Indian girl got in touch with the Ontario police, and it wasn't long before the police in Napanee were notified. Cuthill is a very tired young man after such a thrilling three days, and he was mighty glad to get home.

The story about being gagged and bound, he contradicts in toto, and the hour when he left Napanee was 8 o'clock and not 1.30 in the morning.

Cuthill will not soon forget the thrilling events.

TRENTON DRIVER BADLY INJURED

NAPANEE, Sept. 30 — One of the worst motor crashes that has occurred in Napanee in months was that of Sunday afternoon last when cars driven by Ernest Pigeon of Napanee, and Mr. G. Sealleta, of Trenton, crashed together at the corner of Thomas and John Streets, Napanee. The accident happened about three o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Sealleta were driving in a Studebaker eight going north on John St. with Mr. Sealleta at the wheel. Mr. Pigeon was driving a new De Soto car, west on Thomas Street. At the intersection the two cars met with terrific force.

The Sealleta car was driven across the front yard and into the verandah of the home occupied by Dr. McLaughlin. The Pigeon car was turned facing north as a result of the crash. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sealleta were very badly injured and besides bruises and cuts suffered internal injuries They were moved to the office of Dr. Hall and Dr. Gleason where they were given medical attention.

The pound sterling now has a purchasing power of 12s. 6d., as compared with July, 1914, according to the official cost of living index number.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Pop was trying to make his new cigar lighter work, and ma sed. Willyum, be there it or not the baby is usually leaning to count.

Meening my sister Gladdies baby, and pop sed. All babies can count. When the grate mathematician Newton was 2 munths old he could count his toes perfeckly from one to 10, he sed.

I mean count out loud, reely count verbally by the power of speech? ma sed. And after all thats the only kind of counting that counts. He reely seems to of picked up the first rudiments of arithmetic, goodness knows how, it must be an inherited instinct, although in that case Im sure he dusent get it from me because I skilt use my fingers in case of need and my bank balants in my checkbook never agrees with the statement from the bank although I should be the last one to complain about that because the bank statement almost always shows more than I expect. I imagine the baby must inherit the talent from his father because Harvey can read the gas and electric meter without the slightest strain, just like the men in uniform from the company Well, I held up one finger and I sed, How many fingers. And I sed the baby dusent re plain as day, Ick, ma sed.

Answered wich? pop sed, and ma sed, Ick, as plain as the nose on your face. I tried him 3 more times with one finger and the answ was Ick each time so then I tried 2 fingers sed ma and the baby replied Ug.

How do you spell it? pop sed, and ma sed, How do I know? So then I tried 2 fingers and the answ was Ow. But when I tried 4 fingers he came back to Ick again, wich proved that anything over 3 was too much of a strane for him. In other words Ick ugow means one 2 three in his little mind, she sed.

Ig ag ackle, pop sed. That means one and a half, a quarter of a peck and eleven acres, he sed.

And he got behind the sporting page and stayed there.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS

By H. B. Martin

IN AN ATTEMPT TO BE TOO UPRIGHT SAME GOLFERS BRING THE CLUB UP TOO QUICKLY, TOO ABRUPTLY.

Avoid Quick Backswing

Golfers who believe that the upright swing is the only one worth while in golf and fear that they are not going to follow out the principles of an upright swing sometimes get into the habit of bringing the club up too quickly, that is lifting it from the ball abruptly without taking it back in a straight line and permitting it to come up naturally.

This insures a sweep of the club that would not be possible if the club is lifted almost straight to the shoulder. As the club goes up it is almost sure to come down and almost in the same path.

Y. Bowling Staff Busy Polishing

The Bowling Alley staff at the "Y" are busy this week cleaning and polishing and making big preparation for their opening day. A great many of the teams playing on the "Y" Alleys last year have signified their intention of again having their team in the league, the schedules open. Provision is made for Ladies teams in the afternoon from lunch time till four o'clock; Travellers League from 4 till 6; Men's, Women's and Mixed Leagues in the evening. Folks desirous of entering a group in any one of these League should get in touch with the "Y" office immediately.

Salvation Army Holds Festival

Rally Day, Sunday, was a great success this year. A very large number of boys and girls and young people rallied up. The march went off splendidly with the Citadel band leading followed by the Scouts, Guards, Sunbeams, Primary Class, older scholars and teachers. The Scouts and Guards carried their respective banners.

The Citadel was almost full for the rally service during the opening exercises. The following program was rendered:

Selection—The Band.
Rally Song—Sunday School.
Recitations—May Townsend.
Guard Song—Life Saving Guards.
Band of Love Pledge—Mary Frost.
Gunbeam Song—The Sunbeams.
Primary Song—Primary Class.
Recitation—Glennis Green.
Scout Song—The Life Saving Scouts
March—Band.

Mrs. J. T. McPherson from Clare Bay, N.S., gave a splendid talk to the Young People. Mrs. McPherson, who before her marriage was Ensign Bennett, was stationed at Belleville in 1906.

Mrs. Ensign Howlett then spoke words of encouragement and thanks for all that had been accomplished in the Young People work.

Mrs. D. Lessels, the Junior Sergt.-Major, had charged of the Young People work and she was very much encouraged and looks forward for a big and good victory for Sunday School and Young People's activities.

Cards May Outplay American Leaguers

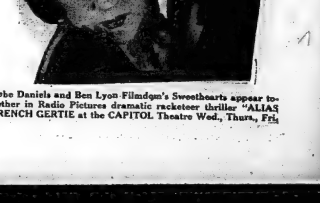
St. Louis Wrecking Crew May Cause no End of Trouble Even to Smart Athletic Pitchers in World's Series.

Aside from the pitcher's box and behind the plate, where Mickey Cochrane still reigns supreme, despite the challenges of Mancuso and Wilson, the Athletics seem destined to be outpitred by their National league rivals, regardless of which team had been their opponent.

The Cards have outhit the Athletics during the season by a considerable margin, and have quite an edge over the American league entry defensively. The Cardinals have hit for a terrific clip of .313 during the season, and while they have no one star to match the great Simmons as an offensive threat, the attack of the Red Birds is more evenly distributed than that of the Athletics. They boast a powerful wrecking crew of three or four hitters who will make it tough for any pitcher, even Grove or Earnshaw. In Frisch, Hafey, Bottomley, and either Fisher or Watkins, Gabby Street has a formidable quartet capable of producing runs at any given moment as they have proved all during their sensational pennant rush during the last month of the season.

In the pitchers' box, Hallahan, Grimes, Johnson and Rhem have pitched consistently good ball, although none of them is a match for the two Mack stars, Grove and Earnshaw. Grimes and Hallahan each have won 15 games and lost 10, while Haines has won 12 and lost 8. Grimes, Haines and Rhem have seen world's series action before, and can be counted upon for cool performance under the tenseness of world's series action.

The field, composed of Bottomley, Frisch, Gelbert and Adams, is far superior to that of the Athletics defensively, and Frisch and Bottomley are hard, consistent batters, who have seen past service in the big classic. Frisch has appeared in five series and hit over .400 in two, and over .300 in two others which does not speak well for the Athletic hurlers in the coming clashes.



The St. Louis entry promises to give the Athletics a real battle, and aside from the battery, more than matches the American league entry in a man to man comparison.

Worms, by the irritation that they cause in the stomach and intestines, deprive infants of the nourishment that they should derive from food, and mal-nutrition is the result. Miller's Worm Powders destroy worms and correct the morbid conditions in the stom ach and bowels that are favorable to worms, so that the full nutriment of the child is assured and development in every way encouraged.

OBITUARY

JOHN W. WANAMAKER, well known and highly respected resident of Rawdon Township for many years, passed away at his home on the first concession on Sunday night. He was born in that township 71 years ago and for many years carried on extensive farming operations. Although never taking an active part in municipal life he was always interested in the affairs of his native township. He was a faithful attendant at the United Church and leaves to mourn his loss a widow, five sons, Charles of Benarlay, Daniel of Osage, Sask., William of Toronto, Harry of Scotia, Calif, Nathan at home and four daughters Mrs. H. J. Fleming and Mrs. R. E. Wills of Toronto, Mrs. A. H. Green, Belleville, Mrs. George Wallace of Rawdon. The funeral will be held this afternoon from his home, interment being made in Stirling cemetery.

EDWARD WALTON EGGLETON

Edward Walton Eggleton, a highly esteemed resident of the Second Concession of Sidney township, passed away yesterday in the Belleville general hospital, after an illness of some length.

The deceased, who was in his sixty fifth year, had resided in Sidney township practically all his life although he was born in Rawdon township. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Eggleton.

The late Mr. Eggleton is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Mary Cassidy, Toronto and Miss Ethel, at home; three sons, Richard of Sidney Township Clayton at home, and Clinton in Pontiac, Michigan.

He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. George Clarke, Sidney Township and two brothers, George A., of Stirling and Thomas A., also of Stirling. He was a member of Centenary United Church and was an elder of that body, as well as a steward. He was an enthusiastic church worker, and he will be missed exceedingly.

MRS. ARANDA SMITH

All that was mortal of the late Mrs. Amanda Smith was laid to rest in the Belleville cemetery on Monday afternoon. The large number of floral tributes and the number that attended the funeral were witnesses of the esteem in which Mrs. Smith had been held. Services were conducted by the Rev. R. H. Bell, assisted by the Rev. J. B. McMullen.

The bearers were five sons and one brother. These included, Earl, Percy, Croft, Roe and Don, the five sons and Sperry Hadett the brother.

FANNY C. DARRAH

Marmora, Sept. 30—After a long and lingering illness, Fanny Catherine, widow of John Darrah, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Henry Derry, shortly before noon on Saturday, at the age of seventy-seven years and nine month. Deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moffatt of Marmora township, and was highly respected for her Christian character and friendly disposition. She is survived by her two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Derry of Marmora township and Mrs. Millen Hazzard of Moira, and by one brother, Mr. Samuel Moffatt of Marmora. Her husband predeceased her a year and a half ago. The funeral took place on Monday from her late residence to Zion church, where services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Lindsay of the Standard Church, Glenmore. Interment was made in Zion cemetery.

He who has neither friend nor enemy is without talents, powers, or energy.

Boxers to Battle on Legion Card

Many of the out-of-town boxers who will take part in the boxing tournament sponsored by the Canadian Legion tonight at the Armouries have arrived in the city and are ready for the bell. The card that will be presenting is one of the best that the Legion have ever offered with the Hastings County 132 pound championship at stake. Jimmy Fisher, of Hamilton, runner up at the Olympic trials, will be pitted against Jack Parks, one of the best of local boys and this should be a rare setto. Bill Mitchell will meet Herman Miller, Belleville, while Arthur Angel and Benny Powell, two local boys, will settle their differences in the squared arena. Parry, Langman and the Semark brothers will compete for the Hastings county championship. The Legion officials are giving the sport fans something worth while and the money derived is used to help needy ones during the winter months.

KILLED IN NIGGER VIEW

SCRANTON, Penn., Sept. 30.—CP—Three men were killed and four injured in gas explosion in Pittston Coal mine. The blast occurred in what is known as the Nigger Vein. It is not expected that the four injured who have been transferred to the hospital will recover.

Prominent Stylist to be in Belleville

Madame Hae Miller, prominent fashion stylist and member of the Canadian Department Stores staff, who will give her sparkling and refreshing style talk and comments during the fashion show which will take place in the Canadian Department Stores at 2.00 and 8.00 p.m. Friday. Madame Miller has just returned from Hollywood where she was a keen observer of movieland style developments. She is also intimately informed on Paris and New York trends and her talk at all times is very informative.

SONIA

By Vida Hurst

Presently came steps, quick and firm and paused his desk with only a formal She bent lower over her figures. Then when he had stopped she threw back her head and saw Walter Henderson. He received the full benefit of the tender, lovelit message in her eyes.

"You look like a million dollars this morning, Sonia."

She smiled, for she really liked this man.

"I feel like a couple of million."

"Any particular reason?"

He lowered his voice.

"Will you have dinner with me again tomorrow night?"

Her eyes narrowed to conceal her precious secret.

"I'm so sorry, but I have an engagement."

At that moment Crane came bounding up the stairs. At sight of Walter Henderson his face reddened. Before Sonia could smile or include him in the conversation he turned to Maxine, inquired about an account and hurried away.

"The next night, then?" persisted Henderson.

"Oh, no," snapped Sonia, angry with the innocent cause of her lover's disappearance.

Then to the hurt look in his eyes she replied "I have to stay home every night this week and sew."

"Oh, that's it. For a moment I thought you were angry."

She had herself in hand now.

"Certainly not, Mr. Henderson. I enjoyed our evening together immensely. Perhaps I can go another time."

As the hours passed her anger with Henderson changed into resentment against Crane. Why should he misunderstand another's man's speaking to her? But her heart pleaded for him. Perhaps Henderson's demeanor had been a shade too interested. his low voice the least bit too solicitous. By noon her resentment was only pain. But she went to lunch with Maxine

"Well, I shan't tell you. I'm no sentimental young person, spilling all her little secrets to an amused big man."

"What a nasty temper you have, Sonia."

"Granted."

The tone was exactly his own. He laughed.

"What about all those ideas of freedom and so on that you were telling me about before?"

"I'm still in favor of them."

"You believe in living your life your own way?"

"I certainly do."

He put his arm about her.

"Don't pull away from me. Am I absolutely so repulsive to you?"

"You aren't repulsive to me at all." She wriggled away from him. "I just don't want you to."

"But why not? You don't object for any moral reason?"

"No."

"And you admit you like me?"

"I like you awfully well."

"Then why won't you let me put my arm around you?"

How could she explain to him that after Crane's arms any other embrace was distasteful to her. Impatient with the futility of trying to make herself clear to him, she rose and tossed her cigarette into the fire. He seized her and drew her down again.

"Sonia, it's because you're a good little girl, that's why."

Sonia was annoyed.

"It is not. If I wanted you to, I'd let you kiss me in a minute."

"Then I shall kiss you right now."

"No. Please!"

He released her, slowly.

"It beats me how a really experienced girl will profess her innocence and bab'es like you will strut around boasting your vaunted knowledge."

"I don't," denied Sonia, perched on the arm of a chair across the room, "boast about anything".

"Oh, yes, you do!" His voice was tonsured with bitterness. "You told me how every one in Muncie thought you were bad. You admit that you like me, but not so much as a kiss do I get in proof. If you think you're going to make a fool out of me you're mistaken. I'm not that kind, Sonia."

"I think you're horrid," Sonia said, reproachfully. "I haven't tried to lead you on or pretend anything. I merely accepted your invitation to dance as it was given to me. I didn't know there were hidden clauses in the contract.

"There were hidden promises in your eyes."

"That's not true," she flared. "If you feel that way about it, I certainly will not go out with you again. And you were one man I really respected."

"An old line, my dear. Your game is deeper than I thought. But I'm through."

A really puzzled Sonia sat by a fire when he had gone.

When Maxine returned at midnight she found Sonia on the floor in front of the fireplace.

"What's wrong, old thing?"

"Walter Henderson was just here."

"Honestly?"

"Yes. He's furious with me, Maxine; and so far as I can see I haven't done a thing. Men are queer aren't they?"

"I'll say they are," her friend agreed discarding hat and coat, and dropping down beside Sonia.

"I suppose he tried to make love, to you and you wouldn't let him?"

"Something like that."

"Well, why didn't you?"

Sonia's eyes opened in surprise.

"I mean it, kiddie. You aren't gunning for a husband, I take it."

"I should say not. No marriage in mine."

"Sonia! When the mere thought of Franklin Crane across the breakfast table set pulses flying!"

Maxine continued:

"That's certainly what you've given me to understand. What's the objection then to a man like Walter Henderson?"

"No objection. I just don't happen to love him."

Maxine gave a hard little laugh.

"Love?" There isn't such a thing."

Sonia was fearing for a moment, feeling to convict herself if she rin to defend Cupid, Then she said, slyly, "What about Mac?"

"That's not love," Maxine cried hotly. "It's hell—and take it from me, I know."

I still reserve the right," Sonia challenged, with something of her old insolence, 'to do my loving where I please."

"But why not use your head before it's too late? It's all the same in the long run. But I know what's the matter with you, Sonia. You're crazy about Franklin Crane."

"I am not."

"Yes you are .But I don't expect you to admit it. You're a fool if you take him on at the expense of a man like Walter Henderson."

"Supposing you were right!" cried Sonia. 'Franklin Crane is as wealthy as Walter, if it were only a question of finances."

Maxine's blue eyes were dark with pity.

"Poor babe in the woods. Is that your game? Think again if it is, for Franklin has nothing of his own. Every cent of the money belongs to his mother."

"Well?"

"Well a fat lot of good that would do you. Mama Crane keeps her eye on Franklin. And don't you ever forget it. No pretty pennies unless he minds his mama. But it's different with Walter. No strings tied to him, anywhere. And aside from that"—emphatically, "he's a gentleman!"

"You seem to know," Sonia thrust, viciously.

"You're right I do. I had my first affair with Walter Henderson. Eight years ago when I was just 19 years old. He got me my position in the Thomas Real Estate company in Muncie."

Sonia gasped but Maxine's face was as unemotional as if she were discussing and old novel.

"He was wonderful to me while it lasted. And although I was too green to understand a lot of things, I had a lot of affection for him. Of course, it's all over now. No back kick either. So you needn't worry."

Walter's advice not to live with Maxine returned to the astonished Sonia.

"Of course he wouldn't want me to live with her," she thought, understanding what he had meant now.

"Your confession is wasted on me, she said to Maxine. "I don't want the warmed-over affection of any man."

Don't be a fool," Maxine cried sharply. "I'm not confessing anything. I suppose you think you're the first one with Franklin Crane."

"You leave him out of it!" Sonia cried.

"It's nothing to me what you do. I was telling you for your own good."

"You sound like Bertie. It's funny how everybody has to warn me against Franklin for my own good."

"Well, he's tricky," declared Maxine, positively. "And if you really let yourself care about him, you'll be sorry to your dying day . . . ."

Wasted! Sonia forgot all of it the moment he approached her desk, whispering, teasingly, "Did you miss me yesterday?"

"Not in the least." But she was radiant.

"Well, any time I stand around and wait until Walter Henderson gets through flirting with you . . . ."

"He was flirting. "Can't a man speak to me without your getting jealous?"

"Who's jealous? Not me, sweet thing. I'm going to see you to-night."

All through the autumn Sonia was dazzled by the glamour of her first romance. Life did not exist save as it was related to Franklin. She shopped with him in her mind, read stories with him as the gallant hero and meditated the apartment for the moment he would arrive. Even at work or lunch ing with the girls, he sat beside her, silently shaping her opinions, coloring her desires. And in all that time his appearance at the office was as regular as her own.

SMELLS

Why is it that the poets tell
Of little of the scents of smell?
These are the odors I love well:

The smell of coffee, freshly ground;
Or rich plum pudding, fully crowned;
Or onions fried and deeply browned.

The fragrance of a funny pipe;
The smell of saffron, newly ripe;
And spiders' ink on leaden type.

Woods or shubbish in September,
Breathe most sweet; and I remember
Many a smoky camp-fire ember.

Camphor, turpentine, and tea,
And balsam of a Christmas tree,
These are whiffs of grampaye:
A ship smells best of all to me.

Christopher Morley.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Small curls, ringlets, puffs and other hirsute do-dads should be reserved for the boat house and not for the windows of the fashionable mirrored palaces. But they are not utilitarian. They don't survive any hot bath, a necessary part of the daily health-and-beauty ritual, knocks them seven ways for Sunday. The coiffure that endures through a single sweaty evening, and then does a complete flop cannot be said to be a sound investment. Enough fashionable hairdos result in poor hair. Hair must have lustre, be beautifully clean, neatly arranged—that's the hirsute story.

Time to get out brown knees in shape again after the Summer of exposure to sunlight and wind on bathing suits. Anoint with pomade—for from knee to ankles. Place the leg straight out from the hip, supported by chair. Massage with fashioned palms rending one from the ankle upward, the other from the knee down; they will pass like a pair of elevators. Rub the knee with a rotary motion. This treatment discourages gooseflesh, t'ny red elevations that are disfiguring.

Don't forget that worry feeds on itself. There are women who love to worry; they revel in it as a drunkard revels in liquor. And when they get other people worried and miserable, the cup of joy is overflowing. Worry is acid; if you want to be a lemon, all you have to do is to fret and whine. Perfect formula.

Corns are caused by pressure. Invalids who stay in bed any great length of time don't have corns. Once again, we urge the frail set to buy shoes sufficient by large to rest well proportioned to afford comfort and ease, to give the toes a chance to stay often. Soft corns must be kept dry with cotton pads.

Before massaging the scalp, dip the hands in cold water, or rub the finger tips over a piece of ice. The cold application will help excite the blood streams, upon which each individual hair lives and thrives and has its being.

Elaine And Her Ideas From Paris

FASHIONABLY SPEAKING
BY LUCILLE

DEAR READERS:

Gloves and hosiery play an important part in the success of any costume but this year when the simple lines of frocks need accentuation in the accessories that go with it, great care must be exercised in the selection of these two items. Gloves and hosiery should match if you would be smart. And hosiery has gone dull. This does not mean that you must wear your hose inside out as most of us have been doing for the past couple of seasons, for Fashion has proved very favorable to the dull finished ones. It was rather hard on one to remember to put stockings on inside out, so that the shiny side would be hidden. It was especially trying when people who were not "in the know" would draw you aside to whisper "Did you know your stockings are on inside out?" and look blankly at you when you murmured that that was the way you wore them. That is all over now. If you wish dull stockings you just have to specify that at the hosiery counter.

Gloves and hosiery have decided to be darker this season and they must match. The black glove and sheer gunmetal hose will replace the lighter tones worn with the black and white or all black costume. And black gloves will be as correctly formal as the white gloves.

Gloves will be longer and the flaring or crushed cuff will fit snugly over the dress and coat sleeve of suits or knitted ensembles. Black will lead in gloves for that will be the favored shade for coats especially among the younger set But it will not be the only colour for brown is a close second and there are many lovely tints in this shade both for gloves and hosiery. Rich dark browns are uppermost in the Fashions this moment. Green gloves, in kid, with the pipe and spruce shades leading are being introduced in style centres to match the green of the pretty new frocks.

Suede will vie with kid gloves for every occasion and the smart woman will choose them carefully to match her costume. Tailored gloves, with little trimming, are featured in the styles for fall.

Choose carefully your gloves and hosiery for in their correct selection depends much of the success of your winter costume.

Advice to Lovelorn

TOO PROUD TO SPEAK

DEAR MISS FAIRPAX:

Two years ago I fell in love with a boy but had the silly idea that I mustn't wear my heart on my sleeve. I overdid it and he thought I did not care for him and soon after he went away to another state. After a long absence he has just returned and I care just as much as ever.

I met him at a dance but pretended not to see him. I did that all evening and I know it was the girl's place to speak first. As the result I got a cury "stellar" and that was all. What can I do to win him back?

M.

Answer:

Why all girls persist in doing such things as you describe. Caring so much for a man that you have to treat him badly, forget your manners and be absolutely rude. Write him a letter and ask him to come to see you and drop all your coy, uncertain, hard-to-place-methods.

HOW CAN SHE GET HIS RING BACK

DEAR MISS FAIRPAX:

I went with a young man for some time, during which he gave me his class ring. We have not gone together for two months, but I still think a lot of him. I don't know what caused the break in our friendship, unless it was because I am too serious. We speak when we meet, but I'm afraid we shall never go together again. How can I win him back, or if that's impossible, how can I get back his ring?

Renee.

Answer:

Why do you want to get back the boy's ring when the friendship is evidently at an end? I can't imagine anything more disturbing than to have such a thing in one's possession.

The Hostess Suggests

BLACK AND WHITE ICING

One egg white, one cup of confectioners' sugar, half a teaspoon of vanilla. Beat egg white, add sugar gradually and vanilla. Beat till light, adding more sugar if necessary. Spread on the cake when cool and while it is setting melt one square of chocolate and spread over white icing. Allow to set before cutting.

Grapefruit and Cantaloupe Cocktail

Half cup sugar, 1 tin grapefruit, 1 cantaloupe, 1-3 lemon, mint, red cherries. Drain grapefruit. Cut into small pieces scoop out balls of cantaloupe. Arrange in sherbet glasses.

To grapefruit juice add sugar, lemon juice and crushed mint leaves. Chill. Remove leaves, pour over fruit. Garnish with red cherries and mint leaves.

Why and How Laundries are Improving

BY HANNAH WING

Although you might not believe it, the laundry has gone to college. The scientific of laundry operations has spent years and much over a million dollars in money to bring about an institution in which better methods, better service and better results can be achieved.

The present day laundry bundles bring a medley of clothes requiring special attention. There will be found the overalls of the painter, the golf trousers of the business man, cotton stockings and hose of chiffon silk, blue work shirts and dress shirts, cotton union suits and those of the finest silk and wool, filet lace, silks, rayon and special fibres in wondrous combination of textiles, fibres and colors.

Follow the family wash through the modern laundry processes now begins at the checking. What care, what a quick eye, what "check and double check" means are taken to insure identification.

Then the sorting. Due to the research work on textiles and dyes, clothes are almost scientifically sorted as to color and fabrics. Silks, woolens, rayons, cottons, colors; once identified they are sent to the process best suited to them.

Then into a light soaking suds, a heavy washing suds, a soapy rinse—lots of good soap, lots of soft water. And you who have hard water know given slightly hard water know what it means to wash in rain soft water, A whole plant is necessary for softening the water for just one up-to-date laundry. No grey clothes thrive. The soap is measured, the temperature of the water told by thermometers on the washers.

On and on it goes—nine changes of water before it's through. The water is sterilized and the clothes are ready for the type of service the owner has selected and the price is based on the types of service desired. The lowest priced is, of course, for clothes just washed and returned almost dry, ready for ironing. The next is the flat work ironed and the rest damp dried. For a slight extra charge underwear and much that doesn't need ironing is semi-dried dry, which means that it has been hung and pulled into shape and gentle air currents have finished it up. The next is wet wash, complete dry, with the starch pieces starched to be sprinkled for ironing. The next is the complete service—fluffy dried, table linen, children's clothing, dress shirts, everything returned, ironed, mended, if need be, ready for use.

As an example of how laundry service is improving, curtains may well be taken as an example. They are now measured before they are washed, so that the correct measurements may be given to the operator who does them. The result is that lately laundered curtains may be put back at the windows from which they came and hang correctly and at the right length. Another small but important thing is the fastening of the draw strings in pajamas so they they do not pull out or get lost.

The laundries which are living up to these standards are doing such work and giving such good service at a fair price that it pays to find a good one and patronize it.

WEDDINGS

DEVOLIN—BURRIS

The parsonage at Queenboro was the scene of a quiet wedding at ten-thirty on the morning of September; the 24th, when Rev. V. P. Everson united in marriage Ella Mary, third daughter of Mr. James Burris of Madoc, and Robert James, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Devolin, also of Madoc.

The bride who wore a navy ensemble was attended by her sister Miss Mabel Burris and Miss Alice Devolin sister of the bridegroom, while Mr. Ernest Devolin, the bridegroom's brother assisted him.

After leaving the parsonage they went to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Hammond of Tyrrell where dinner was served. Later the happy couple left for Hamilton and Niagara Falls, New York.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Years Between

Jasper B. Sinclair

There are two places, it is said, where one can meet everyone of importance in the world. One is at Shepherd's in 93rd Cairo; the other is in front of any one of those sidewalk cafes along the Rue de la Paix in Paris.

It was for this reason that Ken Woodring sat at one of those rickety tables facing one of the busiest Parisian boulevards. Not that he was desirous of meeting everyone of importance. There was just one person she was inestimably of the greatest importance.

He remembered having sat there years before, when Paris was not so gay. The tables and chairs seemingly not changed at all, nor even the waiters that moved in and out among them. He had been in Kuwait at that time. Back from the front on a three-day pass, when he had met her.

She had seemed then, to Ken freed from the world of men and madness, like a breath of perfume, fragrant and full of restless appeal, she had appeared unconscious, ingenuous, to him.

"Just call me Yvonne," she said in response to his demand to know her name.

They had three glorious days, too swift in their passing. If fortune only he had bade her good-night, no explanations.

"Won't you tell me your address so that I may write you?" he pleaded. "I want to know where you live Yvonne and what you are doing. I'm gone, and I'll write you while I'm fighting, and when you write me. I'll tell you when the war's over I'll take you back to the States with me."

She had only shrugged at his seriousness then. "Foolish boy! Do not Americans say 'Today you are all the same. Tomorrow you will forget me.' Is it not so, Yvonne?"

"Never, Yvonne," he had protested with his arm around her. "I'll never forget you. Won't you tell me?"

She shook her head. "Not now. Maybe afterwards."

"But, Yvonne, why afterwards?" he demanded. "I mean how am I to find you afterwards?"

She shrugged. "If you want to, you will always here. I am always here."

And the spread of her slim hands indicated the whole of Paris, perhaps France.

"Ah, but Yvonne, that is all so indefinite!"

"Indefinite?" she repeated. "But it is final. If you want to see me again you can meet me here. Me also you will find at the same time, something somewhat."

"But, Yvonne, I want to look at me in the meantime. Can't you give me this address?"

And she had shaken her head. A moment of hesitation, then a shrug of resignation, a quick scribbling on a piece of paper which she tore from a small notebook, and then she was gone.

Ken looked at the address. It was a cheap hotel in the Latin Quarter. He had called there, but she had left no forwarding address. Then the war had claimed him, and he had been shipped home by way of Antwerp.

Now, after so many years, he was back on the Rue de la Paix, hoping against hope for a glimpse of Yvonne. He had made money in the interesting years by dint of hard work and the fortunate, or unfortunate, rise of a rich uncle.

Now, so many days had he haunted the boulevard that Parisians had ceased to accept him as one of the curiosities.

There were so many, they said to themselves with unfeeling shrewdness, like him who haunted the Montmartre by night and the Rue de la Paix by day. Only he seemed to take his place at one of the little tables outside than the rest.

But Ken paid little heed to those who stared at him with unsatisfied curiosity. They after day he searched the faces of all who passed his table with unending persistence, praying that among them he might again see his Yvonne.

Spring, that most delightful of all seasons in Paris, passed, and the heat of summer also. October winds sent a chilling rustle along the boulevard warning of the winter to come. But still Ken sat on, drawing his coat tighter about him with the increasing tang.

On a day near the end of October he was conscious of the stares of one who seemed to display more than a passing interest in him. But to Ken she was just one of the throng—brown and red-cheeked.

"Looks like a farmer's wife," he muttered, glancing hastily at her. An impression which was belied by her clothes and the three children, a boy and two girls, who tagged along behind her.

Then she was gone, her steps lagging a little it seemed. The next day she was there again, pausing to gaze at Ken with an intentness which was disturbing.

On the third day her persistence aroused Ken's curiosity, and he returned her stares, meeting her eyes with an incurious glance. Something suddenly plucked at his heart.

"It couldn't" he thought, "be Yvonne! Not Yvonne who was so slim and graceful, tucked into this farmer's wench!"

And yet there was that in her eyes which proclaimed that she must be Yvonne. When she caught the glint of startled recognition in his eyes and the stiffening of his body, she flushed and hurried past.

When she had gone he pulled out the faded snapshot that he still cherished. For a moment he gazed at the laughing face of the girl he had known for those three days, the deep lahgourous eyes, a pair of lips slightly parted over two rows of even teeth and the finely chiseled chin.

"Yes, it was Yvonne!" It could be none other. The resemblance was ludicrous now, but still it was there.

All the illusion and the glamor of those early days and the years between went out of his soul like the snuffing of a candle. In their stead there was a sense of relief; relief of escape from something which he could not quite fashion.

His lips parted in a grim smile, tinged with irony, but free of regret. He took the photograph in both hands, as though to tear it apart. Then, still smiling he thrust it back into his inside pocket instead.

"It's the only memory of the old Yvonne that's left," he whispered soft ly to himself.

Then he rose to his feet, and without a backward glance at the little table, walked slowly, down the Rue de la Paix.

PHYSICIAN GAVE ALL-BRAN CREDIT

Effective relief given by a simple remedy

"A few months ago I had the misfortune to be knocked down by an automobile, my leg was broken and my body badly bruised. I was a citizen of Toronto, Canada. "Having lived a very active life before, when forced to lie still for weeks I was made to appreciate Prune and Bran. I ordered a package, and I could not imagine myself without Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. The next time you see me you're almost as strong as an ox. I'm a walking advertisement for ALL-BRAN. I am a perfect condition." That is what a man over 60 years of age, my physician tells me, that I have made the discovery of a 75-year-old man."

Many people who suffer from constipation during the enforced inactivity following illness, or while engaged in sedentary work and study, would find rapid and permanent relief in the regular use of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to conquer constipation. It has not less than two tablespoonfuls every morning and that amount at every meal. If the case is chronic, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delicious with honey and milk or cream. Sold at all grocers.

Made in London, Canada.

Diphtheria Left Her With Very Weak Kidneys

New Brunswick Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills with Great Success

Mrs. Bernard McKinley was hardly able to walk

Alma, N.B., Sept. 29—(Special) — "About twenty years ago I had an attack of diphtheria" writes Mrs. B. McKinley, a well known resident of this place. "When I got up my kidneys were so bad I could hardly walk. I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got two boxes and I had hardly finished the first box before I was almost well, but I took the other box. I am the mother of a large family and never have a pain in my kidneys now.

Dodd's Kidney Pills strike right at the seat of the trouble, the kidneys. They are no cure-all, just simply and purely a kidney remedy. They relieve the work of the heart by putting the kidneys in shape to strain all the impurities out of the blood. Pure blood carried to all parts of the body means new health all over the body.

FESTIVAL SERVICES

Mankind requires to have days set apart for certain anniversaries. The dramatic effect of the services and programs is very powerful. For instance at the close of the season of summer and on the advent of autumn it is an impressive sight for the people to enter the place of worship and find the material and natural evidences of Providence occupying a place in the church. Man is prone to forget his dependence upon God's bounty, to forget that the fruits, the vegetables, the grain, and the other crops are from the hand of the Supreme Being working behind all nature. The setting apart of one day for the bringing of the first fruits cannot fail to create a feeling that labor is a blessing when it brings such riches for man's benefit. The festival is an occasion when man woman and child can feel rejoiced that another winter may be met without fear of hunger.

In the presence of this sustenance it seems a sad commentary on human progress that bounteous crops often spell disaster to markets and that many should go hungry in other parts of the world. Some day probably this unequal and unfair condition may not be as glaring as it is in this year of plenty of wheat and most grains. Markets and marketting are man's attempt freighted often with mishaps.

HILL 60

Hill 60 is to be protected by the Imperial War Graves Commission, fifteen years after the prodigies of courage were performed in which one European generation sank out of sight in death. The New York Times comments upon the battle:

"The mound, once nearly 200 feet high, was presented to the British nation by a citizen. Now, fifteen years after the prodigies of courage shown there by the contending armies, it is to be protected by the Imperial War Graves Commission. No parcel of land in the world is richer with the glory of the Empire. If there is anywhere "some corner of a foreign field that is forever England," as Rupert Brooke said, it is this lump of earth in which the bones of thousands of men of the North Sea strain lie moldering.

"The area of the hill so savagely disputed by the contending armies was only about 250 yards. On April 17, 1915, after bloody hand-to-hand fighting, the German gave ground and the British took the crest. Anxiously the Cabinet in London awaited the tidings, for, as the strategy of battle often determines, Hill 60 was one of those hand-spots, unimportant in peace, which in war mean more than a walled town. As British officers sat in their dugout behind the line the suffocating quality came into the air; candles were put out; it was the first experiment with poison gas. For five days Germans and British bayoneted each other and fired field guns at pistol range, while from the rear the heavy artillery dropped great shells. On April 21 there was a slackening of the German attack, and Hill 60, twice lost and thrice taken by the British forces, remained in their possession.

"After this experience both sides really knew what they were in for. Talk in Berlin and in London about ending things quickly died away. The chemical first cousins on either side of the North Sea who had not much chance to examine each other's fighting quality since Napoleon boarded the Bellerophon, were to go on for three and a half years more. Before it was finished a generation had been cheated of its prime, and every nation had tales to tell of glory and of fortitude. But no other engagement of the war provided more of the material for those tales than that on the little heap of earth which was formed by cutting the Ypres-Lille railway."

WATCH YOURSELF GO BY!

Just stand aside and watch yourself go by;
Think of yourself as "he" instead of "I."
Pick flaws; find fault; forget the man is you,
And strive to make your estimate ring true.
The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink,
Love's chain grows stronger by one mighty link.
When you with "he" as substitute for "I"
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.—Anon.

RAINMAKERS have gone out of fashion, apparently, now rain preventers are in order. Belmont Park race track on Long Island during the recent meet there has been protected from rain at a cost of $1,000 per day, with an extra $1,500 on Saturday. The hard-headed millionaire sponsors of this track actually have been paying this money to one who calls himself Dr. G. A. I. M. Sykes, who claims that he can "push dem clouds away" at will. Sykes has some apparatus resembling a radio receiving set and certainly sold himself to the superstitious racing magnates. The September was the driest month ever did not hurt his business any. Dr. Sykes is a bit of a character as one can well believe. He says that the world is flat "with the North Pole as its centre and the so-called South Pole merely a frontier point on a plane to infinity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, pioneer of chain newspaper, and possessing the largest string of newspapers held under one management, in the world, went on the air Sunday night and talked about his expulsion from France. Hitherto his references to this incident have been jocular and his attitude seemed to be that the French government had injured itself more than it did him. The laugh was rather on the French government for requesting such a noted public man to leave the country. In his broadcast, however, Hearst took an injured tone and seemed peeved that someone at Washington had not made a cause celebre of his expulsion. If Theodore Roosevelt or Grover Cleveland had been alive, said Mr. Hearst, France would have learned very quickly that it isn't safe to tamper with the inviolibility of the American passport and so on. Mr. Heart's expulsion from France was the result of an incident some years ago when secret official papers pertaining to a proposed treaty between France and England were secured and published in Mr. Hearst's newspapers. Mr. Hearst contends that France had no right considering any secret treaty which did not take in her ally the United States of America, so he was justified in publishing the papers—and in any event it was for France's own good, and secret diplomacy was not good for international digestion, and so forth. That the diplomats of the old world should come to Mr. Heart's newspapers for instructions, advice and counsel is something else again, maybe.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Robert Lee

Q.—Is it proper when stirring tea or coffe to stir with a determined air, and for some length of time?

A.—No; one or two quick stirs will sweeten it.

Q.—What should a bride give her attendants as a memento of the occasion?

A.—A bracelet, a charm, or a dainty pin.

Q.—When one is unable to accept a formal reception invitation and does not send in his card to arrive on the day of the reception, what does it indicate?

A.—Ignorance of social laws, or an intended discourtesy to the hostess.

This FUEL
—is better
—is cheaper
AND IT'S ALL Canadian

THIS YEAR particularly, Canadians are making a point of buying Canadian-made goods when these are equal in quality to the imported.

This is one of the reasons for the greatly increased sales of Hamilton By-Product Coke.

By using this high-grade coke, you eliminate the necessity of purchasing more costly and less satisfactory imported fuel.

Those who have used this perfected coke prefer it, not only to other brands of coke, but also to other types of furnace fuel.

FIVE GOOD REASONS

1. DUSTLESS—a cleaner cellar.
2. CLEAN—no smoke or soot to carry out.
3. CONVENIENT—fewer ashes to carry on the shovel.
4. LIGHTNESS—easier to carry on the shovel.
5. ADAPTABILITY—a quicker and more intense heat—simpler to keep a low fire.

And to everyone's delight, not only does coke provide these extra advantages, but it does it at a great reduced cost.

The experience of thousands is that, using Hamilton By-Product Coke, costs are reduced by one-third.

Why not try a ton of this new fuel—and keep your money in Canada.

WISER TO SPEND MONEY IN CANADA
Daily Press Urges Support for "Buy Canadian Goods" Campaign
If a Victory Loan Campaign could be put over in Canada, a successful Buy Canadian Goods campaign can be put over. The same urge to success exists, the same forces necessary for success lie latent among our people. All that is needed for a wholehearted response is a proper rousing. To those who understand modern business it is very clear that four million dollars worth of American advertising circulating in Canada is one reason why Canadians last year spent in United States 900 million dollars of their money AND DOLLARS MEANT AND EVERY ONE THOUSAND MILLION MEANT ANOTHER CANADIAN PUT OUT OF A JOB. —Editorial

New Sydney Bridge Spans Nears Finish

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 29—The two spans of the Sydney Harbor Bridge will be joined together in a few weeks, thus bringing nearer completion the largest arch bridge in the world, which was started in 1924.

The bridge will have a span of 1,650 feet, with "head-room" of 170 feet above the water.

British designed and constructed throughout, all the steel used in fashioning the great span has been imported from England. Ralph Freeman, the designer, who also made the plans for the famous bridge over the Zambesi River, is leaving London for Sydney shortly to superintend the joining of the two spans.

The contract for the material and erection of the bridge was put up for world competition. Particular attention has been paid to the aesthetic features, as it was realized that a structure of such magnitude across the entrance of one of the finest harbors in the world must be attractive in its outlines and dimensions.

The total length of the arch and approach spans will be 3,700 feet, while the deck will have a total width of 160 feet. The bridge will carry four railway tracks as well as a sixty-foot roadway and two footways.
